It was at this juncture that the trust lawyers interposed with their admission of the situation which Mr. Hadley was attempting to prove. Mr. Eddy was the first to take the floor.

"We admit," he said, "that the majority of the capital stock of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the stock of the Republic Oil Company is held for the interest of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and that the majority of the stock of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is also held for the interests of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. The admission is made for the purpose of this litigation only."

"The stock is not held 'for the purposes of this litigation only,' is it?" Mr. Hadley laughingly interjected.

"It should appear," Mr. Hagerman suggested, "that the admission is subject to the exception as to the materiality of the question that called it forth."

"I would like to change the admission," announced Judge Priest, "by saying that all the stock appearing on the stock books of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company in the name of M. M. Van Beuren is held in the interest of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey."

"Please get together and formulate the admission to which you are willing to subscribe," advised Mr. Hadley. "Then I will see if it is satisfactory."

The Standard lawyers put their heads together and were in conference for fully a quarter of an hour before they submitted a statement showing the extent of their admissions.

"Cut out the words 'for the interest,'" Mr. Hadley demanded, "and make it appear that the stock is held 'for the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.' This is a very important matter, and I wish to avoid any possibility of ambiguity."

The objectionable words came out. Upon the suggestion of Mr. Wollman the admission was made to cover the time included in the information on which the suit is based. Mr. Hadley suggested other minor changes. There was no objection. When everything was to his taste the admission was made part of the record and the examination of Mr. Rogers was resumed.

Only once during this time had he moved, and that was to whisper to Commissioner Sanborn that tobacco smoke was unpleasant to him owing to the catarrh from which he suffered. The Commissioner forthwith ordered all smoking to stop. Judge Priest, who had just lighted a long, black perfecto, was the principal sufferer.

Mr. Rogers said that he had never received any reports as to the business of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, and that he did not recollect having participated in any discussion as to the affairs of that company with H. M. Tilford. He knew R. H. McNall, who had an office in 26 Broadway, but did not know what position, if any, Mr. McNall held with the Standard.

Mr. Hadley here announced that he would temporarily excuse the witness. Mr. Rogers stopped on his way out to shake hands with the Attorney General.

"When will you want me again?" he asked.

"I will notify you, through your counsel, in plenty of time," Mr. Hadley replied, and the Standard's Vice President retired to the anteroom and there remained until the hearing was adjourned.

William G. Rockefeller Called.

William G. Rockefeller, nephew of the President of the Standard Oil Company, was the next witness called. He was smiling nervously as he took the stand, and said that he had been sworn. The smile came off when the first question was put to him. The nervousness didn't. He crossed and recrossed his legs and frequently moistened his lips.

"My name is William G. Rockefeller," he said. "I am Assistant Treasurer of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and I live in New York."

W. H. Tilford, he said in answer to the question, was the Treasurer of the company.

Q.—Do you know W. H. Tilford? A.—I do.

Q.—Do you know H. M. Tilford? A.—I think I have met him. He is a brother of W. H. Tilford.

Q.—What position does he hold with the Standard Oil Company? A.—I don't know. I am not familiar with his business. All I do know is that he has an office at 26 Broadway.

Q.—Do you know R. H. McNall? A.—Yes. I have known him for thirty years. I knew him in the country. I do not know what position he holds, but I have seen him at 26 Broadway for the last ten years. I think I heard you suggest that he was commercial agent here for the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. I presume your information was correct.

Q.—Do you know H. Clay Pierce? A.—I do.

Q.—Who is President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey? A.—I have always been told that my uncle was.

Q.—Do you know D. A. Moffatt? A.—Yes.

Q.—F. K. Wilson? A.—Yes. He is a bookkeeper for the Standard Oil Company; so is George B. Wilson.

Q.—Do you own any stock of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana? A.—No, I have no connection with that company in any way.

Q.—Do you know anything about the refining and sale of oil in the State of Missouri? A.—I do not.

Q.—Are reports made to you, in your official capacity as Assistant Treasurer of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, by the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri! A.—No.

This ended Mr. Rockefeller's examination for the day. As he walked past Mr. Hadley, on his way out, he followed the example of Mr. Rogers by stopping and shaking hands.

"I want to thank you," he said, smilingly, "for letting me down so easily."

"You think you got off easy, do you?" asked Mr. Hadley. "Well, I'm glad that's your opinion. Good day."

Mr. Hadley then announced that he had served notice on counsel for the respondent companies calling for the production of certain books, memoranda, and letters. There had not been time to comply with the notice, and as the books and documents asked for would greatly facilitate the examination of several witnesses still to be called, he requested an adjournment until Monday morning. The request was promptly granted.

FOOD.

FOOD HELPS

In Management of a R. R.

Speaking of food a railroad man says: "My work puts me out in all kinds of weather, subject to irregular hours for meals, and compelled to eat all kinds of food.

"For seven years I was constantly troubled with indigestion, caused by eating heavy, fatty, starchy, greasy, poorly cooked food, such as are most accessible to men in my business. Generally each meal or lunch was followed by distressing pains and burning sensations in my stomach, which destroyed my sleep and almost unfitted me for work. My brain was so muddy and foggy that it was hard for me to discharge my duties properly.

"This lasted till about a year ago, when my attention was called to Grape-Nuts food by a newspaper ad. and I concluded to try it. Since then I have used Grape-Nuts at nearly every meal and sometimes between meals. We railroad men have little chance to prepare our food in our cabooses, and I find Grape-Nuts mighty handy, for it is ready cooked.

"To make a long story short, Grape-Nuts has made a new man of me. I have no more burning distress in my stomach, nor any other symptom of indigestion. I can digest anything so long as I eat Grape-Nuts, and my brain works as clearly and accurately as an engineer's watch, and my old nervous troubles have disappeared entirely." TO MODIFY ARMSTRONG BILL.

Speaker Tells Life Underwriters They Must Educate Legislators.

The Life Underwriters' Association of New York had a special meeting and luncheon in the Flat Iron Restaurant yesterday afternoon. About 300 were present. The association is composed of life insurance agents. At the close of the luncheon there was a brief speaking programme.

William C. Johnson, Chairman of the Legislative Committee, told of the efforts which had been made to effect a modification of what he termed "the iniquitous Section 98" of the bill submitted by the Armstrong Committee. This is the section which provides for the limitation of the expenses to be incurred in obtaining new business. Mr. Johnson said:

"I cannot undertake to say just what will be done with this Section 98, but I think that there are good grounds for believing that it will be substantially modified, and modified in our favor. I hope that every man here will do everything in his power to educate public sentiment in this regard, and especially to educate the members of the Legislature.

"The plan that has been followed in the past week in Buffalo and Rochester is especially to be commended. Representatives of the underwriters' associations in those cities have had interviews with political leaders there—the men who make members of the Legislature—and have explained the real iniquity of the section as it stands."

Charles Jerome Edwards, general agent of the Equitable, said:

"We have apparently brought the members of the Armstrong Committee to a realizing sense of the injustice that would have been perpetrated in passing Section 98 in its original form. In this work we have had the hearty co-operation, too, of associations outside of the State."

Mr. Edwards said that competition of rival agents to get policy holders away from other companies had almost ceased.

At the preliminary business meeting forty-eight new members were voted in, and just before adjournment Secretary A. G. Shepard announced that fifty more applications had been received.

PUPILS DEFY PRINCIPAL.

And, with Their High School Teachers, They Are Suspended.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 24.—Because Miss Helen Chamberlain and Miss Edith McFarland, teachers in the High School at Rockaway, refused to turn over to Principal Theodore J. Green the school register kept by them, charges of insubordination and breach of school discipline were made at a meeting of the School Board last night.

Principal Green couldn't find the school registers, and so demanded of the teachers where to find them. They wouldn't tell, so he went to the classrooms and appealed to the pupils. One girl raised her hand, and when Principal Green asked her about the register, she said:

"Please, Sir, we know where it is, but we ain't going to tell."

Thereupon the indignant Principal suspended the teachers and pupils. County Supt. Matthews advised the School Board not to pay any more money to the teachers from the State school funds. The teachers sent lawyers before the board demanding their reinstatement. The School Trustees, however, declined to reinstate them. The pupils were reinstated when irate parents appeared before the board to know why their children were sent home. The trouble will be taken before the State Board of Education.

SHULTS MUST PAY 6 CENTS.

Jury's Verdict for a Coachman, Who Says He Was Punched.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 24.—A Westchester County Sheriff's jury here to-day awarded a verdict for 6 cents against John H. Shults, Jr., in favor of John Falk, his former coachman. The coachman sued because he was punched in the jaw by Mr. Shults when Falk swore at him in his stable at Pelham Manor.

Mr. Shults is a son of John H. Shults, a wealthy horse owner and a member of the Empire City Trotting Club. According to the testimony of Falk, he was discharged on Nov. 28 last, and on the following day Mr. Shults came into the stable and asked him if he was leaving or not. Falk said that Mr. Shults struck him with his fist and that a wound was made in his tongue and lip.

Mr. Shults testified that the coachman was intoxicated, and that Falk made a pass at his head, and that he struck him to protect himself. Then Mr. Shults said the coachman's wife gave him a blow which knocked him to the floor. Mr. Shults was corroborated in his testimony by his footman, Joseph Duffy.

HURT AT BALL GAME—$10,000.

Spectator Wins Suit Against American Baseball League.

CHICAGO, March 24.—August Auerbach, who sued the American Baseball League for $25,000 damages for injuries received by being hit by a batted ball, was to-day awarded $10,000 damages by a jury in Judge Frost's court.

Auerbach occupied a seat in the bleachers at the American League grounds here while the Washington and Chicago teams were practicing previous to the game. Wyatt Lee of the Washington team batted a long fly, which hit Auerbach in the head. Auerbach claims he has been a physical wreck since.

The defense contended that Auerbach should have been watching the ball, and quoted a New York decision wherein failure of a spectator to do so is held to show contributary negligence.

MINERS MAY MAKE TERMS WITH SOME OPERATORS

NO AGREEMENT IN MEETING

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 24.—After being in joint conference through committees since Tuesday afternoon, coal operators and miners of the central competitive district and of the southwestern district to-night are no nearer an agreement on a wage scale to go into effect on April 1 than they were when the former joint conference adjourned in disagreement on Feb. 2.

The present wage scale will expire next Saturday, and unless an agreement is reached before that time, 225,000 union bituminous miners will, it is said by the union miners, be called from the mines in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas, and Indian Territory.

The Joint Scale Committee of the Central competitive district adjourned this afternoon to meet Monday morning, when a motion to report a disagreement will be offered, with the probability that it will be carried. The session of the joint conference to receive this committee report will, according to the present programme, be called to meet Monday afternoon.

During the four days the committees have been in conference not every proposal offered by either side on the wage scale has been flatly refused. The operators have been confronted with serious dissensions in their own ranks. F. L. Robbins of the Western Pennsylvania operators has agreed to pay an advance of 5.55 per cent., which is the demand made by the miners, but the operators of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio have firmly refused to pay any advance.

Under the rules of the joint committee the votes of both operators and miners must be recorded as units, and this division of the operators has resulted in the defeat of every motion not favorable to all of them.

The meetings of the Joint Scale Committee have been marked by very bitter words hurled by operators at each other. Mr. Robbins has announced that he intends to pay the increase in wages asked by the miners not only in the mines of the Pittsburg Coal Company, of which he is President, but also in his own mines in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois. Independent operators in Western Pennsylvania, represented by G. A. Magoon, have announced that they will pay the advance if Mr. Robbins does.

President Mitchell of the Mine Workers has firmly declared that no settlement will be made unless an advance in wages is given. Whether the officers of the Mine Workers will allow the miners to sign the scale and go to work in districts where the advance is allowed while other miners strike is a question that the operators have tried in vain to get Mr. Mitchell to answer. The only expression Mr. Mitchell has made on the subject was to-day, when he remarked in the committee meeting that the course the operators were taking might bring that situation about.

Herman Justi, Commissioner of the Illinois operators, said this afternoon:

"It is possible Western Pennsylvania and Ohio will be allowed to sign the advanced scale offered and Indiana and Illinois go on a strike. This strike, however, would be of short duration, possibly thirty days.

"The public will not be seriously affected by a strike. There is generally a suspension of work at coal mines on April 1 whether there is a strike or not. The work during the next month is very light and the output is always small.

"In case of a strike the country has coal on hand for forty-five days, which is conservatively estimating it. Of 600,000 coal miners in the country only 333,000 belong to the United Mine Workers. West Virginia, with a coal production of 38,000,000 tons annually, is practically non-union; Kentucky, with a production of 8,000,000 tons, is the same, and Alabama, with a strike of the union on since August, 1904, last year produced 12,000,000 tons, or more than the year before, when the union men were working the mines. So it is easy to see the people of this country will not freeze or eat their victuals raw."

9,000,000 TONS OF COAL STORED.

Anthracite Operators Tell Public There Need Be No Fear of a Famine.

To prevent anything like a scare on the part of the public that anthracite will be scarce and dear in case a coal strike takes place on April 1, the anthracite operators issued a statement yesterday showing that a reserve of 9,000,000 tons of anthracite is stored within 100 miles of New York. Little or no anthracite in the steam sizes is coming here.

The reserve supply will not be allowed to get into the hands of speculators, and will not be incroached on until after the strike, if there is one. The operators' statement says:

"Storage facilities have been increased very largely, in some cases by the leasing of farms along the route of the railroads. Many of these spots are isolated, but they are within easy transportation distance from New York. One of the largest is the South Plainfield yard of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company. Here fourteen mountains of coal, each seventy-five to eighty feet high, with a base of 275 to 300 feet, contain nearly 500,000 tons, and this is being added to at a rate that can be increased at any time to 6,000 tons aday.

"While the railroads themselves have been thus active, the larger coal consumers have not been asleep. This is indicated by the full piles of the New York Edison Company at Shady Side, N. J., where an electric sign so large that residents of Riverside Drive may read it tells of a capacity of 200,000 tons.

"New York City alone consumes about 15,000,000 tons of coal a year. The mild Winter just passed reduced the local tonnage about 25 per cent. This amount has been added to the supply in storage."

ALARM FOR A FOX TERRIER.

Because Small Miller Nixon Is Lonely Since "Fly" Ran Away.

"Grandma, Fly's run away," sobbed little Miller Nixon, the grandson of Mrs. M. A. Van Hart of 25 West Forty-fourth Street a few days ago. Since then the little fellow has been inconsolable.

Fly is a fox terrier. He was a great favorite in the block where he lived, but never strayed beyond it, confining his acquaintances to the cabmen and residents of the neighborhood. On Wednesday he disappeared.

CHAPLAIN'S FRIENDS PROTEST

Friends of the Rev. W. H. I. Reaney, the Catholic Chaplain at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, expressed surprise yesterday when they learned that he had been detached from that station and ordered to report on board the prison ship Southerly, at Portsmouth, N. H.

Father Reaney, who perhaps is the best-known Chaplain in the navy, received his orders on Friday, but owing to a slight illness he will not be ready to go for several days. Last night a movement, headed by Champe S. Andrews, was begun to have the order rescinded. Mr. Andrews declared that the Chaplain had received shabby treatment at the hands of the Government in being ordered from the Brooklyn Yard to a station that never had a Chaplain, and was considered most undesirable. He added:

"The Southerly is a prison ship used for the confinement of short-term men who are about to be dishonorably discharged from the navy. It is an unimportant station and never before had a Chaplain. As a matter of fact the services of a Chaplain are not required there, and Father Reaney's friends take it that somebody in or out of the department is getting square for something."

Father Reaney served with Dewey at Manila and was recommended for promotion for bravery in action. He introduced boxing on board the warships, organized athletic associations in all the fleets to which he was attached, formed baseball teams, track teams, and got the men interested in football and other sports. He selected the cleverest boxers and matched them, often managing bouts until "taps" sounded.

SAILORS NOT SABBATARIANS.

Some Provincetown People Want Their Sunday Sports Forbidden.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The Navy Department is confronted with the question whether or not the bluejackets of the North Atlantic fleet shall be permitted to engage in baseball or other games on Sunday this Summer at Provincetown, the rendezvous of the fleet during target practice.

This kind of practice is the most arduous and nerve-racking experience which falls to the lot of a sailor and occupies every working minute of the six week days. So on Sunday, when the big ships run into port for a day's rest, the bluejackets look forward to a day of pastime in open-air sports.

Last year some of the citizens of Provincetown appealed to Rear Admiral Evans to prevent his sailors from engaging in sports on the Sabbath, but the Admiral declined to do this, though he did order the men to postpone their games until after church time.

A few days ago Secretary Bonaparte received from some of the residents of Provincetown a formal request that he order Admiral Evans to give the necessary instructions to prevent ballplaying on Sunday afternoons.

While the Secretary was considering the request, another petition was received from Provincetown, this one from a number of business people, requesting the Secretary to refrain from stopping the sailors' sports, which, the petitioners said, were enjoyed by the whole town and prevented the men from drifting off in groups into possible mischief.

GRAFTING IN CINCINNATI.

Mayor Fleischman's Firm Said to Have Been Favored.

CINCINNATI, March 24.—In delving into methods that prevailed under the rule of George B. Cox, the Senate Committee this afternoon investigated the buying of horse feed by the city Fire Department.

A. Bender, a grain dealer, testified that at the request of W. W. Granger, general manager of the Union Hay and Grain Company, he had repeatedly billed to the Fire Department as coming from his concern oats that the Union Hay and Grain Company had itself sold to the department. Julius Fleischman, Mayor of the city, was President of the Union concern. Granger was a City Councilman at the time.

It was not unusual for the price paid for the oats to be several cents a bushel above the market price, Bender declared, and he was allowed one-fourth to one-half a cent per bushel for his trouble.

City Auditor W. T. Perkins testified that all city employes, even women stenographers, were obliged to furnish bonds when appointed, and that he, as an official of a bonding company, got fees from these appointees. County Treasurers J. H. Gibson and R. K. Hyncka were also officials of the company that furnished nearly all of these bonds.

EACH WANTS NORMAL SCHOOL

But Mrs. Mackay and Miss Adams Favor Different Locations.

Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay of Harbor Hill, Roslyn, Long Island, and Miss Maude Adams of Lake Ronkonkoma each wants the State to build a Normal School in her neighborhood.

A number of residents of Mineola and the vicinity have raised a fund for the purchase of a Normal School site to be used if the State will select that neighborhood for an educational building. One subscription is said to have been made by Mrs. Mackay. It is for $500, with the understanding that more would be forthcoming if needed.

Miss Maude Adams is quoted as saying that she will do all in her power to have the Normal School built at Lake Ronkonkoma, where, she thinks, it ought to be. E. Hollis Newton, a wealthy farmer of Lake Ronkonkoma, has not only signified his willingness to donate a desirable site containing ten acres, but has headed a subscription list with $500. Residents of Lake Ronkonkoma are talking of choosing Miss Adams as one of the Local Board of Managers of the Normal School if it is built there.

KILLED BY ROOF'S FALL.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 24.—One man was killed and three others were badly injured here this afternoon by the collapse of a thousand-ton steel and concrete roof being erected over the Reed Baths, a short distance in front of the Hotel Dennis.

The workman killed was John Stead, colored. George Hawkins, Edward Tiel, and Ira Campbell, badly hurt, were dug out of the ruins by the firemen. They are now in the hospital here and may die.

The other workmen had very narrow escapes. They escaped because two sections of concrete weighing many tons fell together and formed an angle over their heads. Three men were only slightly hurt.

The collapsed structure was to be used as a sun parlor by the hotel patrons. Some workmen, without orders, removed timbers supporting the heavy roof before the brick walls were complete, and the entire structure fell to the ground. The loss is $3,000.

CARNEGIE APPROVES PLANS.

Gives Unlimited Credit for Buildings for Pittsburg School.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 24.—Director Arthur A. Hamerschlag of the Carnegie School of Technology returned home this afternoon from Hot Springs, Va., where he had consulted with Andrew Carnegie about the plans of the institution. He spent all of yesterday with Mr. Carnegie.

They talked particularly about plans of the additional buildings to be erected. Mr. Carnegie was greatly interested in the work that has already been done, and instructed Mr. Hamerschlag to proceed with the erection of the other buildings as rapidly as possible.

The plans for the entire school call for seven different groups, which will occupy thirty-two acres of ground. Mr. Carnegie has given to the Trustees unlimited credit in the erection of buildings.

SHOT TWICE INTO HOME OF WEAVER'S COUNSEL

TALKS OF POLITICAL MOTIVE

Police Believe He Is the Author of Many Threatening Letters to Public Men.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—A demented man, John J. McCaffrey, fired two shots through the parlor window of ex-Judge James G. Gordon's house, 1,829 Pine Street, late this afternoon. Ten persons were in the house, Mr. Gordon's mother, brother, and sister, his six children, and a servant, but all were upstairs. Mr. Gordon is Mayor Weaver's private counsel.

McCaffrey says he had political motives, but the police say he has been confined in the insane department of the Philadelphia Hospital. He is believed to be the author of threatening letters that many public men have received in the last six months.

Pine Street was almost deserted when the man, standing on the curb, fired the shots. Two seemed to satisfy him, and he turned around and laughed at children who had witnessed the shooting from windows across the street. He then shook his fist at the Gordon house and started at a run east on Pine Street.

George Banwort, a waiter, had seen the shooting and started in pursuit. He jumped into the wagon of John Bradley, standing near by, and urged the driver to follow the man. They found Policeman Maneely, and with Bradley's assistance the man was caught. Rumors of assassination were started, and the crowd tried to get at the prisoner. The policeman, with the assistance of City Hall guards, took him to the Central Station.

"Send for Jim McNichol and ex-District Attorney George S. Graham. They know all about me," shouted the prisoner.

He said he lived at 1,138 Porter Street. He is a machinist by trade, but has been out of work for several weeks. He told Acting Captain Bond of the city detectives, that he did not intend to kill anybody.

"The papers have been saying all kinds of things about my friend McNichol, and I wrote to them, but they never gave me a hearing," he said. "Then I wrote to Gordon, but he has not answered a single one of the letters I have sent him. Now I want a hearing. You people may think I am crazy, but you will find out in time. There is more back of this than you suspect, but I make no explanation until I get into court."

Mr. Gordon to-night said that he did not recall McCaffrey's name, and was not aware that he had ever received a letter from him.

"Of course I get some crank letters, but I don't think I ever got one from McCaffrey," said Mr. Gordon. "I feel sorry for the poor follow."

TO HONOR MOST'S MEMORY.

Anarchists Plan Demonstrations To-day and Next Sunday.

Anarchists in this city are planning a memorial demonstration in honor of Johann Most. It will begin to-day, with the performance at the Bronx Casino, 155th Street and Third Avenue, of "The Nihilist," a play by August Spies.

This play will be also in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the death of Czar Alexander II. The proceeds will be devoted to the purchase and distribution of 10,000 copies of the memorial number of Freiheit among Anarchists all over the country.

At the Grand Central Palace next Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock Emma Goldman, John Kelly, Dr. Shidlowsky, Pietro de Estavi, Dr. Solotaroff, Editor Yanosky of the Jewish Abend Post, August Lott, and Max Baginsky will speak in tribute to Most. All attending the meeting will carry red flags. A band of one hundred pieces will play. Most's favorite songs, many written by himself, will be sung by the Workingmen's Chorus Union, and others. The widows of several Anarchists killed or hanged in connection with the Chicago riots in 1884, will be among the guests.

PUMP RUINED HIS NERVES.

Apartment House Tenant Asks Court to Make Engineer Stop It.

Dr. J. A. Moore appeared in Yorkville Court yesterday to ask Magistrate Moss to order John Quinn, the engineer of the apartment house in which he lives, at 571 Park Avenue, not to run the hydraulic pump between 11 P. M. and 6 A. M.

"It makes a most horrible noise, your Honor," he said. "It's ruined my nerves and those of my mother and sister already. The Board of Health tells me it should not run at night, but the engineer paid no attention to the notice I served on him yesterday."

The owner of the house, J. Tietz, declared that the pump was necessary to run the elevator and fill the tank on the roof.

"The other tenants would complain," he urged, "if the elevator stopped at night. However, it does not much matter. I have served five days' notice of dispossession on the doctor."

The case was adjourned till to-morrow, and the Board of Health has been invited to look into the matter.

CRUSHED BY AN ELEVATOR.

John Baronowski, twenty-eight years old, a recently appointed elevator man in the Commercial Cable Building annex, at the corner of Exchange Place and New Street, was crushed to death yesterday by his elevator. He had left it for a moment, and then had tried to crawl into it while it was slowly moving upward.

There were no passengers in the car yesterday morning when Baronowski left it for a moment. He thought he had stopped it, but upon turning he discovered that it was moving, so he made a wild scramble to get inside. He succeeded in throwing his body upon the floor of the car, leaving his legs hanging over when it moved to the next floor. Here he was caught between the floor of the car and the grillwork of the gate and was crushed.

Sennelli Bankruptcy Proceedings Will Be Duplicated in Italy.

The dry-as-dust proceedings of the Bankruptcy Court were enlivened yesterday by allegations of roguery which the lawyers hope to prevent to some extent in future by carrying their case to Italy. The story came out in an application to Judge Adams for copies of the proceedings in a petition in bankruptcy filed last month against Raffelli Sennelli, who had a string of little grocery stores at Brewsters, Towners, and Dyckman, in Putnam County.

After the workmen packed up and quit the Croton Valley, when the dam was finally completed last Winter, Sennelli sold out his stores and disappeared. His creditors have claims aggregating about $15,000. They are mostly wholesale firms, who have had a lot of trouble with Italian customers, and they have come together with the determination of making an example of Sennelli.

One of the first things they learned, according to the papers, was that he had started off with two wives, one brother-in-law, his sister, father, and mother, all apparently on the friendliest terms. The first wife, however, he sent back from Montreal, but carried her two children along to Italy with his newer bride.

Lesser Brothers, the lawyers for the creditors, also learned that the grocer had sent about $2,800 on to Italy in anticipation of his flight, and that he owned a farm at Caramanico, Italy, worth almost as much.

The lawyers got trace of where the cash had been deposited in Rome, and word was received yesterday from the attorney of the United States Consul General at Rome that $2,000 of Sennelli's had been attached in the Postal Savings Bank there. The creditors hope, by carrying the bankruptcy proceedings to Italy, to discourage the practice of leaving unpaid bills in this country.

VALENTINE WILL CONTEST.

Sister of Convicted Lawyer Says Mother's Will Was Not a Voluntary One.

MINEOLA, L. I., March 24.—Objection was filed to-day by George D. Beattys, counsel for Margaret P. Valentine of Woodmere, to the probate of the will of Elizabeth H. Valentine, mother of Benjamin E. Valentine, the Brooklyn lawyer who was found guilty of forgery a few weeks ago before Judge Rogers. Margaret Valentine is a sister of the convicted lawyer.

The objection to the will is that it is not the last will of Mrs. Valentine; that it was not an unrestricted, free, and voluntary act, and that the testatrix was not of sound mind when the will was executed. Mrs. Valentine left a considerable quantity of silverware and a house in Salem, Mass. In the will the son, who is sole executor, is given the right to dispose of the house in the interests of the estate.

LUTHERAN CHURCH BEQUEST.

Miss Geissenhainer Left $3,000 to Seminary and General Council.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 24.—By the will of Miss Amelia Geissenhainer, who was a sister-in-law of the late Mrs. George C. Kip of this city, a bequest of $1,000 is made to the Theological Seminary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Mount Airy, Philadelphia; also a bequest of $2,000 to the Board of Trustees of the General Council of the Lutheran Church. If James Stowell Anthony of Plainfield is living he is to receive $2,500; if dead, the money is to go to the Evangelical Seminary.

The residue is divided among Miss Geissenhainer's heirs. The testatrix was wealthy.

HANGED A BOY FOR FUN.

COUDERSPORT, Penn., March 24.—In imitation of the recent hanging of Charles Brewster at Coudersport, two schoolboys of West Branch to-day hanged Eddie Bentley, their schoolmate, to the bell-rope of a schoolhouse in West Branch while "playing Sheriff."

He was cut down by Miss Grace Reynolds, his teacher, just in time to save his life. He was unconscious and his neck was badly lacerated.

TO CURB PRINTING WASTE.

Two Joint Resolutions Introduced in Congress by Mr. Landis.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Two joint resolutions designed to correct "some of the most glaring abuses and inequalities" in the present system of public printing and binding were introduced to-day by Representative Landis of Indiana, and were accompanied by a preliminary report of the Printing Investigation Commission explaining the necessity for immediate reforms.

One resolution provides that public documents and reports printed for Congress may be issued in numerous editions instead of in one edition, as is the case at present, and authorizes the Joint Commission on Printing to establish rules and regulations from time to time for the guidance of the Public Printer in the issuance of documents.

This resolution, the report explains, is necessary to cure the extravagant printing of documents which are never distributed. At present the Government has in storage more than 9,538 tons of documents, most of which are said by the commission to be obsolete. In addition to this amount, hundreds of tons have been sold to dealers in junk.

The second resolution provides a complete change in the allotment of the expenditures for printing and binding, with a view to making heads of departments and chiefs of bureaus responsible for the amounts expended with their authorization.

The report suggests that the Public Printer be placed in the same relation to Congress and the departments that the commercial printer is to his customers.

NUTLEY POST OFFICE ROBBED.

Second Time Within a Year—Stamps and $75 Stolen.

NUTLEY, N. J., March 24.—For the second time within a year the safe in the Post Office in Nutley was cracked by burglars at an early hour this morning, and $75 in cash and many stamps were stolen. No one in the town heard any disturbance, although the noise of the explosion must have been loud, for a piece of the safe door was blown across the room.

The robbery was discovered shortly after 6 o'clock to-day by Chief of Police Henry Knabb, who had been aroused from his bed by Henry Burkhardt, who told him that both windows on the east side of the Post Office Building were open. Knabb found the marks of a "jimmy" around the window sills.

The explosive used on the safe was probably nitro-glycerine. The combination knob had been forced off the door, and the explosive poured into the interior. The postal authorities and the police of near-by towns and cities were notified of the robbery, with the result that two Post Office Inspectors were in the town to-day looking over the ground.

ABOLISHES CONSULS' COURTS.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Representative Williams of Mississippi introduced a bill to-day to establish a District Court of the United States for China and Korea, which shall have jurisdiction in all cases now under the jurisdiction of United States Consuls and Ministers by virtue of treaties between the United States and China and the United States and Korea. The court is to hold sessions at Shanghai, Canton, Han-Kow, Tien-Tsin, and at Söul.

A similar bill, providing for a court in China, but not including Korea, was introduced by Representative Denby of Michigan.

ONLY ENGLAND GAINS BY MOROCCO DISPUTE

Outcome of the Conference Causes Disgust in Germany.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S INFLUENCE

Belief That His Conferences with the French and German Ambassadors Are Assisting an Agreement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 24.—The usual thing has happened. It is an open secret that Germany's action in regard to Morocco was directed against Great Britain to quite as great an extent as against France, and it is now admitted in official circles that the only power which has reaped any benefit from the Algeciras Conference is Great Britain.

John Bull, giving nothing and risking very little, gains all the advantages, political and commercial. Germany and France have been pulling hairs and have hurt each other considerably, while England, looking on, is the only victor.

The German Government is disgusted, and the conference is a dangerous subject to mention in the Wilhelmstrasse.

ALGECIRAS, March 24.—Seventeen days have elapsed since a plenary session of the conference was held, and the delegates are impatient to get away.

The informal meetings which have been held have, however, been productive of good results, and the prevailing opinion is that the session of the conference on Monday will be decisive, or at least show if a settlement is probable.

COLOGNE, Sunday, March 25.—The Gazette this morning publishes a dispatch from Berlin which says:

"The tenor of Germany's declaration to be made at the next session of the Conference on Moroccan Reforms has been fixed for several days, and is subject to no further revision.

"Germany must insist on the effective control, by an Inspector General of Moroccan Police, over the French and Spanish officers. She cannot give her consent that the authority of French and Spanish officers shall extend to German subjects without a guarantee for the correction of mistakes by higher international authority."

WASHINGTON, March 24.—It is believed that the remaining differences at the Algeciras Conference are now being assisted to a solution by the informal conferences which M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, and Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambassador, have been holding with the President and Secretary Root.

Nothing akin to intervention has been suggested, or is even contemplated, by the Washington Government, but the close personal relations existing between the White House and the German and French Embassies have enabled an informal exchange of views which is proving exceedingly helpful at Algeciras.

State Department advices to-day from Ambassador White at Algeciras were very encouraging. Details of the communication were not made public, but it is stated that they indicate that the conference is approaching a successful termination, and that this may come as early as Monday.

KAISER'S POLITICAL TOUR.

Important Results Are Expected from the Emperor's Journey.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 24.—Extensive preparations are being made for Emperor William's Mediterranean trip.

The Emperor will leave Wilhelmshaven on the steamship Hamburg on April 2. He will visit various countries, and it is said that his journey is certain to have important political consequences. At Rome the Emperor will visit the Pope and discuss with him the German protectorate over Catholic missions in the Far East.

The Kaiser will also meet King Victor Emmanuel, and will endeavor to strengthen the very shaky Triple Alliance.

The Emperor will arrive in Madrid on May 15. He will land at Carthagena and remain in Spain three days.

It is believed that Emperor William will meet King Edward in the course of his journey, though this is not certain, the relations of the two monarchs being far from intimate.

THE DEWEY NEAR GIBRALTAR.

Expected There To-day—Has Had Fair Weather, and Is in Good Shape.

GIBRALTAR, March 24.—The United States floating drydock Dewey communicated by wireless telegraphy with the station here to-night. The Dewey was then ninety miles off port. She reported all well. She is expected here to-morrow evening.

The United States Navy tug Potomac, one of the vessels convoying the Dewey, arrived here to-day from Las Palmas, Canary Islands. Her commander said the knowledge gained by earlier experiences had enabled the American officers to avoid the difficulties previously encountered and the towing from Las Palmas was proceeding smoothly. Fair weather had prevailed and the dock was in good condition.

Laying the Manila-Shanghai Cable.

MANILA, March 24.—The steamer Silvertown, which arrived here on Thursday with the Commercial Pacific Cable Company's cable, which is to connect Manila with Shanghai, landed the cable this morning, and then commenced paying out across Dewey's battleground, heading toward Shanghai.

Japanese Spies at Vladivostok.

VLADIVOSTOK, March 24.—Two Japanese merchants were arrested to-day in one of the forts here. In their possession were found plans of the fortifications and notes referring to them.

STRIKERS POISON GIRLS.

WARSAW, March 24.—Thirty-four girls working in Kindler's mills, at Pabianiec, ten miles southwest of Lodz, on refusing to join a strike were to-day poisoned by a powder that was strewn upon the floor of the mill.

One of the girls died from the effects of the poison, and the remainder are seriously ill, ten of them not being expected to recover.

DEMAND BY THE GEORGIANS.

They Want to Free Their Church from Russian Control.

TIFLIS, March 24.—The Georgians have presented to the Viceroy of the Caucasus a demand for the autonomy of their church.

When the Kingdom of Georgia, whose heroic people upheld the banner of Christianity in the mountains of the Caucasus for centuries against the hosts of the Prophet, became utterly exhausted by continual wars with the Turks and accepted the rule of Russia in 1801, a treaty was made providing that Russia should respect the Georgian Kings, recognize the autocephalous character of the church, grant to the Georgians immunity from Russian military conscription, and not interfere with their language, schools, &c.

The Georgian monarch, however, was immediately suppressed. The people were powerless to resist, and, one by one, the political liberties guaranteed disappeared. The Church alone, with a Georgian Exarch, continued as a national institution until after the Russo-Turkish war, when it also succumbed to the process of Russification, being now presided over by a Russian Exarch and administered by the Synod at St. Petersburg.

Some of the old nationalistic aspirations of the Georgians were revived by the reform movement in Russia, and there was even an incipient movement in favor of trying to restore the old Kingdom of Georgia. The leaders of the race, however, realized that to separate from Russia would only leave the Georgians at the mercy of the Turks, and decided to content themselves with trying to free their Church from Russian control. They have been encouraged in this attempt by the restoration of Armenian Church property to the Armenians.

The Viceroy has promised to lay the matter before the authorities at St. Petersburg.

MASSACRE BY YAQUIS.

Five Women and Two Men Killed While Driving in Mexican Mountains.

LOS ANGELES, March 24.—News has reached this city of the murder of five members of the family of Pedro Meza, Presidente of La Dura, in Sonora, Mexico, and brother-in-law of Frederick Hartman, President of the William Hoege Company of Los Angeles, and two others, who were massacred by Indians within a few miles of their home and their bodies left in the roadway between Ortiz and La Dura until a sufficient number of Mexican troops could be sent to overawe the raiding outlaws and bring in their victims.

The names of those killed are: Senor Pedro Meza, Presidente of La Dura, a mining contractor; Senora Elvira Meza, wife of the Presidente; Senoritas Carmen, Eloisa, and Panchetta Meza, 18, 20, and 23 years of age, their daughters; Mrs. Wenceslas Hoff, friend of the family, and Theodore Hoff, 24 years of age, her only son.

The party were attacked by a band of Yaquis while driving in the Ios Otates Mountains. Fire was opened upon them from ledges in the Otates Pass. The two men charged desperately up the slopes in an effort to divert the fire from the women, and in this way fell with their faces to the unseen foe.

KAISER DECORATES CHINESE.

The Commissioners Say That They Prefer Beer to Cocktails.

BERLIN, March 24.—The Chinese Imperial Commissioners, who are visiting Europe, were received in farewell audience by the Emperor to-day.

The audience was a most brilliant affair. The imperial Princes, the Chancellor, and many civil, military, and naval officials were present. The Commissioners presented to the Emperor rich silks, carvings, porcelains, and lacquer work, and his Majesty bestowed on the Commissioners the Crown Order of the First Class.

The Commissioners avoid making comparisons between the countries they have visited, except that they grow reminiscent over the extraordinary things they have eaten and drunk. They say they prefer beer to cocktails.

From Berlin the Commissioners will go to Russia, Austria, and Italy. They will sail for home from Naples.

ENGINEER HELD FOR WRECK.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., March 24.—George W. Hopkins was arrested to-day at his home at South Orange and brought to Somerville by order of Prosecutor Roger, on a charge of manslaughter. Judge Schenck held the prisoner in $2,000 bail, which was furnished.

Hopkins was the engineer of a wild-cat engine which dashed into a west-bound passenger train near Lyons station, on the Lackawanna Railroad, three weeks ago, causing the death of Fireman R. B. Jones of Hoboken and the injury of a number of other people. At the inquest the testimony showed that Hopkins was returning from Gladstone to Summit, and had received a message on his arrival at Bernardsville warning him to be on the lookout for the passenger train. The verdict of the Coroner's jury was that Hopkins was guilty of criminal negligence.

RAILROADS DISTRUST PROUTY, SAYS MELLEN

DENIES FAVOR TO STANDARD

BOSTON, March 24.—President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad addressed members and guests of the Boston Art Club at the rooms of the organization in the Back Bay to-night. He replied to charges of discrimination against his company, made here recently by Charles A. Prouty of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. Incidentally he attacked Mr. Prouty as unfair.

Mr. Mellen dwelt at some length upon the conditions under which the New Haven Road is directed, and said:

"It is the declared policy of the company to reduce its charges for passenger and freight transportation, and regarding the rates, you will have an example close at hand within a very short time in the establishment of maximum rates of 2 cents per mile upon our whole system, and let me say here that this is without any intention to advance any of the existing rates that are now upon a lower basis."

Taking up the charge that discrimination had been practiced by the New Haven Company in favor of the Standard Oil Company, he said:

"The case before the commission was brought at the instigation of a member of the commission, who promoted in every way the bringing of the same, and then rendered a decision, claiming there was discrimination, but admitting the decision was ineffectual because the commission had no jurisdiction.

"He knew he had no jurisdiction in the beginning, and his only object in hearing the case was to bring an argument to bear why he should be given more authority, and thought by linking our company with the popular prejudice that has lately been excited against the Standard Oil Company he could bring additional weight to bear to accomplish his purpose.

"With his customary fairness he neglected to mention in his decision, what was fairly shown at the hearing, that upon the New Haven lines there was competition through others not in the control of the Standard Oil Company, who were favored with equally liberal rates for the distribution of their products; that the territory of the New Haven Company was not controlled in the interests of the Standard Oil Company, but was competed for by others in the same line of trade.

"Before the case was heard, and while it was pending; before any decision was rendered, the Commissioner who presided had substantially announced his decision on two public occasions.

"From this, you may perhaps understand some of the hesitation on the part of railroad officials; why they do not want any more power put in the hands of one so prejudiced; why railroad officials do not care that the position of detective, advocate, public prosecutor, Judge, jury, and executioner should be in the same hand."

President Mellen declared that there was no discrimination by his road in favor of the Standard Oil Company, nor had there been any. Yielding, however, to the adverse public opinion excited by the misrepresentation, the company had ordered a pro-rating arrangement upon petroleum and its products.

He added that there is only one Director upon the New Haven Road who is in any way connected with the Standard Oil Company, and that the whole stock interest in the company owned and controlled by members of the Standard Oil Company, directly and indirectly, is less than 10,000 shares.

"It is useless to deny that there have been abuses," Mr. Mellen went on, speaking of the general railroad situation. "It is impossible to allay the distrust and suspicion they have excited. The public feels outraged and is striking out blindly in its rage, and is likely to cause more damage in seeking a remedy than has been caused by the disease.

"The President would think less of me if I did not speak my mind for what I believe to be right, and I believe in him no less to-day than heretofore, though I disagree with him if he advocates the Hepburn bill in its present form."

CARPET TACK'S FATAL WORK.

Caused Explosion in a Powder Mill by Which Two Men Perished.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., March 24.—A carpet tack caught between cog wheels caused a spark that resulted in the blowing up of the works of the Phoenix Powder Company, eight miles east of here, this afternoon. John Nash, aged 58 years, and Edward Higginbotham, aged 24 years, were killed.

The building was destroyed, parts being scattered all over the surrounding country in the vicinity.

Rev. Dr. Lewis Lampman to Retire.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis Lampman, for more than seventeen years pastor of the High Street Presbyterian Church of Newark, N. J., has announced that he will resign in November. He will retire from the active ministry, and will live in West Coxsackie, N. Y., where he was born. Dr. Lampman has had two charges. Before going to Newark he was for more than eighteen years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Jamaica, L. I.

White House Servant's Daughter Mad.

Mrs. Henrietta Weston, a negro whose relatives say she is the daughter of Arthur Simmons, the seventy-year-old White House messenger, who has served every President since Lincoln, became insane yesterday afternoon. Clad in a nightgown with a blanket thrown over her shoulders, she was kneeling in prayer on Fifth Avenue at 111th Street when arrested and sent to Bellevue.

Murder Plot Prisoners at Boise.

BOISE, Idaho, March 24.—W. D. Haywood was brought here from Caldwell today by Sheriff James Nichols and placed in the county jail with Moyer and Pettibone. The three prisoners, pending their trial for the murder of ex-Gov. Frank Steunenberg, will have the use of a large room in the day time and at night will be locked in separate cells. Moyer's health is said to be much improved.

New Station for Huntington, L. I.

The Long Island Railroad Company has purchased two acres beside its tracks at Huntington as a site for a large new passenger station, with broad approaches for automobiles, carriages, and trolley cars. The site of the present passenger station will be used for a new freight depot.

CITY BREVITIES.

Rudolf Allert, Superintendent of the Lion Brewery, of which Mrs. Josephine Schmid is the owner, said yesterday that Mrs. Schmid had no intention of selling the brewery to a syndicate, as had been reported in some newspapers recently. Instead, the plant is to be enlarged to twice its present capacity of 500,000 barrels.

Subscriptions in behalf of the Normal College Alumnae Settlement, which seeks $8,000 to purchase its home at 446 East Seventy-second Street, may be sent to Mrs. Harry A. Day at 19 Park Avenue. About $2,600 has already been received. The option on the property runs to April 1.

Two alarms were sent in last night for a fire which did $10,000 damage in the six-story building at 16 Greene Street. It is supposed that the fire originated on the third floor, occupied by Dutchmann Brothers, manufacturers of shirtwaists. The stock of A. J. Levy, cottons, on the fifth floor, and Jacob Safran, underwear, on the sixth, was damaged.

FIRE SCARE IN THE AUDUBON.

"Soubrette Home" is the familiar name for the Audubon Hotel, 1,414-1,416 Broadway, which is owned by the Shubert Brothers. Miss Beatrice Colon of the theatrical profession has a room on the fourth floor, or she did have. She retired yesterday morning between 5 and 6 o'clock. She had been sitting up late studying her Sunday School lesson.

Being a consistent believer in fresh air, day or night, Miss Colon opened her window. While she had her back to the window the wind seized hold of the lace curtain and flung it across the gas jet. Presently she saw the fire, and cried out in piercing tones three times: "Help! Help! Help!"

Violet Hall, who has a room next door to Beatrice Colon's, never hears that cry without heeding it. She telephoned to John Fischel, the night clerk. The night clerk sent a boy to wake up Howard Close, son of the hotel manager. Meanwhile Policeman Murray had turned in a fire alarm. N. B. Coan, a stander in the hotel office, ran upstairs to see what he could do.

Somebody took an axe out of the emergency case, and with it he went to smashing things. What with this smashing and the screams of Beatrice Colon and Violet Hall, the others in the house began to wake and fill the halls. The girls were excited; they wore only their night-clothes. They began falling on one another's neck and calling out, imploringly, 'Oh, save me, save me, and save my trunk, and my Persian lamb coat, and—"

And then the men got excited. They tried to get the emergency hose into action. It was all kinked up; it wouldn't work. Somebody got hold of a chemical extinguisher. He squirted that all over his associates.

Then the firemen came in, and the police, and somebody turned the chemical extinguisher on the flames. It was out in a few minutes.

The fire had been confined to Beatrice Colon's room. It was ashamed to come out, said one of the policemen in the hall.

The most diligent investigation did not bring to light what company Miss Beatrice Burns is playing in, but she was the one who, when Manager Close yelled at her door that she must get up or be burned to shavings, called out defiantly: "I won't get up. This wall next to me is not hot. So long as the wall is not hot I'll stay here."

KILEY OUT OF BANK.

Bigamist's Sister-in-Law Thinks He Has Left the State.

At a meeting of the officials of the North Side Bank, Williamsburg, yesterday the resignation as President of Thomas W. Kiley, who has been keeping out of sight since the fact that he had married two women, who are living within a short distance of each other in Brooklyn, became public, was accepted. A successor to Kiley in the office will be chosen at the regular meeting of the Directors on April 17.

"So far as this bank is concerned," said Cashier Bonner after the meeting, "the incident is closed."

At the home of the real Mrs. Kiley, at 201 Jefferson Avenue, yesterday, a woman who said she was a sister of Mrs. Kiley, in answer to questions as to Kiley's whereabouts, said:

"We have no information to give out. All I can say is that Mr. Kiley is probably not in the State at present."

Friends of Mr. Kiley say that they are confident he never will be prosecuted for bigamy, and that they expect him to return to his wife after the talk has subsided. They believed that he would so arrange his business affairs as to be able to leave Brooklyn with Mrs. Kiley and live with her in some other place, this arrangement being conditional on his complete abandonment of Mrs. Colt, the "second Mrs. Kiley."

A suit of Lawyer John S. Griffith against Kiley and Mrs. Colt for fees is to come up in the Supreme Court on Tuesday.

NO POLITICS IN TRANSFERS.

Bingham Has Langan and Handy Change Places—Favors to Politicians.

Police Commissioner Bingham announced yesterday that "for the good of the service" he had ordered Capt. James J. Langan of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station and Capt. Martin Handy of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station to exchange posts.

He was asked whether certain transfers had been made at the request of Congressman "Big Tim" Sullivan.

"I never met Big Tim," he replied. "I have seen Little Tim, but I don't remember that he asked me for any transfers. I've seen The McManus. He asked me for a square deal, but no favors."

"What would you do if some big politician asked you a favor?"

"I would treat him courteously, but promise nothing. Other things being equal I would gladly do him a favor."

The Commissioner was asked if he had heard that a dozen music halls of a low order had appeared on the Bowery since the beginning of the year, when Capt. Zimmerman went to the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

"There have been some complaints. I am going to look into them at once," he answered.

Warning Others, He Lost His Life.

Charles W. Stroub of 600 East 137th Street, who was killed at New Rochelle yesterday morning, was the first man to be killed on the present improvement work on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. In trying to protect a gang of men doing some electrical work he stepped out of the way of one train in front of an express. His body was thrown forty feet down an embankment. He was 35 years old and unmarried.

Barber Kills Himself in His Shop.

John Lockman, a barber, of 110 Broad Street, Stapleton, committed suicide before a number of customers in his shop last night when told by a physician that his wife was suffering from lung trouble. Lockman, who was shaving a customer, took a bottle containing essence of almonds, drank the contents, and fell to the floor unconscious. He died before help arrived.

Sanitarium Patients Work at Fire.

RUTLAND, Mass., March 24.—A twenty-one room private sanitarium and three barns, owned by Otis E. Bowen, on the Pommogussett Farm, one mile north of Rutland Centre, was burned to the ground early this morning. Eleven patients were housed in the sanitarium, and all aided in removing personal property.

MR. CARNEGIE DEFENDS SPELLING REFORM PLAN

Gives His Views as to Why Changes Should Be Made.

REPLY TO CRITICAL EDITORS

Says Organized Effort He Has Agreed to Finance Will Be Far from Revolutionary.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., March 24.—Andrew Carnegie issued a statement to-day expressing his views on the proposed reform of English spelling. It was as follows:

"From Chaucer's time, and before, till now, our language has been constantly changing and improving, not under any rule or system, but simply as occasion has required new words and new spellings.

"The great Oxford Dictionary, now under publication, gives the history of each word, and shows that words creep into our language in the most haphazard manner. A new word expresses a new want, or an old want better than the word in use did, and so forces itself into use. Nothing can bar it out, while the word invented with the strictest regard to rule may apply in vain. What is slang one year is correct English a few years later. Thus is our language enriched. It is a slow process, but a steady and sure one. All the struggles of pedants and purists are helpless against it.

"The organized effort I have agreed to finance is not revolutionary—far from it. Its action will be conservative. Word after word it will endeavor to improve the spelling and the language—slowly, of course, but hastening the pace if possible. That is all.

"The editors who are disposed to ridicule the effort themselves use words, and especially spellings, which their prdecessors of a century ago would have denounced as degrading to literature. The editors of the next century will in turn marvel over the uncouth spelling of our present scribes.

"Since our language has been constructed through unceasing change, literary men should welcome new words and new spellings with favoring eye, since it is by these alone that further improvement can come. Scholars denounced 'plow' for 'plough,' for instance. But 'plow' has been accepted. So with many words that will readily occur to readers.

"Our language is likely to prevail in the world, and we may hope it is to become finally the universal language, the most potent of all instruments for drawing the race together, insuring peace and advancing civilization. The foreigner has the greatest difficulty in acquiring it because of its spelling. This is, at least, his chief obstacle; for its grammar is easy.

"Hundreds of scholarly men have agreed to use improved spelling for twelve words. These words are already well started in actual use. Other simplifications will be suggested. If meritorious they will be accepted.

"Teachers have assured me that children would be saved more than a year's instruction if our spelling were simplified.

"Why the perverse 'ough' spellings should be continued one cannot understand. When we write 'tho' it expresses exactly the same sense as 'though,' and expresses the sound better. This change is so obviously advantageous that I find many already using it in writing, and some of these are British authors. Indeed, 'tho,' with the superfluous apostrophe, abounds in British authors from Addison down. We just drop the apostrophe. That 'tho' will get into general use soon is certain. Our successors will smile at the 'ough' spellings as we do to-day at what we call the 'queer' spelling of Chaucer.

"In trying to hasten the use of simplified spelling and to improve our own language for the struggle for first place which is even to-day upon us, we are engaged in a most useful work.

"If he be a benefactor who makes two blades of grass to grow where one grew before, he is no less a benefactor who plants a shorter and simply spelt word where a longer and irregularly spelt word cumbered the ground before.

"I hope that thoughtful people will give this important and conservative reform due consideration, and resolve to use at least two or three simplified words, and thus range themselves with us in our effort to carry on the unceasing work of improving our mother tongue, and adapting it for its noble purposes and high destiny."

SIMPLIFIED SPELLING.

Two Lines of Work, Requiring Patience and Discrimination.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A correspondent in your columns last week loses patience with the Simplified Spelling Board because it does not go far enough; it should, in his judgment, remake the alphabet, giving a letter for each sound, some forty in all. It is cheering to note that even the editor of THE TIMES, and the editors of some other leading dailies, think the board altogether "too cautious." Good! "The world do move" and Jasper be dead.

Your correspondent is right in his main contention, but he must be patient, and possibly a little more discriminating.

There are two distinct lines of work to be followed to get English scientifically spelled:

1. The line chosen by the board—that of a conservatively progressive evolution, aiming chiefly at the dropping of silent letters. This is simply to expedite a movement that has been going on during the past century or two—a movement that has made "clipped words" of "sonne," (son—Shakespeare,) "groupe," "publick," "bunn," &c., and which bids fair in the near future, under this new impetus, to give us "coquet," "fetus," "tipt," "tho," &c. A change in the form of a word is too great if it, to a considerable degree, takes the attention of the reader from the thought of the text, as would "trauf," (trough,) "tuff," (tough,) "ruff," (rough,) forms which, by the bye, were not adopted by the National Educational Association at its late meeting in Louisville, notwithstanding the repeated assertions by the press. The fact must be recognized that grown-up people are apt to be "sot in their ways." Too many and large jolts and shocks would cause the work of the board to become an impertinence, a revolution—not an evolution, and make it surely fail.

2. The line already followed in more than a few schools in the United States, namely, the training in phonetics by use of an alphabet almost ideally scientific that has been "prepared and promulgated" by the American Philological Association, the powers of the letters of which being similar to those used in the orthography of the United States Board of Geographical Names and in that of the Royal Geographical Society of England, and in the pronunciation of the Oxford Dictionary, which is being pushed to completion by the Philological Society of England, and is followed in the respelling of words for pronunciation in the Standard Dictionary and in some textbooks. This scientific alphabet keeps close to the common alphabet, and gives a symbol for each of the forty elementary sounds of the language.

It passes without saying that every schoolchild should be trained to detect and produce each of the sounds that make up spoken English. The drill in phonetics should begin early—in the kindergarten is not too soon; even better were it to begin in the nursery. Now, let this drill be combined with writing on blackboard, slate, or paper the symbols for the actual sounds in each word, using the scientific alphabet for this purpose; then the next generation will be altogether familiar with the form of each word when phonetically spelled, and no shock or jolt will be given, nor will the attention of the reader be arrested when newspaper, magazine, or book spells "thru," "jok," or any other word in a strictly phonetic way. The letters in this Philological Society's alphabet are so nearly like those of the common alphabet that no word is disguised beyond recognition to any reader of English who has not been thus trained. This work of drilling in phonetics is no innovation in our schools, and we are all accustomed to the use of this or other phonetic alphabet in the respelling of words for pronunciation in dictionaries and in readers and spellers.

The first branch of this twofold work is in the hands of men of tried nerve and level headedness. Like Diogenes, they can't be "derided" even by the typical funny man of the press whom the sight of phonetics is always sufficient to jovially inebriate. And it may be said of the Simplified Spelling Board, as Breckinridge said of Clay when a thunderstorm at Lexington knocked the head from his statue, "Nothing but a bolt of lightning could cause Clay to lose his head." We may all feel sure that this spelling movement is safely progressive in the hands of the twenty-eight men who are in control of it, and in a wise change of this sort we would all do well to ponder Guizot's words:

"Custom contracts our ideas with the circle it has traced for us; it governs us by the terror it inspires for any new and untried condition; it makes us believe the walls of the prison within which we are inclosed to be the boundary of the world, and beyond all is undefined, confusion, chaos, where, it makes us feel, we should not have air to breathe."

This undefined fear that is so apt to make "cowards of us all" has ever given slow progress to civilization. Why would it not be well for us just this once to look a wise, logical change straight in the face, taking counsel of our reason rather than of our inertia, superstitions, and fears?

SPELLING AND SOUND.

Cannot Indicate Peculiarities of Pronunciation by Characters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it not quite impossible to teach by written instructions how spoken words ought to be spelled or spelled words pronounced—not only English words, but words of any language? Is it not waste of time to try? Who can teach by such means how to pronounce "there" and "with"? Even vocal means commonly fail to teach the foreigner. Again, take the initial letter "r" in the simple word "rope." The Chinese would say "lope," the Italian "ropa," and there are some who know no other language than English who would say "wope" or "yope" or "ope." And so in other languages. The proper pronunciation of the French words "non," "monsieur," and "Versailles" cannot be learned from books. The Greeks have no letter in their alphabet that enables them to pronounce the proper name "Cicero" as the Italians pronounce it—"Tchitchero"—so they use the letter "kappa" and write "Kikero." If the Italians pronounced it as we do, "Sisero," they would use "sigma." We cannot spell "Cochran" or "Meagher" as the Irish pronounce those names. Strike out from the latter name the silent "e" and "g"; it does not help, for the Irish aspirate the "h" in the first syllable, and it must be heard to be learned.

There is no doubt that the spelling of English words can be improved, and I don't suppose that the scholars whom Mr. Carnegie has called together are likely to inflict on us such hideous monstrosities as "hwat," "hwen," "hwite," "hwy," &c., for it would help nobody; and though the aspirate in such words is dear to the American heart, if exhaustive to the lungs, I think it would be better to cut it out from such words altogether than transpose in such a way. But they can improve the spelling of such words as "sough," "enough," "tough," "rough," "thought," and many more. Would it not be well to call to their counsel some British scholars, so as, if possible, to come to a general agreement?

The vowels "e," "i," "o," and "u" can be doubled by putting a dash over them when long. It might not be difficult to invent some new characters for type, but not so easy for script.

Those scholars would confer a real boon if they could invent a new pronoun—an epicene pronoun—and save us from the cumbrous way of writing or saying "his or her." For example: "I don't know anybody who would want to spend his or her life pointing pins." You would commonly hear such a sentence spoken thus: "I don't know anybody who would like to spend their life pointing pins." Allow me to suggest a word—"om"—"Spend oms life." If anybody can invent a better, let om do it. I am willing; only let us have one.

THOMAS SCOTT.

Baldwin, N. Y., March 20, 1906.

Just a Few Inconsistencies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reading objections to simplified spelling in THE TIMES, the extent to which the logical perceptions of many people are obfuscated and bemuddled by having been taught the prevailing orthography is vividly and painfully apparent. They are evidently unable to perceive that if b-o-u-g-h spells bow, c-o-u-g-h logically spells cow. If d-o-u-g-h spells do, r-o-u-g-h must, of course, spell ro, &c. In fact, every one of those words ending in ough are spelled unpronouncably wrong.

It doesn't require a severe mental effort to perceive that if l-a-u-g-h-t-e-r spells lafter, s-l-a-u-g-h-t-e-r must perforce spell slafter. Wherein lies the difference between boor and door, pour, sour, and tour, and many other similarly constructed words?

The only logical effect of doubling a vowel is to prolong and intensify the alphabetic sound, as in door, floor, beer, deer, &c. By the use of double e instead of the bothersome ei and ie we would relieve, believe, and conceive of much incentive to profanity. There is no sound of o in such abortions as boor, moor, &c.

If children never knew of a spelling book they would spell many words better. Is the Dictionary verbally inspired? All that is needed to simplify spelling is to exercise logical common sense. Eliminate silent and superfluous letters. They are as useless and more pervasively obnoxious than the vermiform appendix. Use f for ph in such words as philosophy, j for soft g, and k or s where they belong, instead of the vacillating, occasional, unsuccessful c. More examples if required.

Not Pleased with the Columbia Sample

To the Editor of The New York Times:

And so the sorry looking mess that appears on page 9 of your to-day's issue is what Mr. Carnegie and his friends are pleased to call "reformed" English. I was not guilty of wading through the stuff. I merely glanced at it, shuddered, and passed on. If Mr. Carnegie himself knows how to spell English correctly, I take it for granted he will admit the rank and file of the American people are atrociously bad spellers, and this being so, I would suggest that if he really wishes to benefit his adopted country, he should endeavor to remedy this by bringing about a better teaching of orthography in the public schools. I have time and again seen letters written by children here supposed to be advanced in schooling, that would discredit an English schoolboy of eight. If this detestable rot is to obtain any footing in this country, for heaven's sake find a name for it, as English it is not, nor can Mr. Carnegie and this whole nation of eighty millions make it so.

APPLE JACK RECEIPT VOTED.

Ludicrous Developments in New Jersey Election Contest.

FREEHOLD, N. J., March 24.—The result of a long and hard-fought election contest will be made known on Monday, when Justice Charles E. Hendrickson, sitting with the County Board of Elections in the Monmouth County Shrievalty recount, will render his decision on a class of reserved ballots. On this decision rests the fate of the two candidates, C. Asa Francis (Rep.) of Long Branch and Charles E. Close (Dem.) of Matawan.

Francis is the present incumbent, having been declared elected by a majority of 85. Close, alleging that irregularities existed in various polling districts, got a recount. The mere recount, computing reserved ballots and all, resulted in a loss of forty votes for Francis.

Some of the errors of the voters were most ludicrous. In Manalapan Township a farmer voted a receipt for a load of apples delivered to an applejack distillery, while in Matawan Township an order for ten pounds of nails was voted for a ticket.

On the recount of the ballots in reserve the majority of Francis fell to 28. The decision promised for Monday and upon which rests the result of the contest, is a ruling upon the validity of two special classes of ballots.

DINNER FOR GIRL ATHLETE.

Hoboken's Strong Men Plan to Honor Miss Mary Ann Torpey.

Some Hoboken athletes are arranging a dinner at which Mary Ann Torpey, said to be the strongest woman in New Jersey, will be the guest of honor. She lives at Grand and Sixth Streets, Hoboken, with her parents and brothers.

She is 21 years old, weighs 175 pounds, and is six feet tall. She can carry a bale of hay to a barn loft. A few days ago a runaway horse was about to plunge into a crowd of school children when she seized the bridle and threw the animal to the pavement. At a recent milking contest she won the prize, and then swung Water Commissioner John J. Winberry, giver of the prize, over her shoulder.

ARRESTED GIRL FOR FUN.

Case Against Two Plain-Clothes Men Starts a John Doe Inquiry.

District Attorney Clarke of Brooklyn announced yesterday that he would begin John Doe proceedings to discover whether Policemen James Cooke and Charles Murphy, who is known as "Mile-a-Minute" Murphy, because of his prestige as a bicycle rider, were guilty of oppression in arresting May Taylor. She is a servant in the Hill section of Brooklyn.

Pending the investigation, Deputy Police Commissioner O'Keefe sent both plain clothes men back to patrol duty. Miss Taylor testified in the Adams Street Court on Friday afternoon that she was waiting for a car on Myrtle Avenue, when Murphy tapped her on the shoulder, saying:

"There's a friend over there who wants to speak to you."

She replied that she had no friends in that neighborhood, and started to walk away, when Cooke walked up and arrested her.

"I asked him what he arrested me for, and he replied, 'Just for fun,'" she testified.

FOR A 3-CENT FARE LINE.

Plans of the Independence League Railway Announced to Brooklyn.

A statement of the plans of the "Independence League Railway Company," proposing to operate a trolley line in opposition to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, was issued by Deputy County Clerk Bela Tokaji yesterday. It is proposed to solicit subscriptions at $10 a share, issuing $150,000 worth of the stock at once.

As soon as a franchise is obtained, the whole $3,000,000 capital will be offered to the public. Fares will be 3 cents, or two rides for a nickel, and any time the city wishes to purchase the railroad it may do so.

When asked what part of the borough the railroad would cover, Mr. Tokaji said it would run on Livingston Street, Court Street, and Flatbush Avenue.

"We would like to take in a line to New Utrecht," he said. Borough President Coler has promised support, he declared. Mr. Coler denied this yesterday.

Jersey City Brick Plant Burns Up.

Fire burned up the brick plant of the J. H. Gautier Company, at Greene and Essex Streets, Jersey City, last night, making a spectacular blaze, seen for miles around. As the plant of the Uvalde Asphalt Company is on one corner and the American Sugar Refineries plant on the other corner, three alarms were turned in. The fire was kept in the Gautier plant. It was erected a year ago at a cost of $100,000.

NEW MEDICAL BILL FAVORS NO SCHOOL

Public Health Committee of Assembly Issues a Statement.

COURT DECISIONS FOLLOWED

Qualification for Preliminary Education Not Changed—Test in Final Examination.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—The Public Health Committee of the Assembly, through Chairman Whitney of Saratoga, has issued a statement explaining its action in drawing an omnibus bill regulating medical practice. The statement says:

"The bill drawn by the commission defines the practice of medicine in accordance with the latest judicial determination of the courts of record of this State. It legislates out of office the present State Boards of Examiners, which are nominated by the various medical societies of the State, and substitutes for them a single State board, appointed by the Regents.

"Due care is taken to surround the appointment and the work of this board with all practical safeguards. The qualifications for preliminary education remain the same as under the present acts, and the subjects in the licensing examination are practically the same, except that bacteriology and medical jurisprudence are substituted for therapeutics and materia medica.

"This permits the State to make its licensing examination purely a test of scientific knowledge in accordance with the best practical school work of the day, and leaves to the medical schools themselves the test in the particular lines of practice which the school represents. By this means the State passes upon the general qualifications of the applicant without attempting in any wise to ascertain what school of medicine he belongs to or to recognize the various systems of medicine by prescribing tests therein.

"The latter part of the bill amends the legal procedure for prosecutions under the medical act, and the registration, annulment, and revocation of licenses. These amendments are purely in the interests of better enforcement of the law and are based upon the difficulties encountered in practical experience under the present law.

"The committee feels that its passage would settle the annually recurring question as to who should or should not practice the healing art in this State, and effectually protects the public from quacks, cranks, and untrained practitioners."

MAY NOT ADJOURN TILL MAY.

Insurance Bill Likely to Delay the State Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—Although the first of April is but a few days off, little, if any, talk is heard of the day when the Legislature is expected to conclude its labors. It is not believed that it will adjourn before the first week in May. The cause of the delay principally is the several insurance bills which are now under consideration by the Insurance Investigation Committee.

On Monday night in the Senate the amended bill, which legislates the trustees of the big mutual companies out of office in November next, will come up for final passage. Opposition to this bill is expected to come from Senators Malby, Grady, and McCarren. It is not thought that the other insurance bills will be handed in until the week after next. There seems to be a difference of opinion among the committee regarding the bill providing for a plan of mutualization. This measure appears to be the stumbling block, and will cause whatever delay there is in the presentation of the various bills.

ANOTHER WATER MAIN FLOOD.

Four Hours Before Torrent from a Brooklyn Break Is Checked.

Water flowed four hours unchecked from a break in a twenty-inch water main in Adams Street, Brooklyn, early yesterday, streets and cellars were flooded, and much property damage was caused. The break occurred at Water Street, near the anchorage for the new Manhattan Bridge. The water soon was ten inches deep in the street.

It was two hours before any one connected with the Water Department could be reached. Because of a cave-in at the water gate at the corner, earth had to be dug out before the gate could be closed. Controller Metz sent an inspector from his office to investigate. He will urge that the Fire Department be supplied with maps showing all water gates in the city, so that firemen can turn off the water at once.

Ice Cream Plant Burns; $100,000 Loss.

Fire destroyed the plant of the New Jersey Ice Cream Company in Front Street, Newark, N. J., late last night, and with it the grocery warehouse of Samuel Shire & Son adjoining. The loss was estimated at $100,000.

LIKE a trip to Paris will be a visit to the Spring opening of our millinery department Monday, March 26th.

We believe that we have ready for your inspection in our new show rooms one of the choicest arrays of millinery that has ever been gathered together.

It contains mostly creations of Georgette, Caroline Reboux, Charlotte and other famous designers of Paris, all chosen personally by our own buyer and imported direct.

No less charming are the original creations of our own French designers. Our stock, therefore, offers a wide range of choice and insures your getting always something individual and distinctive.

The accepted ornaments this season are mainly feathers and flowers. Colorings present almost an unlimited variety.

Whatever is in good form, either in coloring or design, you will find in our display and always worked into materials of unquestioned quality.

Quite as important as the selection of the hat is the choice of veils and other toilet finishings. Never before has Paris given to the world such a variety of effective designs in veils, boas, hand-embroidered neckwear, belts of every description, and hair ornaments.

We can show not a few that we are positive will not be exhibited in any other store in America this season.

We invite all those interested in the rarest selections of Spring millinery to come to our store Monday, March 26th.

ALL FLED BUT A NEGRO.

He Stayed Behind in Gambling House to Meet Police Raiders.

The forces of Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Hodgins were united yesterday afternoon to raid an alleged gambling house in West Thirty-first Street. The ground floor is occupied by Wallace Sweeney's café, and an hour after the raid Detective Brosnan arrested Sweeney as the keeper of the alleged gambling house.

For some time the Tenderloin sleuths had been gathering evidence against the place. Yesterday afternoon Lohmeyer, Higgins, and Lemmon, of the Inspector's staff, and McGee and Roy of the Captain's staff, were assigned to raid it. McGee and Lohmeyer crawled up the back stairs, forced a wooden door, and swooped into a room on the second floor.

The detectives had heard many voices and the shuffling of many feet in the room, but when they got in there was no one in sight but a meek negro. He was dusting the furniture. They arrested him on the charge of aiding and abetting in the maintenance of a gambling house. It was told to him that way. He was very much shocked. He said he was John Dorcy, who lived next door.

The furniture which John Dorcy was dusting consisted primarily of three faro layouts, a roulette wheel, and other gambling apparatus.

Not even one duster was found on the third floor. But a fire was burning brightly, and scattered about were cards and chips and racing sheets. These, along with several telephones and the rest of the paraphernalia, were taken to the Tenderloin Station. Concealed in the wall on the fourth floor was a door leading next door. It was half open. The detectives couldn't understand why John Dorcy, the duster, hadn't gone out that way, too, as the others doubtless had done.

The reserves had to be called out to handle the crowd that was determined to see every article that was put in the patrol wagon.

New Haven Road Watchman's Escape —Central Trackwalker Killed.

Charles Van Ward, watchman for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, at 165th Street and Park Avenue, was hurled to an embankment thirty feet high by a train yesterday. He escaped with a scalp wound and bruises.

Patrick Murphy of 169 East 112th Street, a track walker on the New York Central, was preparing the tools for a gang of laborers just north of the Park Avenue tunnel at Ninety-eighth Street when a southbound train came along early yesterday. He stepped out of its way right in front of a northbound train and was killed instantly. He leaves a widow and three children.

New Version of the Cause of His Fatal Fight with Branch Evokes Applause for Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—After devoting an hour to the passage of several hundred private pension bills to-day, the House went to the relief of the hazers of the Annapolis Naval Academy, and passed a bill permitting the Superintendent of the Academy and the Secretary of the Navy to substitute something else for dismissal in the way of punishment for hazing, if they found the case to be of a mild nature, and not "cruel or brutal."

It is a bill drawn by the Vreeland Subcommittee of the House Committee on Naval Affairs, which went down to the Academy and investigated the conditions there. The Senate had already passed a bill mollifying the rigors of the present law, which makes dismissal mandatory upon conviction of hazing. The House substituted the Vreeland bill for the Senate measure.

The first section of the Vreeland bill has nothing to do with hazing, but is designed to assist the Superintendent of the Naval Academy in preserving discipline. It provides that whenever the Superintendent believes a midshipman should be dismissed for any cause, he may certify the case to the Secretary of the Navy, who shall cite the accused to show cause why he should not be dismissed. After consideration of the middy's case the Secretary of the Navy may, with the approval of the President, dismiss him.

At the same time that it permits the infliction of milder punishment than dismissal, the Vreeland bill adds a provision which, if enforced, is very likely to make hazing extremely unpopular. It is that in cases of brutal or cruel hazing the court-martial may sentence the convicted defendant to imprisonment not exceeding one year, provided the imprisonment shall not be with men who have been convicted of crimes or misdemeanors.

The bill gives the Superintendent of the Academy discretion as to ordering a court-martial for trial of a hazing case. Hazing is defined as "any unauthorized assumption of authority by one midshipman over another," and it is specifically made the duty of every officer, instructor, professor, or cadet officer to report to the Superintendent any fact which may come to his attention tending to indicate any violation of the regulations of the law. The failure on the part of a commissioned officer so to report renders him liable to dismissal from the navy. Any of the midshipmen now under charges and liable to court-martial are, under this bill, authorized to waive that trial and accept punishment from the Superintendent.

In opening the debate on the bill Mr. Vreeland described the visit of his subcommittee to Annapolis, and told again the circumstances of the fatal Branch-Meriwether fight. He gave a new version of the cause of that fight, telling how Branch went to Meriwether's room, and seeing a letter from Meriwether's grandmother there, had read it and criticised the spelling, the writing, and the paper. To that he added insulting comments about a picture of the grandmother, upon which Meriwether asked him to fight then and there. Branch refused, but said he would accept a challenge.

"I want you to pass your opinion," said Mr. Vreeland, "as to whether the young man now serving the sentence for that fight should not receive a full and free pardon from the President. I say the boy that would not resent such an insult as was given to Meriwether on that occasion is not fit to carry his country's commission."

"There are 281 midshipmen of the upper classes implicated in cases of hazing," continued Mr. Vreeland, "but in the great majority of them the offense is trivial—merely the outbreak of boyish spirits. There was only one case of which we heard that was genuinely serious. You couldn't put your finger on any one, or two, or three men who are to blame. One or two officers may be censurable to some degree, but in the main it is the change in the possibility of discipline that is responsible.

"The great changes in the buildings brought about by the construction of the new Academy have greatly increased the difficulties of the officers. The number of midshipmen has been largely increased and the old corps of officers changed. The changes, to which the Academy has not yet adjusted itself, are really more to blame for this outbreak of hazing than anything else. We went there thinking that the officers must be to blame, but we were forced to change our minds by the facts that were presented to us. When Admiral Brownson left the Superintendency of the Academy he called in the upper classes and absolved them from their pledge to him not to take part in hazing. The committee regards this as unfortunate."

"Speaking as a civilian," replied Mr. Vreeland, "I should say that it should be the whole basis and foundation. There must be sufficient supervision by commissioned officers to see that the cadet officers are carrying out their duties. Admiral Sands, the present Superintendent, is absolutely with Congress and the country in the dispostion to suppress hazing. No man could have been more energetic in taking up these cases.

"It is proposed for the future to keep the board of investigation in operation, and at least once a month, or oftener if found advisable, summon the cadets before it and require then to answer as to what is going on among them. Admiral Sands may be relied upon to punish promptly the insubordination of any cadet who refuses to answer."

Only a handful of members opposed the bill, and only two spoke in favor of rigorous treatment of the midshipmen. W. Kitchin of North Carolina was one of these and Col. Hepburn the other. Mr. Kitchin did not like the Vreeland bill because it did not go far enough. He wanted the Academy authorities to have full authority to handle hazing off-hand.

"For thirty-two years," he said, "Congress has been striving to secure obedience at the Naval Academy as to hazing. Thirty-two years ago a law was passed authorizing a court-martial to fix the very punishment that is now demanded."

Representative Lacy, who procured the passage of the bill restoring the three midshipmen who were dismissed two or three years ago for hazing, interrupted to say that Col. Hepburn was mistaken as to that old law.

"I am not content to take you as authority," retorted Col. Hepburn. "I followed you once and have been sorry ever since. This lamentable condition, this condition of practical mutiny at the Naval Academy, exists as the result of the unfortunate action of the House in following your leadership.

"I have no sympathy with all this talk of 'boys' and the 'pranks of boys.' It is not a mere prank to violate the law of the land. Their action was a considered, deliberate defiance of authority. It was a refusal of obedience, a refusal to recognize discipline, a refusal to fit themselves for the higher duties incumbent upon them. Instead of being a calamity to dismiss all these young men it would be an incalculable benefit if thereby those remaining were converted from boys into proper naval commanders.

"I have read a list of twenty-six naval vessels cast away and destroyed in the last twenty-five years. Look at the list of casualties to our vessels now. A squadron going out of the harbor of New York, with which the naval officers ought to be familiar—what a calamitous result that effort to take them out of New York Harbor was! Two of them in collision and two of them landed in the mud. Almost every month you read of some mark of inefficiency upon the part of those who are charged with the conduct and management of the navy. Why is it? Why should it be so? We pay enough to create our navy; we pay enough to give scholastic information to these cadets of ours. I take it it is because of something else, something of the higher grade of qualification in the naval officers that is lacking.

"We do not punish naval officers. Of the twenty-six instances that I have referred to, the severest punishment inflicted upon any officer was the decision of a court-martial that he should be put upon shore pay for three years, and that was cut down by the clemency of the Executive in two years. That was the severest penalty. There is no punishment inflicted upon naval officers except in most extraordinary cases, but a system of court-martials, court-martials selected from among the friends and associates and old classmates of the man who is to be tried. It is a mockery, a mockery, and it results in, I believe, this condition of inefficiency."

Several amendments were offered, but only one, that of Col. Hepburn, was adopted. It added the cadet officers to those whose duty it is to report violations of the regulations to the Superintendent of the Academy. The bill was passed by acclamation.

BIG UNION IN POLITICS.

Federation of Labor Committee Urges Party of Workers.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The Executive Council of the Federation of Labor to-day reaffirmed its decision and the decision of the American Federation of Labor relative to political action as follows:

"We reaffirm as one of the cardinal principles of the trades union movement that the working people must unite and organize, irrespective of creed, color, sex, nationality, or politics.

"That the American Federation of Labor most firmly and unequivocally favors the independent use of the ballot by the trade unionists and workingmen, united regardless of party, that we may elect men from our own ranks to make new laws and administer them along the lines laid down in the legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor, and at the same time secure an impartial judiciary that will not govern us by arbitrary injunctions of the courts, nor act as pliant tools of corporate wealth.

"That as our efforts are centred against all forms of industrial slavery and economic wrong, we must also direct our utmost energies to remove all forms of political servitude and party slavery, to the end that the working people may act as a unit at the polls at every election."

The policy of questioning candidates for office upon questions affecting the interests of labor and the people generally was decided to be continued and more aggressively prosecuted.

MEDICINE MAKERS' PLEA.

Want Secretly to Use Alcohol and Drugs in Small Quantities.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Proprietary medicine manufacturers had a hearing to-day before a sub-committee of the House Committee on Inter-State and Foreign Commerce on the proposed amendment by Representative Lovering of Massachusetts to the Pure Food bill.

The amendment would permit the use of a limited amount of alcohol, opium, cocaine, and other poisonous substances in patent medicines without a statement on labels that they are contained in the preparation.

George S. Douglass, attorney for the Proprietary Association of America, declared that alcohol is necessary as a solvent and preservative in certain medicines. He urged that its use be permitted in a quantity not in excess of the amount shown to be necessary by the United States Phamacoepea or the National Formulary.

Where the alcohol is in such small quantities in a preparation that it cannot possibly be regarded as a beverage Mr. Douglass insisted that it was an injustice to require a label announcing the presence of alcohol as it would prejudice many users against the preparation. He declared that many of the statements made about deaths from headache powders were false, and also discredited the charges that soothing syrups produce many fatalities.

COST OF SEED DISTRIBUTION.

Mr. Cortelyou Says It Is $34,500 Annually—Mails Clogged.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Postmaster General Cortelyou has supplied Representative Tawney, Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, with a memorandum as to the actual cost to the Post Office Department of handling the seeds furnished by the Department of Agriculture for free distribution.

"As nearly as can be estimated, the cost of carrying a pound of this mail matter varies from 5 to 8 cents," he says. "I have been informed that the aggregate weight of vegetable and flower seeds distributed annually by the Department of Agriculture under frank is 690,000 pounds. The estimated number of packages is 7,300,000. Computing at the lowest estimate—3 cents a pound—the cost of handling this matter is $34,500."

He points out that the 7,300,000 packages clog the mails and take up the time of a large number of clerks and carriers which might be otherwise profitably employed.

BOARD SHOWS DANGER TO NIAGARA FALLS

American Commissioners Ask for Action by Congress.

GREAT DIVERSION OF WATER

Canadian Commissioners Ask for More Time, but Agree on Necessity of Action.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—If Niagara Falls are to be preserved as one of the wonders of the world, immediate action by the United States and Canada is required, according to the findings of the American members of the International Waterways Commission, which for a year has been studying the conditions at the Falls and in the tributary great lakes. This report is signed by Gen. O. H. Ernst, Chairman; and the other American members of the commission.

The report gives a detailed account of all the corporations now engaged in the development of power, with the quantities of water used, and authorized to be used.

"The total quantity of water to be taken from the river by works now authorized," says the report, "is 60,900 cubic feet per second. Of this amount 26,700 cubic feet are to be taken on the American side, and the remainder, 34,200 cubic feet, on the Canadian side. That is, 27 per cent. of the average discharge and 33 per cent. of the low water discharge of the Niagara River will cease to pass over the falls when these works are completed and in full operation.

"The quantity to be diverted is more than double the quantity which now passes over the American Fall, which at the average stage is about 27,800 cubic feet. That this will in general have an injurious effect upon the falls seems self-evident. The volume of water to be diverted is about the equivalent of the entire discharge of Lake Superior over the Sault Ste. Marie. The amount thus far actually diverted is but 17,800 cubic feet per second, and has had an appreciable effect upon the Falls.

"To foretell with accuracy the effects in detail of the full diversion authorized would require a more complete knowledge of the bed of the river than is now obtainable. The water taken on the Canadian side below the crest of the rapids will affect the Horseshoe Falls alone. If all that taken on the American side should affect the American Fall alone, it would practically leave it dry; but it seems probable that only a part of this diversion will be at the expense of the American Fall.

"In return for the impairment of the Falls, thus far authorized, the State of New York will receive practically nothing for the 342,000 horse power authorized on that side, and the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park will receive an annual rental of $270,000, or an average of 65 cents per horse power for the 415,000 horse power authorized on the Canadian side.

"Improvements in the transmission of electric power and increased demand will make a market for all the power which can be developed at Niagara Falls, and will cause a destruction of the Falls as a scenic spectacle if the development be allowed to go on unchecked. Charters have been granted to corporations which propose to divert additional amounts in quantities not now limited.

"The sums of money invested, or being invested, in the works now in operation or under construction, and in the industries dependent upon them, amount to many millions of dollars. It is probably not expedient to attempt the withdrawal of the rights thus utilized.

"The commercial value of the water power at Niagara Falls is very great, but if compared with values set aside by wealthy communities elsewhere for park purposes, this value is not too great to be devoted to similar purposes. The place is visited annually by about 800,000 people.

"If the Falls are to be preserved it must be by mutual argreement between the two countries. As a step in that direction we recommend that legislation be enacted which shall contain the following provisions:

The Secretary of War to be authorized to grant permits for the diversion of 28,500 cubic feet per second, and no more, from the waters naturally tributary to Niagara Falls, distributed as follows: Niagara Falls Hydraulic Power and Manufacturing Company, 9,500; Niagara Falls Power Company, 8,600; Erie Canal or its tenants, (in addition to lock service,) 400; Chicago Drainage Canal, 10,000.

All other diversion of water which is naturally tributary to Niagara Falls to be prohibited, except such as may be required for domestic use or for the service of locks in navigation canals. Suitable penalties for violation of the law to be prescribed.

The foregoing prohibition to remain in force two years, and then to become the permanent law of the land, if in the meantime the Canadian Government shall have enacted legislation prohibiting the diversion of water which is naturally tributary to Niagara Falls in excess of 36,000 cubic feet per second, not including the amounts required for domestic use or for the service of locks in navigation canals.

"The substance of this report was submitted to our Canadian colleagues. There was a substantial agreement in the statement of facts, and such differences as developed with respect to the recommendations which ought to be made did not seem insuperable, but our colleagues desired time for further consideration. We have no doubt of their sympathetic interest."

OILS BY STEPHEN PARRISH.

At the Macbeth Gallery, No. 237 Fifth Avenue, has been an attractive little exhibition of oils painted by Mr. Stephen Parrish, the father of the cartoonist, Maxfield Parrish, who is best known as an etcher and illustrator. Philadelphia used to be his stamping ground, but, foreseeing the approaching merger of that city with New York across the State of New Jersey, the provident artist has fled to Windsor, Vermont, and taken to painting.

Of varied power and different degrees of interest are the twenty-six oils, landscapes, townscapes, and marines which fill the little gallery. He paints both clouds, white and gray, ruddy cloud and purple, in such landscapes as "Breezy Day," "Summer Clouds," "St. Raphael, France," and "Uplands." He tries his hand at feats of aerial magic in "Foggy Morning, Annisquam," and "Canadian Mills, Twilight." He is more successful in pearly gray, pellucid views, such as "Abandoned Mill," "A Gray Day," and "September Moonrise." Best of all are crisp, brightly colored scenes in foreign towns like "Ponte Vecchio, Florence," "A Paris Suburb, Evening," and "Market Place, Yvetot, Normandy." In these his training as an etcher tells and he gives a strong picturesque accent which is far from unsuccessful. Yet one need not fail to appreciate the simple colorful effect of "Swamp," "Goose Cove, Cape Ann," and "Salt Marsh," in which the red flowers in the foreground strike a good note, and "Gloucester Harbor."

The Macbeth Galleries will remove in May to 450 Fifth Avenue, just below Fortieth Street, on the west side of the avenue. The top story of the building is now receiving the skylights of two main galleries 30 by 30 and the lights for other rooms. The establishment will be 100 feet in depth. As this gallery has made a specialty of American paintings it is a good thing that there will be much larger wall space and far better light for exhibitions of native work than was possible in the present quarters.

HELD AS SAFE BURGLARS.

Three Taken in Attorney Street Raid Committed to Await Evidence.

Three prisoners who called themselves Oscar Kirshon, Herman Friedles, and Abe Epstein, were remanded by Magistrate Barlow, in Jefferson Market Court, yesterday to Brooklyn headquarters that the police might have time to search for evidence connecting them with the stealing of a safe containing $3,700 from Meyer Mirsky, at 871 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, on March 14. The safe was found next day in front of 709 Sixth Street, Manhattan, rifled.

Inspector McLaughlin believes that his detectives have discovered in the Attorney Street saloon, where the arrests were made late Friday night, a rendezvous for thieves and crooks. Kirshon recently bought the saloon. The police raided it and got thirteen prisoners. Kirshon, Friedles, and Epstein were held on suspicion of committing the Mirsky burglary, while the other ten were locked up as suspicious persons. About three weeks ago a safe was carried away from a Seventh Street butcher's shop and was found, broken open, in Sixth Street, about half a block from where Mirsky's safe was found.

PRESIDENT DELIGHTED WITH TILLMAN'S WORK

Asks His Friends to Support South Carolinian on Rates.

HOPE FOR UNAMENDED BILL

Tillman's Repeated Criticisms of the Federal Courts Are Not Displeasing to Roosevelt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The President is de-light-ed with the way in which Senator Tillman handles the Rate bill in the debate now going on in the Senate. The glee with which the railroad Senators, Aldrich, Elkins, Kean, and their friends put the bill in the hands of a Democrat to make the situation look ridiculous and paste on the measure the onus of minority championship turns out to be a laugh on the other side of the mouth.

The President believes that Tillman is doing yeoman service for the people in his way of conducting the debate. His phrase "cornfield law" is already a favorite at the White House. The obstructionist tactics that so long harassed the President have been smashed effectually of late by Tillman's sledge hammer blows at Senators who succeeded splendidly while the bill was in committee in getting nothing at all done.

The situation now affords the President full compensation for all the worry and annoyance he suffered in the dreary wait after proposing rate legislation. He has told his allies on the Republican side of the Senate to stand by to help Tillman in every way then can.

There had been fear that when Tillman tried to match the lawyers of the Senate in legal debate he would get worsted. But the way that the South Carolina Senator handled his cornfield-law argument yesterday reassured the President.

The repeated declaration by Tillman that the Federal courts are not trusted in many parts of the country by the people has not ruffled the President's satisfaction at Tillman's course. He is inclined to believe that the Senator is taking just the right course to set the country to thinking of the question of the Federal judiciary system. The Swayne impeachment case and the arbitrary rulings of Judge Pardee recently in a railroad case in Florida as shown by Senators Tillman and Bailey the other day in the Senate have not served to remove the President's disposition to believe that there is room for improving the judicial system of the general Government.

The President is best pleased with Tillman's uncompromising demand from day to day that the Inter-State Commerce Commission shall not be made the plaything of Federal Judges who would on slight pretext grant preliminary injunctions against new rates. The President still holds that the only real remedy to be had will be found in a strong law that will regulate at once and without long delays in the courts. He will not only not put a straw in Tillman's way while trying to get the Hepburn bill passed as it stands, without the right to enjoin being allowed, but he will urge his friends in the Senate to stand by him and struggle for this to the end.

There is an increasing number of the President's advisers, both in the Cabinet and in the Senate, who believe that the unamended Hepburn bill will pass, because a majority cannot be mustered for any one amendment. A majority of the Senate may favor amending the bill, but nobody has yet been able to convince a majority that his particular amendment will work.

While confusion of counsels thus reigns among the Senators, one man has been pushing steadily ahead and driving constantly at one purpose. That man is Tillman, and, despite the personal feeling that has existed between the two men, the President has thoroughly admired his course.

Charity Magazines Combine.

"Jewish Charities," a monthly magazine hitherto published by the United Hebrew Charities of New York, has been united with "Charities and Commons." It is believed that the combined magazine may be published more economically, and will be of greater service to more readers than were the three when published separately as "Charities," "The Commons," and "Jewish Charity." The characteristics of all are to be retained, including their editors, Edward T. Devine, Graham, Taylor, and Lee K. Frankel.

SYMBOLS AND PORTRAITS.

Recent and Late Work by Jef Leempoels, the Belgian, at Knoedler's.

A very prominent individuality shows itself at first glance in the baker's dozen of portraits and imaginative paintings by Mr. Jef Leempoels of Brussels exhibited at the Knoedler Galleries. A sombre allegory like "Destiny and Humanity," reproduced some time ago in the Sunday Supplement of this paper; the severe, almost dogged, faces of the two elderly men in "Friendship"; the face of "In Tears," and such pictures as "The Hair Splitter" and "Workmen" offer material for thought so far removed from the portraits of ladies in evening dress that the collocation of such divergent ideas in the same exhibition gives a kind of shock. A certain sturdy simplicity which is part of Mr. Leempoel's method makes the portraits of men less disturbing. That of Mr. Pierre Mali, the Belgian Consul, and that of Mr. Henry Siegel have this directness. The interest is bound to centre, however, on the pictures that reflect the old painters of the Netherlands.

Perhaps the main charm in these pictures is the impression they give of patient, unhurried achievement. The absence of bravura painting is grateful. We have so much high-strung, dashing portraiture nowadays that it ends by getting on one's nerves. Painting, instead of being a refuge from the rush and crush of modern life, reflects that overwrought movement alone, and after admiring the smartness of the painter we turn away, very content that others should have such noisy art on their walls.

If Mr. Leempoels intends to devote himself to portraiture he is likely to succeed best with men. Better than portraiture, however, is the imaginative picture, which is all the more needed because so few are willing to attempt a branch of painting little understood and offering few avenues of sale.

DUPLICATED PAY ACCOUNTS.

Lieut. Cravens, on Trial, Says It Was a Mistake, and He Made Good.

First Lieut. Lanier Cravens of the Artillery Corps was court-martialed in the Army Building yesterday on charges of conduct unbecoming a gentleman and duplicating his pay accounts. Lieut. Cravens, who is stationed at Portland, Me., acted as his own counsel, while Major David C. Shanks was prosecutor.

Major Shanks called Major Lord of the Paymaster's Department of the army, who said he received a letter from Cravens on Feb. 2 transferring his January account to Moses M. Gould. The money was paid to Gould, Major Lord said, and there was nothing to lead him to believe that there had been any false or fraudulent transaction.

Col. C. C. Sniffen, also of the Paymaster's Department, next testified that he had paid the January account to Lieut. Cravens.

Lieut. Cravens said he had borrowed money from his mother to make good the duplication, and, after paying the money and getting a receipt, had written Gen. Dodge in Washington about the matter. He said it was his first mistake of the kind.

"Did you not transfer to Louis Silverman in July, 1902, an indorsement which was a duplication?" Major Shanks asked.

"I wish to correct the previous statement," answered Cravens. "I did give Silverman an indorsement, and when I learned that I had duplicated my account I made good."

The trial ended without argument. The findings will go to Gen. F. D. Grant.

MISSING HEIR SWINDLE BEING WORKED AGAIN

Inquiries Sent to Diplomats in Holland and Germany.

G. P. BAKER ESTATE A MYTH

Bank of Holland, in Which Unclaimed Millions Are Said to be Stored, Is Also Non-Existent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The State Department has had its attention called by diplomatic agents in Holland and Germany to the fact that there has been a revival on a large scale of inquiries about "estates" said to be held in foreign banks awaiting heirs. Much of the activity is said to centre in Philadelphia, a number of requests for information having named attorneys or agents in that city.

Joseph I. Brittain, Consul at Kehl, Germany, and David J. Hill, Minister at The Hague, have both called the attention of the department to this subject, and each cites a case in which Pennsylvanians are interested.

Consul Brittain explodes the "George Peter Baker estate" bubble. Baker is said to have lived at or near Kehl, and the "heirs" have been told by Philadelphians that $2,500,000 is theirs for a modest outlay to pay for legal preliminaries. The investigation was made at the request of Mrs. L. J. Hinks of St. Paul, Minn., who was one of the various "heirs." The Consul declares that no such estate exists, and, in fact, he has been unable to verify the allegation that one George Peter Baker ever lived at Kehl or at any other point in his Consular district. He warns the "heirs" against "sending good money after bad."

Minister Hill, in a letter to the department, goes into the subject of "fake" estates with great detail. He explains that there is no such institution as the "Bank of Holland," in which the unclaimed millions are invariably said to be stored. More than that, in all Holland there is no such thing as an estate held in chancery indefinitely, all such estates going to the Government after a period of five years. The commission which investigates such estates has absolutely no "unfinished business" on its docket, and joins with the American diplomatic representative in warning Americans against being humbugged.

Minister Hill in his letter makes this reference to a claim in which Pennsylvanians, apparently, are chiefly interested:

"A clipping, which I inclose, describes a meeting held at York, Penn., on Nov. 2, 1905, of seventy-five heirs, under the leadership of 'Attorney W. E. Bradley and Mrs. Mary V. McDonald,' both of Philadelphia. This article also states that each individual was allowed to contribute what he thought proper toward the prosecution of his claim. As this matter has assumed such large proportions, and as it seems reasonable to suppose that a large number of unsuspecting people are contributing money to an enterprise in which there is absolutely no hope of return, I have taken the liberty of submitting the matter to the department for such action as it may think proper to take toward warning the public as to the unreliability of the statements made by persons soliciting funds for the prosecution of claims to estates in this country."

2 MURDERERS HANGED; MOB AFTER SOUVENIRS

DRIVEN OFF BY SHERIFF

Johnson Confessed, but Small Said He Was Innocent, and Keeper Believed Him.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., March 24.—Rufus Johnson and George Small, the two negroes convicted of the murder of Miss Florence W. Allinson at her home, the Orchards, in Moorestown, N. J., on Jan. 18 last, were hanged in the jail yard here this morning. Before going to the gallows Johnson made a full confession, but Small protested his innocence to the last.

Both negroes met death with fortitude. They were hanged on the same gallows. The drop fell at 10:10 A. M., and they were pronounced dead twelve minutes later. A post-mortem examination showed that the necks of both men had been broken.

A great crowd of morbidly curious people assembled about the prison, beginning at daylight. They even sought vantage points on neighboring roofs, in their eagerness to see the two negroes die. After the execution the crowd rushed into the jail yard and began cutting off buttons and portions of the clothing worn by the murderers. The crowd hauled and tugged at the bodies, fought among themselves, and tore the clothing into shreds in their eagerness to get it, until the Sheriff finally was informed and the mob was driven away.

"Jersey justice" lived up to its best traditions in the swift meting out of punishment to the two negroes. The crime for which they suffered the extreme penalty was committed little more than two months ago. Their trial consumed less than ten hours, including the time occupied by the jury in its deliberations.

The procession to the gallows started shortly after 10 o'clock. Accompanied by their spiritual advisers, the Rev. James E. Groves of this town and the Rev. Thomas J. Oliver of Moorestown, two negro ministers, Deputy Sheriff Fleetwood, State Detective Parker, and the death watch, the two condemned men left their cells, and, walking down the prison stairs, passed through the kitchen and the bakery to the jail yard. After passing around a corner of the prison building they came in full view of the gallows, but showed no fear. They walked up the steps to the trap platform as calmly as any of those accompanying them. Sheriff Norcross lost no time in adjusting the black caps and the nooses and springing the double trap.

Johnson before leaving his cell made the following statement: "I am prepared to meet my God, and I want the whole world to meet me in heaven. I am sorry the crime was committed, but I have taken it to God and He has forgiven me."

Small, with whom the Rev. Mr. Oliver had spent more than half the preceding night and the hours immediately before the hanging in an effort to obtain a confession, said: "I want to meet all my friends in heaven. God be my help. As far as I am concerned, I am not guilty of the crime. I am a child of God, and this is the moment I will be made free. I hold no malice toward any one. I did not kill Miss Allinson. That statement is true and the Lord knows it is."

One of Small's keepers said he had overheard a statement by Johnson that partially exonerated Small from connection with the murder of Miss Allinson, and added that from what he had heard Johnson and Small say since Small's trial, he believed an innocent man had been hanged.

Small professed to have been converted. Like Johnson, he arose at 6 o'clock. After partaking of the usual prison breakfast, he was joined by the minister. They sang a hymn and prayed together. Small at one time seemed nervous and on the verge of collapse, but as the hour for the execution approached he regained his composure. Johnson was cool all the time, and said he was glad the execution was at hand as he was anxious to have it over with.

Daniels Lands Another Record.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 24.—The New York Athletic Club swimmers wound up their Western trip to-night with a final sweeping defeat of the Missouri Athletic Club men in every one of the five events on the programme. C. M. Daniels, in his match against Marquand Schwartz, added another to his long list of new records, swimming 50 yards in 25 1-5 seconds, which clipped 1-5 of a second off the best American figures for the distance. The wonderful Gotham swimmer did not appear to exert himself at all, and it appeared as though he could easily have bettered this mark had he been so inclined.

Trubenbach defeated Otto Schwartz in a 50-yard match, covering the distance in 27 seconds, while in the back-stroke race, 150 yards, Ruberl defeated Goessling in 2:02 2-5. Adams defeated Newcomb by 5 feet in the plunging contest, making 68 feet in his best effort, against the Missourian's 63.

The water polo match under American rules was won by the New York men by a score of 5 goals to 1. The summaries follow:

Plunge for Distance—Adams, N. Y. A. C., 68 feet, won; Newcomb, M. A. C., second, 63 feet.

50-Yard Swim, Match.—Daniels, N. Y. A. C., won; M. Schwartz, M. A. C., second. Time—0:25 1-5.

150-Yard Back Stroke.—Ruberl, N. Y. A. C., won; Goessling, M. A. C., second. Time—2:03 2-5.

GIVES PRINCETON TOWN HALL.

Mrs. Swan's Will Provides for Remodeling Belgarde—Other Bequests.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 24.—Through the will of Mrs. J. Thompson Swan, Princeton Borough will have one of the finest Town Halls in New Jersey. The beautiful old family place, Belgarde, with its acres of surrounding grounds, opening on two of the principal streets, will soon be in the hands of the borough, and work will be immediately started to fit the place for its municipal functions. In addition to the valuable property, Mrs. Swan has left $25,000 to be used in remodeling the house for its more public uses, and another $30,000 is to be invested in good securities, so that the interest can be applied to the care and maintenance of the grounds and building.

The will provides that the spacious grounds surrounding the structure shall be used for a public park. The property is in the centre of town, two blocks from the home of ex-President Grover Cleveland, and it promises to afford a great treat to the people of Princeton. For the additional pleasure of the community the entire collection of art works, which Mrs. Swan took years to gather, has been left to be used in ornamenting the new hall, which is to bear the name Thompson Hall.

The publication of the will has made known the details of the large bequest which the university is to receive for the purpose of erecting a graduate school at the cost of about $300,000, and establishing the John R. Thompson Fellowships. The building will contain sitting and sleeping rooms for the students and officers, with a dining hall, kitchen, and all necessary appurtenances. The living rooms are to be rented to the students, and the income derived from such rentals, after deducting the cost of maintaining the building, shall be devoted to the maintenance of as many fellowships at $400 each as the funds will provide.

The fellows, to a number not exceeding thirty, are to have rooms free of charge, and their tuition must be remitted by the Trustees of the university. This will afford a splendid opportunity for graduate work to many who formerly could not have afforded it. All money left over from the fellowships shall be placed in an endowment fund, the income of which, after the fund reaches $100,000, shall be applied to a University Professorship in American history.

REVOLVER MEET CLOSES.

Shooting with accurate aim John A. Dietz, the National ex-champion, last night furnished with the highest score in this city for the National championship with both pistol and revolver. Lieut. Reginald H. Sayre, also an ex-champion and winner last year with the pistol, was second to Dietz. The competitions were held in the gallery of the Manhattan Rifle and Revolver Association, 100th Street and Broadway, in this city, and simultaneously shot in Boston, Springfield, Mass.; Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Pine Bluff, Ark., and Pinehurst, N. C. All of the targets will be reviewed by the National Committee at Springfield next week and the final decision rendered as to the winners.

Dietz scored targets of 93, 92, 85, 84, and 81, a total of 435 with the revolver, and a total of 447 with the pistol. His best target for the smaller weapon was 95. G. W. Waterhouse of New Haven, Conn., scored the high target with 96. The best target with the revolver was made by Lieut. Sayre, with a total of 94 for his 10 shots at the twenty-yard range.

The scores with revolver were: John A. Dietz, 435; Lieut. Reginald H. Sayre, 434; Thomas Anderton, 430; Dr. W. H. Luckett, 426; Thomas Le Boutillier, 2d, 414; A. L. A. Himmelwright, 396, and Capt. W. B. Martin, Plainfield, N. J., 377. Pistol: John A. Dietz, 447; Lieut. Sayre, 441; Thomas Anderton, 440; G. W. Waterhouse, 439; A. L. A. Himmelwright, 429; P. Hanford, 422; Thomas Le Boutillier, 2d, 420, and H. Klotz, 420.

TRIPLE TIE IN GAMES OF SEVENTH REGIMENT

Remarkable Finish in Sack Race, Which Results in Second Tie.

COMPANY E WINS NESBIT CUP

New Armory Record Established in Wall Scaling—Handicap Allowance Beats Sheldon in Shotput.

Enthusiasm and a large social gathering were the characteristic features last night in the Seventh Regiment Armory during the competitions of the military athletes in their forty-ninth annual games. The chief incentive to friendly rivalry was the competition for the Nesbit trophy, which was won by Company E with a total of 36 points, while the Military trophy was captured by Company I. Only one record was established, that of wall scaling, Company K completing the difficult task in 0:50 3-5.

The mile handicap brought out a field of twelve competitors, but half of them quit before the end of the first quarter. The remainder furnished an exciting contest. C. G. Witter, Jr., led on the last lap by three yards. J. P. Leo, Jr., gradually overhauled the leader, and coming into the home stretch the two men were on even terms. Leo won by a scant yard. Wither secured the place by six yards from H. C. Harle. The three-legged race developed into an unusual contest. Five teams competed and kept together the entire distance. The finish between the three leading teams was so close that the judges declared the race a triple tie. The run-off resulted in a second tie between Companies E and F. The teams then decided to toss up for the first medal, Company E winning.

The wall-scaling event furnished much amusement for the spectators. The contestants wore their regulation military uniform and scaled wooden walls ten feet high. Many of the contestants made ludicrous attempts to scramble up. The eight members of Company K established a record, scaling the wall and running 100 yards in 0:50 3-5.

R. Sheldon, the Olympic weight thrower, met with defeat in the shot put. Sheldon was scratch man, while handicaps up to fifteen feet were allotted to the other contestants. Sheldon was not in his best form, but succeeded in hurling the missile 42 feet 5 inches. He was unplaced, T. B. Johnson of Company K winning with an actual put of four feet less than Sheldon's performance. He was allowed a generous handicap of 8½ feet. The hundred-yard handicap dash was won by M. Hayward by six inches, after a close struggle with L. Vorhis.

W. Armstrong lost the military relay race for Company D. He was sent off on the second relay with a lead of nearly twenty yards. He maintained this lead until within ten yards from his relay when he fell, and before he regained his feet he was passed by the other contestants. The event was won by Company E by three yards from Company I. E. C. Poillon of Company D made a game effort to recover the lost distance for his company, but was unequal to the effort. Richard Sheldon overran his mark in the military rescue race and lost by a few inches. Company D won the inter-company relay race by ten yards from Company E. Summary:

INTER-BRANCH Y. M. C. A. MEET

Boys Department Trophy Won by Bedford Team of Brooklyn.

In a long and trying programme of gymnastic, athletic, and aquatic events the boy team of the Bedford Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, Brooklyn, won the annual inter-branch championship yesterday and the silver cup presented by the Young Men's Christian Association. In all, 300 boys competed in the various events which were contested in the gymnasium and pool of the Twenty-third Street Branch, Manhattan.

The boys were divided into sections of juniors, under 15 years of age, and seniors, under 18 years of age. All of the competitions included vaulting, tumbling, pyramids, and apparatus work for the gymnastics; running and jumping for the athletics, and swimming races, under water contests, and plunging for the aquatics.

Dr. C. Ward Crampton of the Public Schools Athletic League supervised the contests and acted as referee. All of the young athletes displayed marked improvement and proficiency over the work of a year ago, when the trophy was won by the Harlem Branch. These lads made a plucky attempt to again capture the cup, but the Bedford boys won with a total of 73 3-10 points, with Harlem second with 70 points, and in order: Twenty-third Street, 67⅞; East Side, 54, and West Side, 49. Every event was contested with spirit, and not a protest or accident of any sort marred the sport of the young athletes.

Sports at West Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., March 24.—In the annual Military Academy indoor meet here to-night the 1907 Class was victorious, securing 48 points, and the 1908 Class second with 40 points. Up to the last event the '07 and '08 men were even. A special feature of the evening was the slack wire walking of Cadet Hackett, '07, and the wrestling match between Cadets Drain and Hanson of the '07 Class. Cadet O'Connor, '07, won the cup for the best all-round gymnastic performance.

The Army Athletic Association presented a service sabre to Cadet C. K. Rockwell in recognition of the excellent record made by him in cadet athletic sports from 1902 until 1906.

OLYMPIC ATHLETES AT THIRTEENTH'S GAMES

Hillman Shows a Rare Flight Over the High Hurdles.

COMPANY E WINS TROPHY

Cohn's Spurt Came Too Late in the Mile Run, and a Long-Mark Man Took the Event.

Seven athletes of the American Olympic team enlivened the sport last night at the twenty-seventh annual games of the Thirteenth Regiment. The games were held in the armory, Sumner and Jefferson Avenues, Brooklyn, which was packed with a crowd eager to see records made by the track men who will compete in Greece. In only two of the events was this desire gratified. Harry L. Hillman, Jr., cut two-fifths of a second from the former armory record of 15 seconds for the 120-yard hurdles, and Lawson Robertson scraped over the bar at 5 feet 9 inches in the running high jump, which was an improvement of 2 inches over the old height.

Harvey Cohn and Michael Spring both made plucky efforts to create a record for the mile run. The former started from the scratch mark and he loped around the eight laps of the track at a fine stride. When it came to the finish, however, Cohn did not begin his spurt in time to beat out W. Van Thun of Company E, who started from the 45-yard mark. Van Thun proved to have a lot of reserve speed and he fairly sprinted the last 220 yards, getting to the tape five strides in advance of Cohn. Spring failed to get placed. The timers took Cohn's time for the distance and he equaled his armory record of 4:30 2-5. Van Thun's time was 4:27 3-5.

The runners of the Twenty-second Regiment distanced their opponents of the Twenty-third Regiment in the round robin medley race. This was the second victory of J. J. Danaher, G. F. Smith, F. A. Rodgers, and J. T. Sullivan, as last week they defeated the Thirteenth Regiment team. S. C. Northridge of the Twenty-third's team was the only runner to lead. He finished his 220 yards slightly in advance of Danaher. On the 440 yards Smith forged ahead for the Twenty-second, and at the 880 yards and the full mile, the entire distance of the race being one mile and 1,540 yards, each man running twice the distance of the man before him, the lead was held by Rodgers and Sullivan. The time was 8 minutes and 1 3-5 seconds.

The athletes representing Company E easily carried off the point trophy, as they won or placed men in the majority of the events. The summary:

70-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by Lyndon Pierce, Company E, (12 feet;) Harry L. Hillman, Jr., Company E, (scratch,) second; Henry E. Reed, Band, (15 feet,) third. Time—0:07 1-5.

Round Robin Medley Race, One Mile and 1,540 Yards.—Won by Twenty-second Regiment team—J. J. Danaher, G. F. Smith, F. A. Rodgers, and J. T. Sullivan; Twenty-third Regiment team—S. C. Northridge, T. McMeekin, H. A. Sedley, Jr., and C. J. Bacon, second. Time—8:01 3-5.

220-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by George Tames, Jr., Company A, (17 yards;) W. J. Nelson, Company A, (16 yards,) second; Lyndon Pierce, Company E, (14 yards,) third. Time—0:23 3-5.

120-Yard Hurdle Race, Handicap.—Won by Harry L. Hillman, Jr., Company E, (scratch;) J. West, Company A, (8 feet,) second; W. E. Finley, Company D, (3 feet,) third. Time—0:14 3-5.

Running High Jump, Handicap.—Won by Lawson Robertson, Company E, (scratch,) with 5 feet 9 inches; Henry E. Reed, Band, (7 inches,) with 5 feet 2 inches, second; W. A. McLeod, Company E, (7 inches,) with 5 feet 2 inches, third. Second and third tossed for places after tie.

Two-mile Bicycle Race, Handicap.—Won by O. J. Devine, Company M, (scratch;) W. Charlton, Company C, (40 yards,) second; G. Perden, Company E, (70 yards,) third. Time—5:13 2-5.

One-Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by W. Van Thun, Company E, (45 yards;) H. W. Cohn, Company E, (scratch,) second; T. D. Dick, Company D, (150 yards,) third. Time—4:27 3-5.

Tug-of-War, Handicap.—Won by Company M team—J. Kenny, W. J. Edmond, J. A. Frost, C. McCrosson, and J. D. Brennan, (7 inches,) over Company D team—F. Foster, W. Wahl, H. Hicks, C. Locket, and H. Hayward, (scratch,) by 2½ inches.

GOULD COURT TENNIS VICTOR.

Beats Tailer in Gold Racquet Championship at Tuxedo.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., March 24.—The opening court tennis championship contests for the gold racquet trophy of the Eastern States were played to-day on the Tuxedo court under the management of the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club. Two matches were decided, one going by default, J. G. Douglas defaulting to Pierre Lorillard, Jr.

The players in the second match were T. Suffern Tailer and Jay Gould. Tailer is a veteran court tennis player, while young Gould has only been prominently identified with the game for the last two or three years. He has attained high proficiency, and is rapidly working his way up to the top ranks. Notwithstanding Gould's ability, it was with unconcealed surprise that the spectators witnessed the defeat of Tailer. The latter was hardly up to his old-time standard. He only got one game in the first set. In the second set he made an effort to rally and did some hard serving, but Gould seemed to be in his best playing condition, and was an adept in returning cleverly placed balls. He won this set by 6 to 3. Tailer lost the third and concluding set by 6 to 2.

Charles E. Sands, winner of the gold racquet cup last year, did not enter. To-morrow Jay Gould will meet Pierre Lorillard, Jr., in the final match. The summary:

First Round.—Jay Gould, Georgian Court, Lakewood, defeated T. Suffern Tailer, Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2; P. Lorillard, Jr., Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club, defeated J. G. Douglas, Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club, by default.

Church League Basket Ball.

By defeating the St. George basket ball team last night on the Calvary Court, in East Twenty-third Street, by the score of 24 to 9, the Calvary team secured its tenth successive victory, and with no defeats, gained the middleweight championship of the Church Athletic League.

In the contest for second place in the heavyweight championship of the league, the St. George team refused to play the second half, and gave the game to the Calvary team, under protest, thus making a tie for second place between the St. George, Calvary, and Bethany teams. Line-up:

Calvary, 24.	Position.	St. George, 9.
Schonherr	Right forward	Koolen
Molony	Centre	Seidel
Kirk	Right guard	Spilger

Goals from field—Schonherr, (5,) Spain, (3,) Molony, (2, Proctor, Murray, Spilger, Koechlein, Nelson. Goals on fouls—Koolen, (3.) Referee—Mr. Butler, St. George A. C. Umpire—Mr. McWade, Calvary A. C. Time of halves—Fifteen minutes.

CABLE CHESS MATCH A TIE.

The fifth international chess competition by cable for the collegiate trophy presented by Prof. Isaac L. Rice was played yesterday in this city and London and resulted in a draw, each side scoring 3 points. As the Oxford and Cambridge chess players were the holders of the trophy they therefore retain the cup for another year. The American contestants represented Brown, Cornell, and the University of Pennsylvania.

The latter conducted their part of the match from the residence of Prof. Isaac L. Rice, 170 Riverside Avenue, President of the College Chess League, while Oxford and Cambridge were playing at the Metropolitan Chess Club in the Inns of Court Hotel, London. By arrangement a start was made at 8 o'clock, New York time, and Referee W. E. Napier was called upon shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening to adjudicate two unfinished games. He decided one game drawn and awarded the other to America.

The pairings were: First Board—Hughes, Pennsylvania vs. Greenhalgh, Cambridge; Second Board—Palce, Oxford, vs. Mitchell, Cornell; Third Board—Miller, Pennsylvania, vs. Roughton, Oxford; Fourth Board—Henning, Oxford, vs. Kirkpatrick, Pennsylvania; Fifth Board—Sweet, Brown, vs. Lane, Cambridge; Sixth Board—Bottomly, Cambridge, vs. Johnston, Pennsylvania.

The first victory fell to the lot of the Americans by Sweet defeating Lane in thirty-three moves. Henning, Oxford, evened matters by defeating Kirkpatrick after twenty-eight moves. Miller of Pennsylvania was next beaten by Roughton of Oxford after thirty-six moves. The Bottomly and Johnston game was drawn after forty-six moves. The two remaining games, a Ruy Lopez between Hughes and Greenhalgh, were adjudicated in favor of the former after forty-six moves had been made, and the game on the second board was called a draw after forty-three moves.

The Americans cabled to London: "You have given us a great fight. Congratulations to your retaining the cup another year. We hope for the pleasure of another battle of knights in 1907."

The summary of the pairings, openings, and results is:

America.		England.		Openings.
Hughes	1	Greenhalgh	0	Ruy Lopez.
Mitchell	½	Palce	½	Q. gam. dec.
Miller	0	Roughton	1	Two kts. def.
Kirkpatrick	0	Henning	1	Queen's gam.
Sweet	1	Lane	0	Ruy Lopez.
Johnston	½	Bottomly	½	Sicilian def.

LONDON, March 24.—An interested crowd was present at the Inns-of-Court Hotel here today to witness the opening of the cable chess match. Play commenced promptly after the cabled exchanges of salutations. H. W. Bowles, President of the Metropolitan Chess Club, watched the play in behalf of the American contestants.

KAISER WANTS CLASS RACES.

Will Give Valuable Prizes for Special Events at Kiel.

BERLIN, March 24.—Emperor William tonight attended a meeting of the Imperial Yacht Club to hear the address of Prof. Busley, Vice President of the German Sailing Association, on the new classification of racing yachts adopted by the International Yachting Conference at London in January.

An animated discussion followed the address in which the Emperor participated. He expressed the hope that the international rules, when finally ratified, would retain provisions for special class races, inasmuch as his American friends liked regattas of that class.

Anyway, he declared, it was his purpose to continue special class races during Kiel week as a separate feature if the new rules were accepted in their present form. He said also that he would give valuable presents to specialists.

ALL READY AT BENNING FOR OPENING TO-MORROW

Open Winter Has Aided in Working the Track.

FIRST OF EASTERN MEETINGS

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The racing season of 1906 in the East will be inaugurated at Benning on Monday in a manner befitting the importance of the Spring meeting of the Washington Jockey Club. Many horses have been wintered at the track, and strings of thoroughbreds have been arriving every day for a week. When the bugler sounds the "assembly" Monday afternoon more horses will be quartered at Benning than ever before, many of them racers of high class.

Officials of the club have been at the track for several days completing arrangements for the opening. Since last Fall numerous improvements have been made which will be appreciated by both owners and racegoers. The courses have been gone over thoroughly, the open Winter having afforded opportunity for the working of the track until now it is in admirable condition. Needed changes and improvements in the grandstand and clubhouse have been made and everything about the grounds is as spick and span as if it were quite new.

To-day, particularly this morning, scores of horses were being tried out over the track, which was firm and fast. The threatening weather—a trifle too cold for comfort, with a light fall of snow—has made some of the owners a bit dubious about starting their horses in hard races, but all of the races carded for Monday have filled well, and excellent sport is promised.

With anything reasonable in the way of weather, the opening of the Eastern racing season will be a gala event. Society will be out in unusual numbers, and already the hotels are filled with "regulars" and prominent turfmen from all parts of the country.

The notable race of the day will be the Benning Spring Handicap, at six furlongs, over the Columbia course. Sixteen horses have been carded for the event, and there will be at least a dozen starters. The purse hung up by the club for the race has attracted some of the best horses at the track. No such number of good jockeys ever has been at Benning at the opening of a meeting. Among them are many of the best in the country. A spirited contest will develop in the first race Monday afternoon, for to the winning jockey the club will present a handsome silver cup. Following are the entries:

FIRST RACE.—Three-fourths of a mile, Columbia Course. Amberjack, 115 pounds; Blue Coat, 115; Reidmore, 98; Water Dog, 101; Henry Waring, 95; T. S. Martin, 95; Fancy Bird, 95; Nil, 93; Lackey, 91.

THIRD RACE.—Maiden three-year-olds and up; seven-eighths of a mile, Columbia course. Seany, 119 pounds; Castor, 116; Salt and Pepper, 114; Mettle, 114; Nonsense, 102; Kuro, 102; High Brush, 102; Waterway, 99; Azure, 97.

FIFTH RACE.—Steeplechase; about two miles. Follow On, 159 pounds; Tibo, 151; Thistle Dale, 149; Prince of Pilsen, 149; Bob Murphy, 149; Oleroso, 135; Doctor Swartz, 132; Glen Garter, 132.

SIXTH RACE.—Selling, three-year-olds and up; mile and forty yards, old course. Sailor Boy, 110 pounds; Andy Williams, 110; Bill Curtis, 107; Sonoma Belle, 103; Merlingo, 90; Reidmore, 90; Ben Hodder, 105; Yorkshire Lad, 101; Jack McKeon, 101.

Students Put "Gym" on the Market.

MADISON, Wis., March 24.—As an expression of disapproval of the Wisconsin State University Faculty's attitude toward athletics, the students last night placed an enormous "For Rent" sign on the university gymnasium. The sign stretched clear across the front of the gymnasium.

Charge Against Pugilist Dismissed.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—Police Judge Cabaniss to-day dismissed the charges of manslaughter filed against Frankie Neil, Mark Shaughnessy, Spider Kelly, John Frayne, Timothy McGrath, Thomas Burke, and Billy Roche, growing out of the death of Harry Tenny after his pugilistic contest with Neil. The Judge held that there was no evidence to sustain the charges.

AMERICANS SCORE SHUT-OUT.

Chesbro and Orth Retire Birmingham Without a Run.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 24.—Two thousand fans of Birmingham saw the Highlanders win another game from the Barons to-day by a 1 to 0 score. The contest was most exciting. The run that won the game was scored by Chase in the second inning. With one hand down Chase hit safe to right. Then McGuire died. Chesbro swung viciously and the ball sped to deep centre, and Chase tallied. Never again was home plate in danger.

In the eighth inning Oyler and Alcock connected with "Smiling" Al Orth's curves, and it looked as if the game would require an extra inning, but Molesworth was easy for Laporte, leaving Oyler on third.

Griffith announces games next week for Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday afternoons. On Thursday he takes the box himself for the Highlanders, with Clark and Wilhelm against him. The score follows:

Eason Pitches in Good Form.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 24.—The feature of to-day's game between Brooklyn and Augusta was the steady pitching of Eason. McCarthy also did some pretty work, pulling down several neat liners. Both teams fielded well and batted creditably. All three of the local pitchers were wild. The visitors return to Columbus to-morrow, where they will resume their Spring practice. The score:

Giants Score Another Easy Win.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 24.—The second game between the New York Giants and the Nashville baseball teams to-day again resulted in a victory for the champions. The score was 9 to 2.

Robertson played the second base for New York, and the box work was done by Ames and Geyer. In the first three innings neither team scored, Geyer for Nashville fanning five Giants. In the last of the fourth, however, three Giants got home, and Allemong was substituted for Geyer. He allowed six runs, two in the fifth, two in the seventh, and two in the eighth. A scorching three-bagger by McGann contributed to two of these.

After the fifth McGraw made several changes, Ferguson relieving Ames, Fitzgerald going in to catch, Hall going to short and Smith to first. Later McGraw himself went to centre field and Wright went in the box. The locals scored in the sixth and ninth. An error, a single, a wild throw by Ferguson, and a hit netted the first. A double and a single contributed the second.

Score by innings:

Waddell Still Has His Nerve.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 24.—Baseball patrons here to-day enjoyed the unique experience of witnessing Rube Waddell win a game for Philadelphia against the local Southern League club, with the aid of but three players, his catcher, Powell; first baseman Davis, and third baseman Brouthers.

The final inning arrived and the locals had a chance to win with men on base, but Waddell ordered all the Philadelphians off the field. All obeyed but Davis and Brouthers, and Rube struck out the next two batters, ending a 5-to-3 game that looked for a time like defeat for Philadelphia.

Downs Wins Handicap Pool Match.

W. Downs defeated B. Wylie in the handicap pool tournament for amateurs last night at the Broadway Billiard Academy. Each man played even, being handicapped at 100 each. Downs scored his required total to 84 points for Wylie. Downs had two scratches and his best run was 20. Wylie had three scratches and made a high run of 22. The players to-morrow night will be E. Gray (100) and H. Schoenweg, (100.)

BASKET BALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

Diamond Five, Rippowams, and Wanderers Won in Tourney.

Three games were played last night in the championship tournament of the Protective Basket Ball Association at People's Palace, Jersey City. In the lightweight class between Brooklyn and Jersey City divisions the Diamond Five won from the Young Men's Union by the overwhelming score of 50 to 1. The Rippowams of Stamford, Conn., defeated the Cedars of Flushing in the out-of-town division of the lightweight class. In the final game of the evening the Wanderers of Brooklyn won a close contest from the Xenia Athletic Club of Hoboken by the score of 16 to 12.

The Diamond Five made a runaway game with the Young Men's Union, scoring at will. They made 26 points in the first half and added 24 in the second, making a total of 50. Their opponents scored one goal from foul near the end of the game. Line-up:

Diamond Five, 50.	Position.	Y. M. U., 1.
Arrinson	Right forward	Sommis
McMahon	Left forward	Vingason
Stewart	Centre	Jarbol
Piercy	Right guard	Beckman

A. A. U.'S JUNIOR BASKET BALL

Two Games Played in Championship Tourney, a Third Forfeited.

Two games were played in the championship basket ball tournament at the Young Men's Hebrew Association last evening by teams competing for the Amateur Athletic Union's junior title. The third, which was scheduled, was forfeited to the Maxwell House five because of the non-appearance of the Union Settlement team. Atlas A. C. beat the Xavier team in a close, well-played game by the following score:

Humphrey	Right forward	E. Petrick
Marquart	Centre	Doyle
Blackman, Pavis	Left guard	Trotter
Riley	Right guard	J. Petrick

Prospect Park Y. M. C. A. won the second game handily. Conklin alone scored 5 field goals, enough to beat the Turnverein five, while his team mates ran the total up to 21 to 9. The line-up:

Nat. Turnverein, 9.	Position.	P'p't Y.M.C.A., 21.
Charrier	Right forward	Conklin
Schade, Shipman	Left forward	Campbell
Trautwein	Centre	Rich
Peth	Right guard	Cordes

Basket Ball in Brooklyn.

The Trinity Club, Hanson Place Church, and Brooklyn Boys' basket ball teams were all winners in the Union League tournament games held at the Trinity court on Montague Street, Brooklyn, last night. The Trinity team easily defeated the Black Diamonds by the score of 44 to 10, in the fastest game of the tournament. Line-up:

Trinity Club.	Position.	Black Diamonds.

FOOTBALL ARGUMENT FALSE.

Conclusions Drawn by Princeton Organ Disproved by Statistics.

The publication by the Princeton Alumni Weekly of football statistics, so-called, to prove that mass plays were not impossible under the new rules, has provoked much comment among football men. To the hasty the argument advanced appeared convincing, but its specious character was pointed out by a member of the old Football Rules Committee, who analyzed it:

"The selection of instances by the weekly to prove their cause was unfortunate for them," he said, "since some one was sure to go further and tell the whole truth, while they only told half. They say that in the 1903 Princeton game Yale scored her touchdown in six plays, averaging ten yards. The ball started on the 48-yard line and was carried over in six plays, including two runs, one 23 and one 15 yards. The third, fourth, and fifth plays netted just 9 yards, which would have forfeited the ball. They neglected to add that Princeton was forced to kick 18 times and Yale 16 because they failed to make 5 yards in 3 downs, let alone 10.

"They continue with the Yale-Columbia game the same year, and say Yale averaged over 5 yards per down. They fail to say that Columbia went to pieces in the second half and Yale scored 25 points with big gains that brought up the average. In the first half, when the play was even, Yale, when she came nearest scoring, averaged over 3 yards per down, covering 30 yards in 9 plays. Taking these 9 as an example we find the gains were 5, 0, 3, 2, 7, 3, 3, 2, and 4 yards. The ball would have been lost four times in that combination.

"They continue that in the 1904 game with Princeton; Yale averaged over 10 yards in 2 downs for both scores. The first score shows the best average, 69 yards in 12 downs. The plays netted 37, 4, 5, (offside,) 10, 2, 2, 3, 2, 3, 1, 3, 4, 3. In those plays Yale would have earned two first downs, and forfeited the ball in six successions of three downs each.

"Finally they cite the Yale-Harvard game last year, when every one knows that time after time it was a question of inches, with only five yards to gain whether one or the other team retained the ball."

THE REACTION.

Mr. Jerome's philippic at the dinner of the Delta Upsilon Club was a notable symptom of the rising reaction against yellowness in speech and writing, against excesses in thought and act, against the hysteria lately prevailing. The public is beginning to sober up a bit. It has for some time lived from day to day upon sensational disclosure and inflammatory appeal. Passion and excitement have left few organs of public opinion untouched, and they have probably touched none that did not feel, even if they restrained, the impulse to passionate declamation. The daily press, with its unequaled facilities and its universal reach, the religious press, weekly periodicals, and monthly magazines have separately and in chorus clamored for victims and vied with each other in the efforts to strip off all concealments, to lay bare every guilty secret. Mr. Jerome, who has been much prodded, is a natural and qualified spokesman against these outbreaks of perfervid passion.

Undoubtedly the crusade has been carried pretty far, doubtless good men have been unjustly assailed and blameless reputations wantonly crucified. This has been notoriously the case with the incendiaries of the ten-cent weekly and monthly field. They seem to have discarded conscience and to have lost their sense of responsibility. They appear to write with full contempt of truth and justice, and are eager only to smirch and defile. The mischief they have done cannot easily be measured. They are continually seeking to bring into public disrepute the officers of the Government and the institutions of the country. They have deserved Mr. Jerome's words of censure.

At the same time Mr. Jerome must remember that the newspapers and the magazines cannot make bricks without straw. It is not surprising that the bricks they make should partake of the hue of their material, and no one will deny that the straw supplied to them during the past year has been very yellow indeed. The most reckless and sensational newspaper cannot out of its own resources create any harmful degree of public excitement. There must be something to be excited about. The frauds, the wrongs, the extortions, the breaches of trust the corruptions, and the "graft" that have come to light during the twelvemonth have been flagitious enough to stir any people to anger. In the main the press has but reflected the public temper. That the wrath of the people and their excitement or hysteria have been raised to a higher pitch through the exaggerations and the reckless sensationalism of the press is doubtless true, but the occasion and the substance of the resentment were not of its making. For the most part it has been true to its function of presenting the picture of the times.

After the storm there will come a calm. It is beginning to be calmer already, and the public is getting tired of the agitators who are trying to make the disturbance perpetual. The people's hysteria has after all been a great corrective. It has done for the chief transgressors, and thousands who were under temptation have been helped in the path of righteousness, to which, for a time at least, they will stick pretty closely. If the process has been rough, if individuals innocent of wrongdoing have suffered, and if some blameless men have been unjustly pursued and pummeled, it must be remembered that this is the law of those great elemental strifes by which society is kept to a reasonable standard of probity. It is nature's way—

> So careful of the type she seems,
> So careless of the single life.

In the broad sense justice will be done. Mr. Jerome, if he is wise, fearless, and faithful, will get the better of those who now pester him with those irritating admonitions which evoked his spirited retort upon them. The American people are not in the long run unfair, they are not all yellow, they are not by liking or by temperament given to needless and unduly prolonged fits of passion. The scourges they have so vigorously applied will be laid aside when the occasion for their use is past. It is visibly passing already.

TRANQUIL IRELAND.

The correspondent of The Evening Post calls attention to three important speeches made as to Ireland within the past week, one by Mr. John Redmond, one by Mr. William O'Brien, both Irish Nationalists, and one by Prof. Butcher, the Unionist member from Cambridge. Both the Irish orators agree as to the curious and unprecedented peacefulness of Ireland and the confidence that its people have in their future treatment on the part of England. Undoubtedly this confidence is for the time warranted, but it remains to be seen if the Irish leaders will finally be satisfied with what the Liberal Government can in reality give them.

One thing that beyond much question will be granted is a Roman Catholic University, and it was in support of this grant that Prof. Butcher argued. He pleaded for an institution of high learning which would satisfy, or at least would be in accord with, the religious and patriotic sentiment of the great body of the population of Ireland. With this feeling on the part of a representative of the opposition, and especially a representative also of a great university, the measure should not fail of prompt enactment. It is repugnant to our notions of the relation of the Government to religious sentiment, but it is in the line of British practice, and would be an act of simple equity under existing circumstances. In Irish affairs results depend quite as much on sentiment as on interest.

A SELF-LIMITING TROUBLE.

The recent reports as to the health of members of the Rockefeller family were much exaggerated, but taken in connection with certain other recent happenings, they suggest the exceeding strain imposed on those in command of the remarkable concentration of wealth and power which, to a degree, characterizes our time. The fate that overtook the President of one of the great insurance companies and the physical breakdown of another are instances in point. The more extended are the range and variety of interests that come under the control of a few men, the more difficult it is to find men that can meet the requirements in mental ability and in bodily strength and endurance. It is true that with the modern system of organization and distribution of responsible functions the task is rendered easier than it would have been, but it remains an arduous one even in prosperity, while the burden that comes with trouble or danger is very heavy and cannot be shifted. One has but to go over the list of capable and highly respected men who a few months ago were managing the enormous business of the three greatest insurance corporations and recognize the perturbation, the anxiety, the apprehension with which they have been forced to watch the developments so unexpectedly sprung upon them, to get some idea of the strain to which they have been subjected. Certainly the tendency to concentration will not be done away with on account of the risks those engaged in the process must run, but it will appreciably be restrained for a while.

Nor is it alone the risks of this sort to which the new methods expose the leaders in the large interests; it is even more the difficulties arising from the demand for men of extraordinary intelligence and energy and fortitude that will measurably limit the scope of business expansion and combination. It requires sagacity of a very unusual sort to understand where the boundary lies between mere straining after monopoly and the safe centralization of activities within the area of given supply and demand. Simple grasping invites a long train of evils and an accumulation of perils to which in the long run the strongest combination is bound to succumb. The "trust," to use a popular, if incorrect, term, that aims at high prices for a restricted output makes competition ultimately certain and effective. These are considerations which thoughtful men will not ignore, and which may well serve to temper the apprehension with which present tendencies inspire so many anxious prophets of despair.

MISSOURI VINDICATED.

There has been a general suspicion that the Attorney General of Missouri was "playing politics" in his inquisition of Standard Oil. It was a natural enough suspicion. Indeed, it was an inevitable suspicion. By arresting local "grafters" in their mad career a hitherto obscure lawyer of Missouri had become the Governor of that Commonwealth. Hence, when Mr. Hadley began to reach out with subpoenas for billionaires, the suggestion that he was playing politics was inevitable. Mr. H. H. Rogers, to whom we suppose we do not do injustice in suggesting that he is rather a skeptic than a credulous believer as to the purity of motives of his fellow-men, did not, we believe, hesitate to impute this ambition as the explanation of the official conduct of the Attorney General of Missouri.

If this was really Mr. Rogers's expression Mr. Hadley has forced him to the most practical form of retracting it. The question which Mr. Hadley came East to solve was to ascertain whether an alleged competitor of the Standard Oil Company in Missouri was not in fact a confederate thereof. Many blamed him for pursuing his inquiry so far as to keep the President of Standard Oil confined to the grounds of one of his country places for weeks together. Mr. Hadley was, undoubtedly, inconsiderate of the personal comfort of Mr. Rockefeller, in comparison with the just claims for information of the State of Missouri. But by making things personally uncomfortable for Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Rogers and Mr. Tilford and the rest of them Mr. Hadley has procured from the reluctant lips of Mr. Rogers the evidence of which he was in quest. And Mr. Rockefeller is at liberty at last, without fear of further molestation from Mr. Hadley, to cross the Hudson River and inspect his new grandchild.

What we may call the confession of Mr. Rogers is thus the vindication of Mr. Hadley. A further vindication of that official, if any were needed, would have been furnished by his speech at the dinner on Friday night of the Missouri Society. It was not in the least the speech of a demagogue. It was the speech of a "good American" who believes that we are living under a Government of law, of law to which we must all do homage, "the very least as feeling her care and the greatest as not exempted from her power."

That is a lesson which all who need it must be made to learn. That Mr. Hadley has effectively inculcated it upon Messrs. Rockefeller and Rogers is distinctly creditable to him, and creditable only. According to the trite saying of Lord Coke, "corporations have no souls." They have also no bodies to be imprisoned. But they have officers and agents who are amenable to process of law, and who can be compelled to give an account of their operations to the State which is their creator and master, and to which they are continually responsible. That is the plain truth which Messrs. Rockefeller and Rogers tried to forget or ignore until they were forced by the action of the Attorney General of Missouri to make practical acknowledgment of it. Their contumacy was not only bad citizenship. It also showed a want of that enlightened self-interest upon a sense of which they may reasonably be supposed to pride themselves. Nothing could be more unfortunate, in the long run, for a chartered corporation than that its agents and vicegerents should be exhibited before the public, day after day, as evading due process of law, of which the purpose was to make them render to their master an account of their stewardship. They have at last yielded—none too soon. They may some day have occasion to inquire whether they have not yielded too late to save themselves entirely from the consequences of their contumacy. In any event Mr. Hadley is entitled to nothing but commendation for his practical showing that there are no "artificial persons" and no natural persons above the law in these United States.

NIAGARA AND "SPIER FALLS."

The Albany correspondent of The Sun declares that should Assemblyman Foelker's bills, including the repeal of the charter of the Niagara, Lockport and Ontario Power Company, pass the Legislature they "would seriously interfere with the plans of the New York Central Railroad in its purpose to operate electric railroad trains across the State." Incidentally they would frustrate the plans of Senator L'Hommedieu.

Senator L'Hommedieu has during the session introduced bills to restrict and repeal the charters, dormant and other, of all American power companies below Niagara except that of the Lockport and Ontario Company, which has recently increased its capital stock and is reputed to have passed over to the New York Central Railroad. Under its charter it has the right to abstract unlimited quantities of water above the Falls.

Larger powers were promised to this company in a bill that passed the Legislature and was vetoed by Gov. Odell in 1904. The veto was signed on May 15, 1904, six days before the ten-year charter would have expired by default of construction work under its provisions; but in those remaining six days a slender ditch was dug up south of Lockport, the work of a few men and a few carts, which is to-day the earnest of the charter's validity. Possibly the Legislature can repeal it as being in effect dormant. It could at least be restricted by the proper application of the Federal power in a treaty stipulation with Canada. This, we think, would be the most effective course, since the company is also the American agent of the power companies on the Canadian side of the river, whence it might still deplete the Falls with impunity. The Sun reports that the Lockport Company is now engaged in building a cable line from Niagara Falls to Syracuse to transmit power for the New York Central's electric trains. Power for the eastern division is to be obtained from Spier Falls, in Warren County.

Spier Falls! We wonder if the people who travel from far and wide, from all the countries of the earth, to behold the splendors of its mightiest cataract, ever heard of Spier Falls. Yet its water power is to be utilized by a great corporation as the eastern counterpoise and complement of Niagara! May there not be some western Spier Falls whose power may be utilized—perhaps with not such signal ease, but still answering practical purposes—which the railroad company is neglecting for the more convenient ruin of Niagara? Here is testimony to the point by Dr. John M. Clarke, the New York State Geologist:

> There is widespread power throughout the country about Niagara, in Central and Western New York and in Southern Ontario—not in concentrated and overwhelming manifestations, but power is running away now in many a stream which might be developed and stored without offense to the world and with profit to the community. While this power lying at our doors is neglected the apology for the desecration of Niagara lacks the ring of sincerity.

RENAN ON THE JAPANESE.

In a recent book of reminiscences by Mme. Mathilde Shaw there is a letter from Ernest Renan relating to the Japanese which shows that thirty years ago he had seized, with remarkable perspicacity, upon the characteristics that people possessed and have since demonstrated. The date is 1874, when the lady to whom the letter was addressed was about to set out on a journey that was to include Japan:

> "To say nothing of the beauty of the country, you will see a people whom many Europeans regard as entirely uncivilized, while, on the contrary, they are intelligent, cultivated, fine, and of marked tenacity. Doubtless on the outside and in their habits they preserve the wrappings of the past, but I believe in their modern renovation in the very near future." Referring to interviews he had some years previously with some Japanese diplomatists, and of "their serious charm," M. Renan remarked: "I must confess that my talk with them was through an interpreter, but their visage, or, rather, the expression of their eyes, reflected intellectual action (intellection) so profound and vital that it seemed to be they, and not their interpreter, who addressed me."

These highly intelligent words were written hardly a generation since, and the justification they have received has been striking.

A NEW CAPITAL.

Southwestern Missouri, with a spur of the Ozark Mountain range breaking up from the prairie there, inspires a local belief in its sanitary advantages which blossoms out in a set of resolutions of the Lawrence County Editorial Association to the effect that the capital of the Nation ought to be removed there with as little delay as possible. It is pointed out that Washington is an unhealthy place, and that on account of its malarial situation legislators become saturated with its benumbing influence and are not able to take correct views of public questions. In the clearer Ozark air their perceptions would be correspondingly clarified and their grasp of political principles improved. It is observed, too, that as at present situated the capital is at one edge of the continent, whereas it ought to be somewhere near the geographical centre of it, Southwestern Missouri coming near enough to this to answer all reasonable requirements. So placed, its likelihood of being captured again by a foreign enemy would be much diminished and there would be a variety of other advantages specified in more or less detail in the resolutions.

It was the opinion of the late William H. Seward that the place for the permanent capital of the country was somewhere near the headwaters of the Mississippi. There the rivers part like those which flowed out of Paradise, carrying their waters to the Gulf and the Atlantic and the Northern, with perhaps some spray of baptism from their abounding floods, to the Western sea. The great Secretary thought that somewhere in this region the great city of the West ought to be built to shed forever the ray of power from its pinnacles over all the world, to the ends of which its mighty river floods are dispersed. Possibly that may come about some time in fulfillment of the wise statesman's forecast, but the prospect of it does not seem near enough to interfere with new building at Washington and new plans for the augmentation of its grandeur.

As to these questions in general time must be their arbiter and they are not to be influenced by real estate booms or local enthusiasms. There need be no denial that Missouri's Ozark region has marked sanitary advantages—it ought to have from its situation, and to be courted by all salubrious winds that blow from off each beaked promontory of its upland range. But its claim to be the chosen place for a new National capital will have to be more widely recognized than it is now before the country will be content to abandon the present one, leaving its towers overtopping Babel and its domes, "to which Diana's marvel was a cell," to become the habitation of the fly-by-night bat and the moping owl, uttering its complaint in the ear of midnight and solitude and desolation like its fellow-bird that broods over the wastes of Carthage or Babylon. Such occupancy is indeed what comes to all capitals and other upbuildings of the kind sooner or later, but it need not intrude into our own for some time to come. The Missouri petition presented to Congress by a Missouri Representative and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia will very likely go to sleep in some pigeonhole where the said committee keeps its accumulation of inert and withering documents, but its effect in drawing attention to the Ozark region of the State, and its sanitary and other advantages, may justify the initiative of the County Editorial Society which set the ball rolling and gave the locality, hitherto unknown, such a handsome send-off.

Ex-Judge Parker denies, as he very properly may hasten to do, that in any interview in the South he either intimated that Mr. Roosevelt would fail to keep the pledge he has given not to take a second election to the Presidency, or expressed the opinion that Mr. McClellan should be the candidate of the Democratic Party in 1908. The alleged prediction as to Mr. Roosevelt would, of course, have been in bad taste on the part of any man at all prominent in the counsels of the opposition. It is quite true that in Washington and in the very houses of legislation men of each party are not wanting who discuss the possibility of Mr. Roosevelt's re-election with entire candor, some in approval and others with intense disgust. But this is something to which the President is necessarily exposed; it is irresponsible talk, and altogether different from the utterances falsely attributed to Mr. Parker. No criticism can apply to any one in or out of public life for suggesting the candidacy of Mr. McClellan, save that the next two years contain the possibility of so many changes that the suggestion lacks practical interest. Meanwhile any one is at liberty to note the obvious fact that the Democratic Party might go further and fare worse.

The list of influential citizens made public this morning by Mr. Charles T. Barney, of those who have united in the Anti-Smoke League cannot fail to strengthen the hands of Dr. Darlington to stifle the smoke nuisance and to punish overt offenders against the purity of New York's skies. The movement, as we understand it, is not directed at anybody for burning bituminous coal. It is launched against willfully ignorant and reckless firing in buildings and manufactories where soft coal is used. This results in a continuous menace to the public health, in the obscuration of the heavens above, and the defilement of the earth beneath. We are becoming even as Pittsburg and Chicago. Exemplary measures must be employed against the offenders, big and little, and Commissioner Darlington will have the unanimous and fervent support of the public if he will use his powers with severity.

HANDICAP IN CITY SCHOOLS.

Noises and Other Distractions Reduce Degree of Mental Application.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to the large number of pupils over age in the public schools of our city, Dr. Shearer asks, "What are some of the causes which produce this condition?" In reply, he gives two or three. May I be permitted to suggest another, possibly two?

The first is the disparity of mental application between the city and the country child. A few days ago I visited a school in a town suburban to New York, and was permitted to give a test in arithmetic, spelling, and grammar. I subsequently gave the same test in my own school, with results decidedly favorable to the former school. The same tests given elsewhre in the city might possibly give results similar to mine. What did I do about it? In the first place, I did not set out by berating the teachers; for, as Dr. Shearer points out, "the schools of New York command the best." I did not vent my spleen upon the pupils, for they really tried hard to do well on this test. I did not wind up by putting all the blame on the course of study; for, while it is doubtless no more perfect than other human instruments, yet it represents the best judgment of specialists, men of whom Dr. Shearer says: "A better board cannot be found in any city in the United States. * * * As a body, they surpass any such to be found in this country."

I was left, therefore, to seek other causes. The first is, as I stated, the disparity of mental application between the city and country child. For this condition the one child deserves no credit; the other no special blame. I was in the aforementioned suburban school two hours and a half. During all that time not a distracting sound was heard; no trolley bells clanging, no rattling of wheels on hard pavements; no fire engine whistling; no confused noise of voices in the street, bartering, swearing, guffawing; no crack-voiced men shouting "Extra!"—nothing, absolutely nothing to annoy. On going to school the suburban child did not have to pass a score of barrooms with their profane loafers; did not see displayed on every corner sensational journalism in half-foot headlines; were not contaminated by the two-penny theatre posters on every side; did not have to dodge vehicles of every description in order to land safely at school on time. Lastly, most of them were not shut up in a two, three, or four room flat since they left school the day before. They had had a chance to prepare their lessons in some quiet room; they had retired for the night where the sunlight and fresh air had made at least an occasional visit since the day the house was built. They had in the morning and afternoon plenty of room to move their limbs and breathe in heaven's pure air. Can we say as much of the city child?

I came to the conclusion that, with so many antagonizing, distracting, tempting environments, we were getting only such results as we should expect; that no course of study, no method of instruction, where masses of children are brought together, especially from such surroundings, can be ideal.

The second point, which I beg only to touch upon, is the advanced age at which pupils come to us. They have lost time, but not in the city. A moment ago a girl entered my office to register. She had just come from an adjoining State, but up to a few weeks ago she was in North Carolina. She is 12 years of age. On inquiry I find that she is fitted for only our first year grade. I have 45 per cent. of children much above the normal age. Of that number a very large part lost time before coming to this city. New York is the paradise to which people all over the world are looking with longing eyes. To it they come at the first opportunity, and into it they pour annually their thousands of overgrown, unschooled children.

But nervous fault-finding does no good; crimination and recrimination are of no avail. We shall wrestle with our problem as best we may, and leave the rest to God.

Not So Easy.

From The Washington Star.

"What I want," said the constituent, "is a nice easy position."

"My friend," answered Senator Sorghum, "give up that idea. When an easy position is discovered, so many people are after it that a man has to fight ten hours a day to get it and twelve hours a day to hold on to it."

SUBWAY AIR.

A Protest Against Unscientific Criticism of Dr. Soper's Report.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"M. I. W." says in this morning's Times: "Unquestionably the metallic dust in the Subway is harmful. If not, why are grinders and polishers of metals so short-lived?" Let me paraphrase it: "Unquestionably carbonic acid gas in the atmosphere is harmful. If not, why do men who go into neglected wells where it has accumulated often die?" Not that the cases are parallel, but the proof is exactly as complete in the latter case as in the former. As a matter of fact, Dr. Soper's report does recognize the possibility of injury, even from the minute quantity of metallic dust in the Subway.

The other portion of "M. I. W.'s" letter shows still more plainly the dogmatism of ignorance. He speaks of the "foul odor" in the Subway. Dr. Soper's report shows that the Subway air is not foul. It contains a minute quantity of metallic dust, it smells somewhat of heated oil, it is hotter in Summer by a few degrees on the average than the outside air—all defects to be remedied if possible. But in the sense in which we all understand "foul air," and in which "M. I. W." uses it—air defiled by human breath and human exhalations—the public of New York cannot too positively understand that the Subway air is not foul. Many hundreds of tests made under all conditions under Dr. Soper's direction prove conclusively (and I use "prove" as I use "proof" above, with a full sense of its meaning) that the Subway air is purer than that of the average dwelling; far purer than that of any ordinary church, theatre, or public hall. Moreover, these tests show that the air is purer between stations than on station platforms, purer on station platforms than in crowded cars, and finally purer (in cold weather, when cars are mostly closed) in crowded Subway cars than in crowded "L" cars; which facts prove that the Subway air is changed, and not simply "swished" back and forth, as "M. I. W." asserts without proof.

Having personal knowledge of the care and accuracy with which the many hundreds of air samples were collected and analyzed under Dr. Soper's direction, I am unwilling to let pass so marked a case of wild and ignorant assumption and assertion. If "M. I. W." had read Dr. Soper's report he would have known that it is not all commendation by any means; his suggestions might have value if he gave evidence of knowing the facts, but the promotion of public comfort in the Subway is hindered, not helped, by such ignorant, unfair, and easily disproved assertions. If the officials, as some people seem to think, do not wish to make any improvement that they are not forced to make by public opinion, they must rejoice in such attempts to misdirect the force of public opinion.

Labeling Patent Medicines.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an old druggist I beg to flatly differ with your conclusions as to the public benefit of a descriptive label of contents being attached to all proprietary medicines, and would propose as preferable the lodging and registration, if you like, of a formula of contents of every patent medicine with the public Health Department for an examination by a medical committee which shall certify as to the safety of the preparation for public use as directed by the label.

It is a maxim with most medical men that it is better for the patient to be ignorant of the nature of the medicine he or she is taking, as a practical knowledge of some of the ingredients may interfere with their intended action. For instance, it is an established fact that some of the most powerful poisons in proper doses and proper combinations with antidotal drugs will produce beneficial effects that can be attained in no other way. And yet did the patient know the specific toxic qualities of some of the ingredients he is taking, a nervous knowledge of these might prevent the beneficial action of the medicine.

The public, however, has a just right to know from medical authorities that advertised proprietary medicines are safe to take in the directed doses, and adapted for the cure of diseases described on the label.

A registered formula preserved in the Health Department of all patent medicines would serve as a standard by which an analytical test could be made to prove the medicine sold to be true to the registered formula.

A Guardsman Up In Arms.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The report, signed by Chandler Withington, in reference to the Seventy-first Regiment's efforts to get $55,000 from the city for furnishings, &c., for their new armory, is enough to make any National Guardsman boil with white heat.

Is Mr. Withington acquainted with conditions of the National Guard of this State? Does he know that the present-day guardsman gets in return for giving up at least one or two nights a week to good hard drill work, almost nothing? Does he realize how hard it is to get recruits, at the present time, and the only reason for it is the poor condition of the old armories that the regiments are housed in?

The Seventy-first for the past three years has been located in a hogpen, and it is a wonder the regiment has held together as well as it has. Does Mr. Withington realize the amount of property belonging personally to the companies of the regiment that was lost in the Seventy-first Regiment fire, for a great deal of which no attempt has been made to reimburse them?

Col. Bates is right in saying the report is unfair, and, from the appearance of Mr. Withington's report, Mr. Withington had better get acquainted with the present conditions of the National Guard. While the Seventy-first is having its new armory fitted up give the boys the best, and remember how they represented this State in the war with Spain.

American Lions and Tigers.

I note with regret that The Times, to which its readers are accustomed to look for accuracy, sometimes follows the example of most of its contemporaries in the use of the terms "American lion" and "mountain lion" when speaking of the cougar or couguar. If I do not mistake, the respected head of our Nation allows himself a similar latitude of expression when relating his hunting experiences. In his case the misnomer may have some slight justification in the accession of dignity which one must feel, at least on paper, in tackling a lion instead of a cowardly cougar or puma which, according to Mr. Hornaday, is "less to be dreaded than a savage dog"; but there can be no excuse for its adoption and dissemination by a periodical supposed to be at once a vehicle of instruction and of accurate information.

A few days ago, too, I heard a lecturer in this city speak of the "tiger ornaments" in Mexican aboriginal sculpture, in which the feline heads are undoubtedly intended to represent the jaguar, though possibly sometimes the cougar or puma. While such lapses are not absolutely incorrect, for local vulgar speech often metamorphoses the cougar into a "lion" and the jaguar into a "tiger," they are apt to lay the foundation for much misinformation, especially among children, who are thus led to extend the habitat of those animals to a clime where they never existed, at least in historic times.

Not Absolutely Necessary.

From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

The son of Secretary Root is in Texas learning to be a cowboy. Still it is not absolutely necessary to be a cowboy in order to secure recognition of the White House as a statesman. The son of Secretary Root's own father is a conspicuous proof of that.

CHALLENGE TO MR. GANS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of yesterday (19th inst.) you published a letter by Howard A. Gans which contains about as malicious an attack upon the Municipal Court Justices of this city as is possible to conceive.

Because "several years ago" one of the Justices of the Municipal Court was removed for misconduct, Mr. Gans has taken it upon himself to charge, in effect, that the twenty-seven or more Justices of that court are ignorant, incompetent, weak, or corrupt.

Mr. Gans does not name a single Justice against whom charges, similar to those which were made against Justice Bolte, can be sustained. If he knows of such a man, it is his duty to expose him.

If the practices described by Mr. Gans prevail in any of the Municipal Court districts they cannot be cured by a law requiring the Justices to rotate. They can be cured only by the exposure and impeachment of the Justices who tolerate them.

It is idiotic to declare that the effect of rotation is, as Mr. Gans puts it, to "decrease the pressure upon a weak Judge and release him from the temptation to do wrong," or to "deprive the weak or corrupt Judge of his opportunity to do wrong."

A weak or corrupt Judge is weak or corrupt outside of his own district as well as within it. And he has the same temptation and opportunity to be corrupt outside of his own district as within it. The only way litigants can be protected against him is to remove him from the bench without delay.

With due respect to Mr. Gans, I submit that there is no man upon the Municipal Court bench who is not morally, professionally, and (of course all those who know Gans will be shocked) even mentally quite the peer of that excellent person, and I, for one, protest against being held up to public scorn by Mr. Gans or any other ex-Assistant District Attorney in search of increased law business.

If Mr. Gans has in his possession facts which will bear out the charges contained in his letter against the Judges of the Municipal Court, I challenge him to produce them, in common fairness to any respectable man who happens to be upon that bench.

In Behalf of "High-Toned" Smokers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As President of the Brooklyn Limburger Liberty Club I have by unanimous vote been directed to express to you our appreciation of your kindness and consideration in publishing the communications of "Libertas" and "Libertas No. 2," in behalf of outraged high-toned gentlemen smokers.

Why, indeed, should a gentleman be restricted as to when or where he should smoke or do anything else? Why should he not be allowed to smoke any time, anywhere, everywhere all the time, in the church, in the cars or boats, at home or abed, awake or asleep? There is altogether too much restriction nowadays. No walking on the grass! No smoking! No spitting! What outrages on personal liberty!

As members of the Limburger Liberty Club we all carry in our vest pockets pieces of Limburger cheese. We are pledged to do it. It is our vow. Some people sniff their noses at us or utter offensive remarks, but we like it, and use this means to promote our campaign in behalf of individual rights and personal liberty.

Another Plea for the Mail Horses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals will presumably soon have an overhauling I hope that the horses which draw the mails of our "great and glorious country" will not be forgotten.

I was glad to see an editorial recently in The Outlook calling attention to them, saying "The mail-carrying contractors are permitted to use horses so unfit for work that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should interfere." And while the Government is wasting millions on the mail contracts, it might at least insert a clause in its fake contracts to the effect that the horses should be half way up to the requirements of the occasion as an object lesson to the general public, which sadly needs some sort of kindergarten instruction as to how and what to drive.

Mr. Bradley—Mr. Burke.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

By placing himself before the community as a much-abused man, he cannot withdraw public attention from the fact that the city is paying him thousands of dollars every year for removal of snow which would be on the ground July 4th if it were not melted by the sun.

His Subway contract called for the replacing of hundreds of trees on upper Broadway which he destroyed during the construction of the tunnel. He has never replaced them. Nor has he restored the street surface to anything like decent condition.

A British Tale of Depew and Porter.

From The London Mail.

In England we are not very good at after-dinner speaking, but in America they did understand it, said George Wyndham at a Friendly Society dinner at Dover.

There were Americans whose fame as after-dinner speakers had reached our shores, Chauncey Depew, for example, and Gen. Porter. When they used to meet at the same dinner there was frequently a very brilliant passage of arms.

On one occasion Mr. Depew, wishing to put a spoke in Gen. Porter's wheel, said, "I can't speak very well after dinner, but it is possible to Gen. Porter. You put a dinner in the slot and up comes a speech." Later it was Gen. Porter's turn, and he said, "I can't emulate Mr. Depew; with him you put a speech in the slot and up comes a dinner."

Talleyrand's Reproof.

From The London Mail.

Speaking of the possibility of boring an audience by such an incident, Mr. Wyndham said the severest reproof for a bore which he recollected was that administered by the great Talleyrand while driving with a friend, who kept telling him stories. As they passed through the streets of a Continental town, which in those days were not patrolled by the police, he observed one sentry yawn at his post, and Talleyrand said to his friend, "Hush, we are overheard."

Greeting.

THE WEATHER.

Whenever I a verse indite
About frost-pictured window panes
And ice-crowned things ablaze with light,
It rains.

Or if I sing about the Spring,
And flowers waking from repose,
Then just as sure as anything
It snows.

'Tis freezing now, but should I state
That fact in verse without a flaw,
It surely would precipitate
A thaw.

In melting mood my muse still sings,
Although of course the time is lost
If from the editor it brings
A frost.

ENGLAND RULES A FIFTH OF THE GLOBE

Population of 400,000,000 Living on 11,908,378 Square Miles Under the Union Jack—Interesting Figures from the British Blue Book, "Census of the British Empire"

The task undertaken at the suggestion of Mr. Chamberlain, when Secretary of State for the Colonies, has at last been completed and issued by the British Local Government Board in a Blue Book entitled, "Census of the British Empire." Figures have been gathered from every quarter—from the immense Dominion of Canada and the unthinkable immensity of the Indian Empire, with its 147 distinct vernacular languages, to the miniature Faulkland Islands, with their 2,253 inhabitants. The result is a demonstration that the British flag now flies over one-fifth of the earth's surface, and protects over 400,000,000 souls.

RAPID BRITISH EXPANSION.

Here is the romantic story of British expansion as summarized from the report.

At the time of the census of 1861 the Empire comprised, in round numbers, 8,500,000 square miles; in the next two decennia no important territorial additions took place, but between 1881 and 1891 the extensions in the East Indies and in our Indian Dependency, and the great annexations of territory in West, South, East, and Central Africa, added about two millions of square miles; since 1891 further expansions have occurred, principally in Africa and in Asia, raising the grand total, as near as can be ascertained, to 11,908,378 square miles; thus, in the short space of forty years, the aggregate area of our colonies, dependencies, and protectorates has increased by about 40 per cent. and now amounts to more than one-fifth of the land surface of the globe.

Of this huge territory, somewhat more than four million square miles are situated in North, Central, and South America; 3,000,000 in Australasia; 2,500,000 in Africa, and nearly two millions in the Indian Empire and other parts of Asia, while the portion that lies in Europe constitutes a very inconsiderable fraction of the whole, amounting to only 125,095 square miles, of which 121,089 constitute the area of the United Kingdom.

At the same time the population has leaped up by tens of millions. Whereas in 1861, inclusive of the Indian feudatory States, it amounted to about 259 millions, it progressed, in round figures, in subsequent periods, as follows:

Year.	Population
1881	310,000,000
1901	400,000,000

In Asia there were more than 300,000,000, in Africa about 43,000,000, in North America 7,500,000, in Australasia more than 5,000,000, in our Mediterranean possessions nearly 500,000, and in the islands in the British seas 150,000, while the remaining 41,500,000 were enumerated within the limits of the United Kingdom.

DECLINE OF THE BIRTH RATE.

It is admittedly no easy task to estimate the increase from decennium to decennium, because in some earlier years the enumeration, even in India, was not very complete. Of late his Majesty's Indian subjects have been decimated by famine and plague. But if this disturbing factor is eliminated by excluding India from the calculation it still appears that the population of the remainder of the empire did not advance anything like as rapidly in the final ten years of the last century as in the three previous decennia. The figures are:

	Increase per cent. of population in the British Empire, excluding India.
Intercensal Period.	Total.	By Added Territory.	By Actual Increase.
1861-71	11.9	0.1	11.8
1871-81	15.3	0.8	14.5
1891-1901	13.7	5.1	8.6

*Mainly due to the acquisition of Nigeria, East Africa protectorate, Uganda, British Central Africa, Rhodesia, &c.

From the foregoing statement it will be seen that, excluding India, the rate of actual increase in the empire, which had been 11.8 per cent. between 1861 and 1871, rose to 14.5 per cent. between 1871 and 1881, and then fell to 11.6 and 8.6 per cent. respectively in the next two decennia. The decline in the rate of actual increase is therefore not confined to the Indian Empire. The report states that "a large factor connected with this fall in the increase of the population is the continued depression of the birthrate, which has now become general in nearly all countries. In Australasia, and especially in South Australia, in Victoria, and in New South Wales (where the matter has recently been reported upon by a Royal Commission) the fall in the birthrate is remarkable."

CROWDING AND UNDER POPULATION.

In some respects the empire presents extraordinary inequalities. In the United Kingdom, though one may travel in some parts of the country for hours on end and see wild stretches of moorland, and great areas of pasture land, dotted only sparsely with hamlets, the population is unhappily very dense, while in Australia and Canada there is something approaching a mile for each inhabitant. The figures are so remarkable, in spite of all the emigration which has been in progress for years past, that they merit quotation. They show the average number of persons per square mile:

	Persons per Sq. Mile.		Persons per Sq. Mile.
British Empire	33.5	Colonies, Dependencies, &c., (continued):
Unit. Kingdom	342.4	In America	1.9
Isle of Man and Chan. Islands	496.3	North America	1.4
Colonies, Dependencies, &c.:		West Indies and Central America	82.5
In Europe	127.6	South America	2.7
Indian Empire	172.0	Austral'n Commonwealth	1.3
Other possess.	42.6	New Zealand	7.8
In Africa	16.3	Other possess.	5.0
West Africa	52.0
South Africa	4.1
Others possess.	16.0

THE SUPERFLUOUS WOMAN.

The compilers of the "Census" somewhat dispassionately point out that "in European countries, with few exceptions, the females outnumber the males; such is the case in the United Kingdom and in several of the colonies; but in the larger and more populous colonies, the reverse is the case." Apparently the white woman prefers comfort and civilization to the toil and trouble of life in a new country. It is here that the growth of population is mainly due to the excess of immigration, and here also the male sex predominates to the greatest degree. Thus, the four colonies with the highest proportion of males are Western Australia, Straits Settlement, Federated Malay States, and Hong-kong.

But whether civilized or uncivilized, women are the bane of census compilers, as far as revealing their age is concerned. The authors of the "Census" here remark: "The willful misstatement of age has caused us many embarrassments." Evidently the Irish woman tells the truth, for here: out of every 1,000 of population, there are sixty-four men and sixty-three women of 65 years of age or upward, while in England and Wales the figures are forty-two and fifty-one, respectively; in Scotland forty-one and fifty-six, at Cape Colony twenty-eight and thirty, fifty-one for both sexes; in Newfoundland and Labrador forty-one and forty-three, and in Queensland twenty-nine and twenty-two.

It is learned that in some parts of the empire they follow the advice to "marry and keep on marrying." Elsewhere the marriage state is regarded with less favor: "In the Indian Empire as a whole, among people of all religions taken together, to every 1,000 husbands there are only 1,011 wives, so that, even if no husbands have more than two wives, only 11 in every 1,000 indulge in a second helpmate. * * * The explanation of the cause of the unpopularity of the marriage state in Grenada and St. Lucia (British West Indies) is no doubt that in these islands a large proportion of the population live in a state akin to wedlock, for, save as regards the religious ceremony, it fulfills all the conditions of the wedded state."

Under the headings "Indefinite and Unspecified Religions," about 2,000,000 are classed; of this number, nearly 1,500,000 are in the Gold Coast Colony. As it is stated that the mass of people in that colony still observe fetich worship, it is probable that the greater part of this number should be classed as pagan.

Then there are what are called "fancy" religions, which are based more or less soundly upon various Christian creeds. These constitute twenty-eight sects, and run the whole gamut from dogmatically revealed religion to the religions of sensations and the emotions.

In dealing with the infirmities of the empire's populations, it is stated that, taking together the lunatic and imbecile or feeble-minded, in nearly all the colonies the proportion is much below that in the United Kingdom. There the proportion is 43 per 10,000 population, and the proportions most nearly approaching this are 43 in Malta, 41 in Victoria, 36 in New Zealand, 32 in New South Wales, 31 in the Dominion of Canada, in the Bahama Islands, and in Grenada, and 25 in Sierra Leone (Colony) and Tasmania.

EQUITABLE SLANDER SUIT.

PARIS, March 24.—The Correctional Tribunal to-day began the hearing of an action for alleged defamation of character, and slander brought by Eloy Duboin, a lawyer, against the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York and Percy Peixotto, the society's Director General here.

M. Cruppi, on behalf of his client, said that M. Duboin had formed an association for the protection of Frenchmen insured in the Equitable and that M. Peixotto had complained to the Minister of Justice that M. Duboin was conducting a campaign of calumny and blackmail. The Minister of Justice, he said, investigated the charges and exonerated M. Duboin. M. Cruppi charged also that the Equitable Society had issued defamatory circulars. He concluded by citing President Roosevelt's message concerning the insurance crisis in the United States.

The attorneys for the defense, MM. Millerand and Robert, will be heard next week.

$25,000 FOR A PAINTING.

Frederick P. Bellamy of the Board of Trustees of the City College has announced that the city will spend $25,000 for mural decoration in the great Assembly Hall of the main building, on St. Nicholas Terrace.

The six most noted mural painters in the United States competed for the work. The contract was awarded finally to Edwin H. Blashfield of this city. Some of Mr. Blashfield's best work in mural decoration has been on the dome of the Congressional Library, the Senate Chamber, St. Paul, Minn., and the Cornelius Vanderbilt mansion, in this city.

The mural painting for the City College will be in the form of a lunette and measure 40 by 20 feet. It will occupy the wall back of the platform and be above the rostrum, sufficiently high so as not to be obstructed by speakers on the platform.

Mr. Blashfield has not yet submitted his sketch, but it is believed that his picture will represent the mother city giving education gratuitously to her youths.

Work will probably be started in November, and two years will be required for its completion.

PUTS DOMESTIC LIFE FIRST.

Why Mrs. Edgar Van Etten Declined a D. A. R. Nomination.

Mrs. Edgar Van Etten of Boston has declined the nomination for Vice President of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Massachusetts on the ground that the duties of the office would interfere too much with her domestic life. In reply to a D. A. R. delegation which offered her the nomination she said:

"I do not care for the bickerings and excitement of political life, even if I had the ability and time to make a success of it. Then the office would take me away from my home a great deal, and this I could not and would not neglect, for in my domestic life my chief happiness lies. Nor do I consider it dignified for a woman in my social position to lend herself or her influence to politics."

TO AID SICK CHILDREN.

Juniors Give a Concert for the Washington Heights Hospital.

The Washington Heights Hospital has a Junior Aid Society, made up of forty-five girls. They furnished the children's ward at the new hospital, and are now looking out for its current expenses. Its officers are: Rhoda Weinstein, President; Lola P. Kallman, Vice President; Rhoda J. Klein, Treasurer; Rosa A. Levy, Recording Secretary, and Marion L. Bernstein, Financial Secretary.

Last night they gave a concert and dance at the Leslie Apartment Hotel, Broadway and Eighty-third Street. The programme was freely applauded. The musical numbers included a Tschaikowsky trio by Messrs. Benoist, Thrane, and Binhak; two 'cello solos by Robert Thrane; a vocal solo of Rubenstein's by Estelle Broda, and two violin solos by Carl Binhak.

Priest Leaves $50,000 to Charity.

BOSTON, March 24.—The will of the Rev. Patrick J. Daly, who died last week at Atlantic City, which was filed in the Probate Court to-day, provides for the distribution of nearly $50,000 among the several charitable institutions in which Father Daly interested himself while pastor of St. Francis De Sales Church, Roxbury. To the Daly Industrial School, Dorchester, which was founded by Father Daly, $25,000 is bequeathed.

Luncheon for Mrs. Van Etten.

Miss Ward McAlister gave a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday for Mrs. Edgar Van Etten, wife of the Vice President of the Boston & Albany Railroad. Among those present were Mrs. Mason of Washington, Mrs. Seipp of New York, Mrs. Benjamin, Miss Sargent, and Miss Mills of New York. After the luncheon they witnessed the tableaux at the Waldorf.

GEN. PORTER RECALLS SCHOOL DAYS OF '54

Lawrenceville Alumni Honor Him at Waldorf Banquet.

BIG CHANGE IN FIFTY YEARS

No Broken Heads Then in Football and Baseball Was "Towball"—Woodrow Wilson on Athletics.

William H. Edwards, President of the Alumni Association of the Lawrenceville School, a preparatory institution near Princeton, recently met Gen. Horace Porter, a graduate in the class of '54.

"General," he said, "we want to give a dinner in your honor."

"All right; it's up to you," responded Porter.

Last night the association put it back to Gen. Porter, when they offered the dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mr. Edwards was toastmaster, and introduced Gen. Porter, who told several stories of school life at Lawrenceville.

"It's a long cry to '54," said he. "And that recalls that the other day I was dining with an old friend of mine. 'What'll you have?' said he. 'I'll take some oxtail soup,' I replied.

"'Ain't you going pretty far back for it?' he suggested.

"Fifty-five years ago Lawrenceville was nothing like it is now. We used to play what might be termed the 'germs' of the games that the colleges indulge in nowadays. Baseball in those days was known as 'towball,' but, thank heaven, football was just what it was meant to be when it was invented, and we didn't have broken heads from it in those days as they do now. There was one habit then which I don't think is in vogue now. Every boy was obliged to recite a passage from Scripture before he could leave the breakfast table.

"'One barley loaf and five small fishes,' another would reply.

"Before we close let me propose a toast to the ladies," concluded Gen. Porter. "Sitting in the gallery there they remind one of the Biblical quotation which enjoins man to set his affection upon things above. I heard two men talking the other day of the genesis of woman.

"'Yes,' replied the other, 'and right there I might remark that man's first sleep was his last repose.' I don't sympathize with that sentiment."

When Gen. Porter sat down the alumni gave the Lawrenceville yell:

Hallee-genoo,
Genac-genac!
Hallee-genoo,
Genac-genac!
Hoorah! Hoorah—
Lawrenceville!

After John Reid, the Yale golf player, had sung several Scotch ballads in baritone, Mr. Edwards introduced President Woodrow Wilson of Princeton.

"It's 9:38, time for a Wilson," said Mr. Edwards by way of salutation. Dr. Wilson talked about the advantages of college athletics. He repeated that many of Great Britain's battles had been fought at Eton before they reached the actual field of carnage.

"The men who come out of the schools," he said, "should be the men to carry the ideals of the Nation and conceive the standards of fellowship. We should remember the connection of school and college sport with the future battlefields of the world and the future diplomacy of the universe. Remember that sportsmanship on the playground is the sort of diplomacy which the sort of men like John Hay have displayed. Remember that a man can't do a dirty thing on the ballfield and then speak a truth in the presence of the nations of the world. What America has stood for always has been fair play, and what she ought to keep her hands from is anything that is foul or unfair. The boys from college constitute our fountains of renewal, and in honoring Gen. Porter we are lifting the type that inspires the growth of the typical American."

Dr. Thomas Thacher of Yale, Prof. William Milligan Sloan of Columbia, the Rev. Dr. Simon John McPherson, and Owen Johnson also spoke. A handsome banner of red, black, and gold, with the association's name inscribed, was accepted by the diners from Mrs. Charles Ewing Green.

LETTERS IN ACTOR'S BOOTS.

The Boots Belonged to Charles Fechter and Were Sold at Auction.

Frederick W. Morris, a book buyer, bought for $2.10, at the final sale of the Albert M. Palmer collection last Friday, a pair of cavalier boots, said to have been worn by the famous actor Charles Fechter in the rôle of Don César de Bazan. He took them to his home, 133 West 140th Street, and yesterday morning his son was trying them on, when he found there was some object in the toe of one of them. Mr. Morris put in his hand and drew out two letters written by Louis Evan Shipman, the author, to "Jennie June" Croly. With the letters was a dollar bill.

In one letter Shipman says:

The Wallack boots ought to bring from $18 to $20, $3 each for the small caricatures of Irving and H. S. Gilbert, $5 for the larger picture of Irving, and $7 for the photo of Felix Morris. If any one wants the pedigree of the boots I'll give it.

Alfred Becks, who auctioned off the Palmer things, was private secretary for A. M. Palmer. He said yesterday that he remembers that a pair of cavalier boots, very similar to the ones Morris bought, were in the sale of Lester Wallack's effects, and were secured by Mr. Palmer. He said that it was quite likely that the same boots had been worn both by Fechter and by Wallack in the rôle of Don César. Shipman gave the boots and other things to Mrs. Croly for the benefit of a fair in which she was interested. How the letters and the dollar bill got into the toe of the boot no one can tell.

GOULD'S OLD OPERATOR DEAD.

He Had Worked for One Stock Exchange Firm Twenty-five Years.

S. G. Calhoun, chief operator for W. E. Connor & Co., the Stock Exchange firm, in which the late Jay Gould was at one time special partner, died suddenly of pneumonia on Thursday.

Mr. Calhoun was previously confidential operator for Mr. Gould, but for the last twenty-five years had been in the employment of Connor & Co. He came down to business on Thursday morning, but later in the day had to be assisted to his home at 144 Bond Street, Brooklyn, where he died shortly before midnight. He leaves a widow and two children.

GAVE 30 FEET OF HOSE.

How Girl Students Answered Plea of a Fire Department.

Special to The New York Times.

HIRAM, Ohio, March 24.—The Hiram Fire Department has been in need of hose and a subscription paper was passed among the students and citizens.

The student solicitor called on the young women students of Bowler and Miller Halls and asked their aid. The next morning he found a clothesline stretched across the street from his window bearing some thirty pairs of stockings, and this inscription:

"The ladies of Bowler and Miller Halls take pleasure in contributing thirty feet of hose to the support of the Hiram Fire Department."

THE SKEETER IS DOOMED.

Entomologist Smith Will Get His $350,000 for Jersey War.

State Entomologist Smith of New Jersey is to have his $350,000 for the war of annihilation on the mosquito. The bill passed the Senate last Thursday, and will go through the House of Assembly this week. The Entomologist has described on a map of the State 200,000 acres of marsh land where the mosquito thrives. He has satisfied himself, in experiments on the Newark Meadows, that the draining of these marshes will solve practically the whole problem.

The market value of all the land in the State is upward of $1,000,000,000. Experts estimate that this value will be enhanced at least 10 per cent. by ridding the State of its winged pest. The State Mosquito Department, that was the jest of all the funny men, has become a pet institution. Its annual appropriation has grown from $2,500 to the present $350,000.

The cost of draining with the processes devised by the Mosquito Department is about $1.40 an acre. Newark last year drained 3,500 acres at an expense of $5,000. The appropriation about to be made will dry up all the 200,000 acres Mr. Smith proposes to attack. The work, it is calculated, will take five years.

As soon as the act is passed the department will begin work on the great meadows between Jersey City and Rahway and another 20,000-acre tract in the southern part of the State. Every Town Committee and improvement club has established its mosquito committee to join hands with the State department.

A MANSFIELD MASTERPIECE.

Actor Again Appears as Baron Chevrial—Don Carlos at the Matinee.

Richard Mansfield's afternoon performance yesterday was devoted to a repetition of "Don Carlos," his latest essay in charaterization being watched with sympathetic interest by an audience that packed the New Amsterdam Theatre, and which, at the end of the powerful passage in which the Prince denounces King Phillip, rewarded the actor with repeated calls before the curtain.

In the evening Mr. Mansfield again faced an enormous audience assembled for the purpose of seeing him in one of his most familiar rôles—the Baron Chevrial in "A Parisian Romance"—which, as will be remembered, was the means of bringing him from comparative obscurity into prominence at the old Union Square Theatre so many years ago.

Of all his rôles none possesses a more general appeal for theatregoers than this, and in no one of his later parts has he revealed more originality, more capacity for detailed suggestion. The Baron Chevrial of Mansfield is, in fact, a masterpiece of dramatic characterization, which will continue to be deservedly popular as long as the actor appears upon the stage.

In last night's revival Mr. Forrest again appeared gracefully in his familiar rôle of Henri de Targy, with Miss Rockwell playing the part of the young wife. An especially commendable and sympathetic performance of Theresa was provided by Miss Nowak.

WEINGARTNER NOT TO COME.

Conductor's Health Fails and He Cancels N. Y. Symphony Contracts.

Word was received in this city yesterday from Felix Weingartner to the effect that he had canceled all contracts in Berlin and New York for next season, and will be unable to conduct the concerts of the New York Symphony Orchestra, which he had undertaken to do for the next two seasons.

Mr. Weingartner's contracts with the orchestra, or rather with the committee of guarantors, was for three years. He conducted the concerts of the first season, and received his stipulated fee of $12,000 for sixteen concerts. He was to conduct the same number of concerts for the seasons of 1906-7 and 1907-8. The reason given for the cancellation is a breakdown in health.

MAX ROGERS HAS TO QUIT.

Actor Is Here Recovering from an Attack of Nervous Trouble.

Max Rogers of the Rogers Brothers has been in New York for the last week, suffering from nervous trouble. He left the company at the close of last week while they were playing in central New York cities. An understudy has been taking his place.

Max Solomon of 248 West Forty-fourth Street, with whom Rogers lives when in New York, said last night that the actor had been at home for six days. He has not been feeling well, but has been out each day. He was not at home last evening. He is undergoing treatment by his physician, and his friends expect him to return to the company early next month, in time for the Washington engagement.

HIPPODROME SHOW NO CIRCUS

Chicago Judge Against the City in a Suit to Collect a Fee.

Frederic W. Thompson received a telegram yesterday from his partner, Elmer S. Dundy, who is in Chicago, saying that Judge McEwen of the Superior Court of Cook County had granted an injunction restraining the City of Chicago from collecting a circus fee of $100 from "A Yankee Circus on Mars," now playing at the Auditorium Theatre in Chicago.

Judge McEwen held that the production was distinct from a circus, as it possessed all the qualities of a dramatic spectacle, and that the circus tournament, which is introduced incidentally to the plot of the piece, cannot be plead in the same class with tent performances.

AMERICAN SINGER'S RETURN.

Miss Julia Allen to be Reintroduced in New York.

A New York girl who went abroad three years ago to make a career, and who has sung leading rôles in opera in Italy, Holland, and elsewhere, will be heard at Victor Herbert's concert at the Hippodrome to-night. She is Miss Julia Allen, a soprano.

This season Miss Allen has been to Havana. She came to New York two weeks ago on her way back to Europe, but came under the attention of Mr. Herbert, and was engaged for a concert and will fill other engagements that have come in consequence.

Vassar Students' Benefit.

The Vassar Students' Aid Society is to give a benefit performance at the Hudson Theatre on the afternoon of April 2. The ushers will be Vassar students, and the proceeds will go to a fund providing for the education of deserving young women.

Miss Welles Resting Comfortably.

Georgia Welles, leading woman of "The Clansman" company, who was operated on for appendicitis on Wednesday at the General Memorial Hospital, was resting comfortably last evening, though still in a very critical condition. Because of a delay in the operation peritonitis had set in, and this complication is likely to prove fatal.

Funeral of Warren E. Moshier.

Many of the members of the Catholic Summer School attended the funeral of the Secretary, Warren E. Moshier, publisher of Moshier's Magazine, in St. Gabriel's Church, New Rochelle, yesterday. The Rev. John Talbot Smith, President of the Catholic Summer School Association, said Mr. Moshier had devoted his whole life to the battle against the growing apostacy of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. A movement has been started to erect a monument to Mr. Moshier on the Summer school campus at Cliff Haven. He was forty-six years old and leaves a widow and six small children. Mrs. Moshier will continue the magazine.

Miss Hancy Engaged.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Jean C. Hancy to William Keyser of Baltimore. Miss Hancy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Hancy (Miss Ferry) of 59 West Fifty-second Street. She made her début two years ago. She met her fiancé abroad, where the Hancys and Keysers have been traveling for some months.

DEMOCRATS WAKING UP FOR FIGHT IN THE STATE

All Are Confident of Victory in the Coming Campaign.

BUT HOW AND UNDER WHOM?

Hearst Men Making Inroads and Conservative Elements Taking Steps to Defeat His Plans.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 24.—Will Hearst break in? Who will succeed Chairman Meyer? How many adherents can McClellan gain among the members? Will Hill allow somebody else to run things? Will Tammany obtain control? How strong is Jerome? What are McCarren's plans?

These are some of the questions which the New York State Democrats are asking themselves at this time. The feeling is strong among them that success in this campaign can be thrown away only by the most stupendous mistakes. The question with them is not so much, Can we win? as, With whom will we win?

Certain of the strongest State Committeemen, are working quietly to prevent Hearst from capturing the committee. Hearst and his workers are burrowing every day, and are confident that a majority of the State Committeemen will ultimately go over to his camp.

As the Democrats elect State Committeemen by Senate districts, there will be fifty-one to be chosen this year. The census of 1905 causes the membership of the Senate to be increased by one. What members can be re-elected, cannot be reasoned out with any great degree of accuracy because many leaders may be deprived of power and influence through the breaking up of old lines by the reapportionment.

The present State Committee is being scrutinized by the friends of Murphy, of Tammany Hall, of McCarren, of Mayor McClellan, of District Attorney Jerome, of Mayor Adam of Buffalo, of Judge Herrick, and of August Belmont. The intimate friends of David B. Hill are not manifesting an especial interest. They are waiting for the ex-Senator to return from the South. With him away the small fry and large fry alike are devoting themselves to coquetting with Hearst.

James O. Bennett of the Fiftieth is about the only State Committeeman who has come out flatly for Hearst. In the Western part of the State Bryan was always strong, and indications are that Hearst will succeed to much of the Bryan strength. When Hearst was here Feb. 27 his friends claimed Bennett of Chautauqua. Bennett has not denied it.

The three Buffalo committeemen, John J. Kennedy, Henry P. Burgard, and Matthew G. Merzig, are largely controlled by National Committeeman Norman E. Mack. The Erie County Democrats present a stronger front to-day than in many campaigns. Factional differences are for the most part shelved. The Democracy of Monroe, the bitter factional fights of which are part of the history of the Democratic organization since 1892, also presents a better front. The Hearst forces are planning an onslaught on Monroe.

In Albany Patrick E. McCabe is State Committeeman. He is merely waiting. So are the more active of Hill's friends. Herrick and his men are also waiting. They believe Herrick is likely to be the logical candidate for Governor.

What the dominant organizations in Kings and New York will do relative to the State Committeemen they can elect is a problem. While McCarren and Murphy are the bosses now, there are so many contingencies that the Greater New York chessboard may have a rearrangement of the pawns forced between now and election day. McClellan and Jerome are factors. Coler, Grout, and Shepard may also take a hand.

BENEFIT FOR DIET KITCHEN.

Concert at the Waldorf on April 11 to Aid the Charity.

A concert for the benefit of the New York Diet Kitchen Association is to be given on Wednesday evening, April 11, at 8:15 o'clock, in the large ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. Miss Susan Metcalfe, the Kneisel Quartet, and James Stanley are to take part. This association supplies free milk and eggs to the sick poor. The Board of Health, Bellevue, the Vanderbilt Clinic, Presbyterian, and St. Francis Hospitals, and the Charity Organization Society send many applicants. It also supplies modified milk to babies and young children in Summer.

In 1905 238,517 quarts of milk and 16,271 eggs were distributed to 28,897 patients in their homes. Among the managers of the Diet Kitchen Association are Mrs. William M. Ivins, Mrs. Adrian H. Joline, Mrs. W. C. Demorest, Mrs. Charles H. Edwards, Mrs. Frederick Kuhne, Mrs. George A. Hearn, the Misses Matilda W. Butler, Cora L. Van Norden, Maria H. Metcalf, and many others. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Henry Villard, 145 West Fifty-eighth Street, President of the Association, or at the Waldorf.

DR. F. J. QUINLAN HONORED.

Medal Conferred on Him by Notre Dame University, Indiana.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 24.—The Rev. John Cavanaugh, President of Notre Dame University, will announce to-morrow the recipient of the Laetare Medal, given this year to some distinguished Catholic layman for services to religion and humanity.

The selection of the university Faculty is Dr. Francis J. Quinlan of 33 West Thirty-eighth Street, New York, an inventor of valuable instruments used in the practice of his profession and the author of noted treatises in his chosen field. Dr. Quinlan is about 55 years old, and is Professor of Throat and Nose Diseases at the New York Polytechnic Medical School. He is President of the New York County Medical Association, visiting surgeon at St. Vincent's Hospital, and a member of the staff of various other hospitals in New York. The presentation will be made by Father Cavanaugh some time before June in New York at the Catholic Club, of which Dr. Quinlan is President.

Among those who have been honored with the medal are Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, W. Bourke Cockran, Augustin Daly, Josie W. Sadler, Gen. Rosecrans, William Onahan, and W. P. Breen.

TO BURY DR. DOREMUS TO-DAY

The Faculty of the City College held a meeting yesterday and adopted resolutions honoring the memory of Dr. Robert Ogden Doremus, who died on Thursday and whose funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the South Reformed Church, Thirty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue. The resolutions recite that Dr. Doremus did more than any other man in his time to introduce to the New York public the laws and facts of the physical universe, and was the first, in his own particular field, to establish laboratories in the city. From 1892 to 1902 he was Vice President of the college.

The Philharmonic Society has volunteered its services at the funeral of Dr. Doremus, affectionately known to hundreds of musicians, including Patti, La Grange, Christine Nilsson, and Ole Bull, as "the artist's friend." Dr. Doremus was one of the founders and for four years the President of the Philharmonic Society. The musical programme has been arranged and will be in charge of Miss Maud Morgan, the harpist, who will play. Richard Arnold, Vice President of the society, will play a violin obligato.

THE NEW YORK MUSIC STUDIOS, 108 East 28th, for artists, professors, and students; beautiful and very light rooms, with good acoustic and high-grade new pianos for practice; instrumental, vocal, or languages; hour, day, week; daytime or evening; reception room. Elegant parlors for musicales, rehearsals, music schools, with grand piano; Subway station.

EX-MAYOR ASHBRIDGE DEAD.

Philadelphia Executive Who Established Durham's Political Supremacy.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—Ex-Mayor Samuel H. Ashbridge died early to-day at his home in this city from a complication of diseases. Mr. Ashbridge had been in ill-health for several months, but his condition did not become alarming until two days ago, when he became unconscious and remained so up to the time of his death.

Samuel H. Ashbridge was born in Philadelphia in 1849, and after serving as a clerk in a mercantile establishment, became the proprietor of a coal yard. He was appointed a Deputy Coroner in the early eighties and served as Deputy or Coroner until 1899, when he resigned to become Mayor of Philadelphia.

In 1896 Mr. Ashbridge was nominated for Sheriff by the Republican organization, of which David Martin was then the head, and was defeated by Alexander Crowe, Jr., Independent Republican, who was supported by Israel W. Durham and his friends. After Ashbridge's election as Mayor it soon became apparent that he recognized Durham as the Republican leader of Philadelphia. Martin was crowded to the wall. Officials were removed and appointed according to their value to the organization.

The filtration system was begun under Mayor Ashbridge's administration. The $11,000,000 loan authorized during Mayor Warwick's term had been tied up in the courts, which decided the loan valid just before Ashbridge's inauguration. Other loans followed, and the total amount authorized to be borrowed by Mayor Ashbridge amounted to $28,000,000.

One of his actions that attracted general attention was the tossing into a waste basket, at a public meeting, John Wanamaker's offer of $5,000,000 for the street railway franchises which immediately afterward were disposed of to other interests with no compensation to the city.

After his term as Mayor had expired, Mr. Ashbridge became President of the Tradesmen's Trust Company, and held that position until his death. His estate, close friends estimate, will amount to $500,000.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Godfrey Hahn.

Godfrey Hahn, one of the oldest residents of Southold, L. I., died on Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sarah Murphy, 2,248 Seventh Avenue. He was 91 years old, and had lived in Southold since 1840. He was born in the South of France, and came to New York when 22 years old. The trip over was on a sailing vessel, and took six months. He started a shoe store downtown, which he maintained until he moved to Southhold, where he opened a store. In 1886 he retired from active business. He was the correspondent at Southold of the Staats-Zeitung and several other newspapers. His funeral will be held to-day.

Charles E. Kilmer.

Charles E. Kilmer, a tax expert, died on Friday at his home, 1,851 Seventh Avenue, after a week's illness, of typhoid fever. He was born near Troy fifty-eight years ago, and was educated at the Fort Edward Institute. He became a personal friend of Senator Murphy, and for three administrations was Chief of the Corporation Tax Department in the State Controller's office. In 1894 he resigned and established himself here as a tax expert. A widow and one daughter survive him.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES M. WEEKS died at his home, 173 Sands Street, Brooklyn, on Friday. He was born eighty-seven years ago in Huntington, L. I., and was for thirty years in the employ of the Union Ferry Company. A son survives him.

EDWIN B. WILLIAMSON, of the law firm of McCarter, Williamson & McCarter, died at his home, 1,023 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., last night, of pneumonia. He had been ill a week. Mr. Williamson was 53 years old. He was one of the best-known lawyers in the State. He leaves a widow and two children.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—A strong area of high pressure, with barometer readings above 30.80 inches, overlies Canada, New England, and the Middle Atlantic States. Along its southern edge snow has fallen, and still continues from Maryland to North Carolina.

West of the Rocky Mountains the pressure is relatively low and the weather unsettled, with rain in Pacific Coast States and in scattered localities over the plateau.

Sunday will be fair, except in the Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, and the Middle Atlantic States, where snow or rain is indicated. In the South Atlantic States rain is probable, with somewhat lower temperature. The weather will continue unsettled Monday in Atlantic Coast districts, with occasional rain. The prevailing cold weather will moderate in the interior valleys Sunday and Monday, and in Atlantic Coast districts Tuesday.

Winds along the New England Coast will be fresh northeast; Middle Atlantic and South Atlantic Coasts fresh to brisk northeast; Gulf Coast light southerly; Lake Michigan fresh east to southeast.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND MONDAY.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Snow Sunday; Monday fair and warmer; fresh northeast to east winds.

New England—Fair in north, snow in southern portion Sunday; Monday rain or snow; fresh east to northeast winds.

DOREMUS.—Minute of the Faculty of the College of the City of New York on the death of Robert Ogden Doremus, LL. D.—Through the death of Prof. Robert Ogden Doremus, LL. D., we have lost an old friend and associate. For a full half century he rendered loyal and distinguished service to the college. As Professor of Anatomy and Physiology and later of Chemistry and Physics, he introduced thousands of students to the marvelous world of experimental science. A born orator, his courteous manner and impressive personality won the admiration and stimulated the curiosity of his youthful hearers. All remember that erect figure, that gracious manner, that sonorous voice.

Doctor Doremus was a notable figure in the life of the city, and did more than any other man of his time to introduce to the people of New York the facts and laws of the physical universe. In his own special field he was among the first to establish laboratories here, and was long the leading expert in chemical and toxicological work. From 1892 until his retirement from active duty in 1902 he was Vice President of the college. Prof. Doremus was a man of tireless energy, unbounded enthusiasm, and warm sympathy. In him we have lost a dear friend and comrade.

FRENCH AERONAUT HERE WITH THREE BALLOONS

Count de la Vaulx to Go Up at West Point and Pittsfield.

MET BY AERO CLUB MEMBERS

Has Little Faith in Dirigible Airships and Doubts Success of Walter Wellman's Arctic Trip.

Ballooning in America received a big impetus yesterday with the arrival from France of Count Henry de la Vaulx, one of the most successful and daring balloonists in the world. The Count arrived on the French Line steamer La Savoie, and brought with him three balloons, one being his big Centaure, "my lucky one," he explained. When inflated this holds 55,000 cubic feet of gas, and it has been used in some notable ascensions, including the record trip from Paris to Kief, near the Russian border, a distance of nearly 1,300 miles, which the Count did in 35½ hours.

"This is my third visit to America," said the Count, "but it is the first time I have ever come over prepared to do any ballooning. I have always wanted to get up in the air over American soil, and I should love to start from a point way out West and endeavor to make a flight with favoring west winds toward the Atlantic Ocean. I believe I could break my European record for distance, but it will be impossible for me to try that this time. I must be back in Paris by May to superintend the building of my new balloon, which has been entered by the French Aero Club for the two big competitions this year, the Bennett International Cup in France and the Kaiser's Cup in Germany."

Count de la Vaulx has been selected by the French club as its representative in these two events. All of the leading European countries have entered except Russia and Austria. America will have two aeronauts, arrangements having lately been completed whereby Santos Dumont will be one of the representatives from the Aero Club of America.

Count de la Vaulx came over on the invitation of the club here, to give points on practical ballooning, and incidentally to show the amateurs how easy flying through the air really is. Courtlandt Field Bishop, Augustus Post, Paul Nocquet, Charles Levee, and Leo Stevens were among the delegation that met the Frenchman on the pier. With Mr. Bishop, the Count spent the greater part of the day in trying to expedite the work of getting his balloons through the Custom House. He hopes to get them by Tuesday or Wednesday.

"Just as soon as the Count gets possession of his balloons," said Mr. Bishop, "we will begin to talk about ascensions. Probably the first ascension will be made at West Point with the second balloon of the three, having a capacity of 35,000 cubic feet. The gas works at Pittsfield are the only ones capable of filling big balloons, and in order to do it satisfactorily a larger connecting pipe is being attached to the tanks. It will probably be two or three weeks before everything is completed. The big balloon will carry four persons, and several members of the club will accompany Count de la Vaulx on his first trip."

The name of the balloon that will be used at West Point is the Orient, and the third is called the Ludion, and is the smallest, holding about 20,000 cubic feet of gas.

The Count is a well-built, athletic looking man, nearly six feet tall, and his ruddy complexion and energetic speech mark him as an enthusiastic lover of open-air sports. He has been a convert to ballooning since 1898. He is the only man who has crossed the Mediterranean in a balloon, and the only man who has crossed the English Channel from Paris to the coast of England by balloon, although the trip has frequently been made in the opposite direction.

"It is a risky thing," added the Count, "crossing from France to England, for the British Islands are so small that when you try to reach them from the air unless you are lucky and are wafted directly over them there's no knowing where you will bring up."

Count de la Vaulx has nine balloons, eight being of the regulation balloon type. One is a dirigible airship, but he is not partial to that method of aerial navigation.

"Walter Wellman is a very courageous man," he said, "but he is trying a method that is still an unknown quantity. Dirigible balloons in the past have not remained in the air any great length of time, and I am doubtful if his balloon holds out to get anywhere near the north pole."

When asked how many ascensions he had made the Count admitted modestly that he had probably been up in the air 200 times, and that these represented an aggregate of about two months spent above the earth. He has frequently taken women with him, and he says the Frenchwomen are becoming very daring in balloon flights. The interest in the sport is growing enormously abroad, and the big cup competitions this year have encouraged the building of many new balloons.

MILITARY SHOW DETAILS.

In recognition of the valuable work being done by the Military Athletic League the War Department at Washington has assigned details of cavalry from Fort Ethan Allen, infantry from the Plattsburg barracks, and marines from the Brooklyn Navy Yard to appear at the annual tournament and show to be held in Madison Square Garden during the week of April 23. Besides these the National Guard has promised liberal support in making the show this year an exceptional success.

The reviews, which are the opening feature of the military programme each night, will be especially fine, and will be attended by Gov. Higgins, Mayor McClellan, Secretary of War Taft, Major Gen. Grant, Admiral Coghlan, and Brig. Gen. Mills.

An evening parade will be given on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday by the young men from the New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb.

The cavalry will show music rides and rough riding, and on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday there will be a mounted contest with sword, lance, and bayonet, with tent pegging and lemon cutting also.

The matinees will be on Wednesday and Saturday, with the entire military programme; the St. Francis Xavier Battalion on Wednesday, and at the Saturday matinee they will also take part, with the lads from the Peekskill Military Academy, the New York Military Academy at Cornwall, and the St. Luke's Battalion, who are also entered in the contest for prizes.

There will be the closest contest the league has even known in the athletic events; every regiment is in earnest, and Capt. Dixon is anticipating close work with the champions, for never before in the history of the league has there been such thorough training and continual practice at the armories.

Fordham's Baseball Outlook.

The Fordham baseball squad hopes to take the field again this week, dividing its squad into two teams for actual play. Capt. Hartman is eager to get a line on the new men, having but one veteran, Gargan, catcher, besides himself, on the team.

The infield, from present indications, will be fast. The difficulty in finding a first baseman may bring Hartman to play the bag. The pitchers are beginning to let themselves out, and the new recruits are showing up in fine form. Hedorff has a fine assortment of curves, while Egan promises to develop into a first-class pitcher. He has a good drop ball, a hot cross fire, and a high inshoot. Rudolph has speed and good curves.

COLLEGE CREWS AT WORK.

With the modified weather college crews are receiving the first outdoor work of the season, and many training innovations are promised from rowing centres. The season gives every indication of being the most interesting in the history of the sport. Prospects at Harvard and Cornell are particularly bright and encouraging, Columbia and Yale are in the throes of uncertainty, Syracuse is encouraged, but the outlook at Pennsylvania, Georgetown, and Wisconsin is far from satisfactory.

With the increased interest in rowing, college crews will take part in more regattas this year than formerly. Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Syracuse, and Pennsylvania are expected to send entries to the American Rowing Association Regatta at Philadelphia, while an unusual number of dual contests have been arranged. Annapolis will have a busy season, meeting Pennsylvania, Georgetown, Yale, and Columbia.

Kennedy and a staff of coaches at Yale have plenty of work before them to put a winning crew on the water. With only Capt. Morse and one other from last year's boat, six positions must be filled from last year's freshman crew and new material. Capt. Morse will inaugurate a new policy to encourage the sport. Class crews will be formed, and there will be all sorts of scrub eights. The Spring regatta will be held on May 12 and the annual regatta with Harvard on June 28.

Confidence at Cambridge is growing that Harvard will surely win from Yale this year. The crews have been on the river now about three weeks. All experimenting will be done early in the season, with the result that the crews will be selected long enough in advance of the final race for the men to get thoroughly acquainted with one another's style. There will be no eleventh-hour changes. Unlike Yale, Harvard has six veteran oarsmen back. The two remaining places can easily be filled by the husky material from last year's victorious freshman crew.

At Columbia this year, Coach Goodwin believes he will accomplish more with the material he has in charge. A specialty will be made of four-oared crews. Three or four will be maintained throughout the season, or almost until the day of the Poughkeepsie Regatta, and they will compete in special events frequently. The interdormitory and interdepartment races, which have become so popular in other colleges, will be encouraged. The active campaign begins with the Spring regatta on the Hudson on May 5. One week later the freshman crew will row in the Yale Spring regatta on Lake Whitney. On May 19, the 'Varsity will compete with Annapolis on the River Severn, and on May 30 will take part in the Harlem Regatta. On June 4 the crews will leave for Poughkeepsie for their final preparations for the intercollegiate races.

Coach Ward is worried over Pennsylvania's prospects on the water. He has been experimenting with his crews, but there is an absence of good material, and it is feared that the red and blue crews will again be in the ruck this year. The intercollegiate crews at Cornell are ready for outdoor practice. In the department crews, Sibley appears to have the strongest combination, with Civil Engineering next. The College of Agriculture has sixteen candidates out, the College of Arts 9, Civil Engineers 13, Sibley 31, and Veterinary College 2, while the Law School and College of Architecture have only one apiece. Coach Courtney has a number of his last year's crews to form the nucleus of this year's boats. Syracuse, under Coach Ten Eyck, expects to play a more important part in the rowing world this year, but Georgetown and Wisconsin are not strong enough to come in for serious consideration.

RACING YACHTS BUILDING.

If any evidence were required to convince those interested in yachting of the certainty that 1906 will mark one of the most active seasons in recent racing annals, a mere recitation of the number of racing boats being built would be sufficiently convincing. For New York interests alone there are eighty-seven racing boats of various sizes, ranging from a ninety-footer to a fourteen-foot dory in course of construction, while the number of steamers, auxiliaries, and motor boats swells the total number to unprecedented figures. Everywhere old yachts, crack racers under the old rule, are being bought to be placed in commission, and there is talk of many an old favorite reappearing. One yacht designer alone has turned out sixty-one new boats from his office this season, and the end is not yet.

Much has been made of the important racers—schooners for J. Rogers Maxwell, William E. Iselin, L. J. Callanan, Henry A. Morss, and C. Howard Clark, as well as the big sloops for E. Walter Clark and F. M. Smith and the forty-footers for Alfred Douglass and Alfred Hennen Morris, while the smaller boats for the Gravesend Bay fleet for F. J. Havens, J. B. O'Donohue, E. F. Luckenbach, W. A. Barstow, and Herndon Chubb have received some attention; but a great fleet of small boats which will provoke keenest interest among the great number of clubmen has been building without remark. When the regatta fleets assemble there will be seen in the lists of absolutely new racers:

Schooners—2 ninety, a sixty-five, a sixty, and a fifty-five footer.
Sloops—2 sixty, 2 forty, 3 twenty-seven, and 3 twenty-two footers, besides 13 one-design eighteen-footers.
12 Lipton Cup yachts.
14 Sonderklass boats.
12 Manhasset Bay bugs.
8 Indian Harbor cats.
6 Penataquit knockabouts.
6 Swampscot dories.
3 Bensonhurst dories.
2 Manhasset Bay dories, and
Bermuda and the others for cruising races on Bermuda and the others for cruising races in the Sound.

Many of the classes display interesting characteristics. The eighteen-footers are a bit of disappointment. Five Indian Harbor, three Manhasset, two Larchmont, and three Hartford yachts men were to build, but wanted Herreshoff boats. The failure to select a Bristol model caused them to withdraw. The thirteen boats to build are all in the Seawanhaka Club save two. The model is designed by Hoyt & Clark, the boats are building at Racine, and measure 31.6 feet overall 21 feet waterline, 7.6 feet beam, 5.3 draught, a sail area of 510 square feet, and a rating measurement of 17.8. The idea of an eighteen-footer with a twenty-one-foot waterline is novel.

Both the Lipton Cup yachts and Sonderklass boats will vary widely in design. The Manhasset Bay "bugs" are from the design of C. W. Mabrey. They measure 19 feet overall, are 16 on the waterline, with 4.9 feet beam. They are fin keel mainsail yachts, with a 200-square-foot sail spread. The Indian Harbor cats are Morgan Barney's design, with 20.10 overall measurement, 16 waterline, 7.2 draught, and 1.6 beam, carrying a sail spread of 340 square feet.

WOMEN ON PINEHURST LINKS.

W. C. Fownes and Mrs. Ross Win Mixed Foursomes After a Tie.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 24.—Thirty couples participated in to-day's medal play handicap mixed foursomes for the Secretary's Cups. W. C. Fownes of Pittsburg and Mrs. Donald J. Ross of Boston, whose handicap was 14, and L. D. Pierce of Boston and Miss Ethel S. Check of East Orange, whose handicap was 4, tied for first place at 88 net. Mr. Fownes and Mrs. Ross won the play-off. J. D. Foot of Apawamis and Mrs. M. D. Paterson of Englewood were the only scratch pair, and their score was 97. The leaders were:

HOW CUP YACHTS RATE UNDER THE NEW RULE

ADVANTAGE OF LIPTON BOAT

The possibility of Shamrock III. racing for the King's Cup off Newport in August has aroused a deal of interest among yachtsmen. The whole matter is absolutely unsettled and uncertain, but has attracted attention because of its international aspect and the possible effect it may have on the America's Cup. It affords Sir Thomas Lipton a rare opportunity to test his boat against America's Cup defenders under a rule of measurement that accentuates displacement, the factor the absence of which English interests have always criticised in American cup yachts, claiming that they were unstable and unsuited for yachting and were mere racing machines. If Sir Thomas with his Shamrock III. can defeat any American defender under a rule taking due account of displacement, the moral effect of his victory is certain to produce a sentiment in favor of racing for the America's Cup, should he challenge again as expected next year, under the present rule of rating, rather than under the old rule, which produced Reliance. This would bar Reliance from the contest.

It may be put down as certain that Reliance will not meet Shamrock if the latter races at Newport. There is no chance of that. But some ninety-footer will have to be sent against her, and the only two available are Columbia and Constitution. It would never do to allow the Irish Baronet to win the first race contested for the King's Cup, whatever might happen in future races, if America has a boat which could defeat her. There would be no hesitancy in pitting either Constitution or Columbia against the Shamrock, in spite of the fact that the rule favors the Lipton yacht over both defenders.

Charles D. Mower was the measurer of the New York Yacht Club when the Shamrock III. raced. In speaking of her fitting the new rule yesterday he said: "I have not figured out accurately from the data how Shamrock would rate, but I am quite sure it would be less than 100. Her full body and generous displacement would give her a better figure than either Columbia or Constitution, I believe, in spite of her longer water line than one and her greater sail spread than either. Her quarter-beam length would not be increased as greatly as either of these boats, and I believe both would allow her time.

"None of the three would be penalized for their excessive draught, so they would compare very well with the new boats that have been built to the rule, which, though smaller or of different rig, would race against her under the King's Cup conditions."

Shamrock has greater overall length than either Columbia or Constitution, and carried a bigger rig. The dimensions of the three and the Reliance show:

	Reliance.	Columbia.	Constitution.	Shamrock III.
Water line	89.66	89.66	89.96	89.81
Draft	19.7	19.75	19.83	19.0
Sail area	16,169.93	13,211	14,290	14,337.67

It will appear at once from these figures, that since Shamrock's length, measured at the quarter beam, does not increase nearly so markedly as the others, and as her displacement is nevertheless larger, she will have an evident advantage in rating.

	Actual Rating.	Estimated Rating.	Allowance. M. S.
Shamrock		10.0	Scratch
Columbia		10.0	Scratch
Sybarita	92.1	*85.6	13.35
Vigilant		*84.6	14.39
Queen		†76.5	24.04
Elmina	89.9	†76.4	24.12
Mineola	74.8	74.8	26.15
Corona	87.0	†74.7	26.22
Yankee	74.6	74.7	26.30
Rainbow		74.7	26.30
Weetamoe	61.9	61.9	45.32
Neola		61.9	45.32
Effort		60.0	48.53
Clark boat		60.0	48.53

*Sybarita and Vigilant race at 93 per cent. of their actual rating as an allowance for yawl rig. Vigilant has filed no rating, but is said to rate a foot below Sybarita.

†Queen, Elmina, and Corona race at 85 per cent. of their actual rating as an allowance for schooner rig. Queen is the new Maxwell schooner expected to rate at 90 in her class. Rainbow's rating is assumed the same as Yankee, being one-design boats, and Neola's the same as Weetamoe's for the same reason. Of course, no rating is known for Effort, the new Smith yacht, or for the Clark boat Herreshoff is building. Both are arbitrarily assumed at 60.

HEALTH OF BOY ATHLETES.

Public Schools Athletic League Members Must Be Fit.

Physical supervision of the youthful athletes of the public schools has been arranged for by the officials of the Public Schools Athletic League. Hereafter no school boy will be allowed to compete in any of the games or athletic events unless he can show a certificate as to perfect physical condition signed by a physician of the Department of Health of the city.

In the past, the League has realized that one flaw in its plans for the development of the physical condition of the children has been the fact that boys who possibly were in bad condition were not barred from participation in its events. To such children, particularly those with weak hearts or defective lungs, the strain of a race, instead of being beneficial, would be positively harmful if not dangerous. The League had not, unfortunately, a force of physicians at its own command who could examine as many as 1,400 competitors.

The League has appealed to the Department of Health and found in Dr. Thomas Darlington an immediate ally. Dr. Darlington and Dr. Cronin, his assistant on the school side of medical inspection, after considering the problem, agreed to have the school physicians, who already examine all school children for disease, add to their general inquiry special tests to determine whether or not a child should be allowed to enter an athletic contest. The League on its side agreed to allow no boy who had not been certified as fit to enter any of its games.

The plan of operation is simple. The Health Department physician at the time of his regular examination, certifies that each child is or is not in condition for athletics. This certificate is deposited with the Principal, and is good only for one school term. In the entry blank for the League's games, there will be a blank form on which the Principal must certify that each applicant has been certified for athletics that term by the school physician. Without this certificate no boy can compete.

Dartmouth's Financial Tangle.

HANOVER, N. H., March 24.—A mass meeting of the students of Dartmouth College will be held on Monday to consider the financial problem. The report of the athletic council, made public to-day, shows that the surplus has shrunk to about $300 from $3,000 two years ago. The principal cause is the deficit of $1,600 of the football association.

At the February meeting of the Athletic Council a committee was appointed to audit the accounts of the association, and it found that handling and accounting for moneys had been defective and careless, and unauthorized expenditures frequent.

CASINO WON AT TENNIS.

Brooklyn Team Defeated Seventh Regiment on Indoor Court.

The Brooklyn Heights Casino Lawn defeated the Seventh Regiment at tennis yesterday by a score of 3 to 2. The contest was the first of a series between the two organizations, and was held on the Brooklyn court. In the singles, the Casino term proved stronger, winning all three matches, but they were outplayed in the doubles, losing both pair events.

Frederick B. Alexander defeated Robert T. Bryan in the singles. He completely smothered the regimental champion with his hard and low driving and his speed and length. The two sets ended at 6—2 and 6—1.

Hugh Tallant had more trouble with Arthur L. Lovibond. Lovibond was strong on his overhead strokes, and Tallant's erratic play lost the set. Then Tallant steadied himself, and, driving splendidly, took the match at 4—6, 6—4 and 6—4. C. M. Bull, Jr., also defeated William B. Cragin, Jr., in the singles in straight sets.

The real contest was in the doubles. Alexander, paired with D. V. Roberts, met Bryan and Morris S. Clark. Spirited rallying and volleying brought Alexander and Roberts through the first set to 5—3. Bryan won the ninth game by his excellent service, and then brought the score to deuce at 5—all. Close scoring followed after deuce had been called, but Roberts finally tired, and the Seventh Regiment pair won, 10—8 and 6—2.

In the remaining doubles, Tallant, paired with Lawrence P. Frothingham, played Lovibond and Cragin. From the outset the Casino pair were on the defensive. Lovibond and Cragin played hard, straight tennis, winning the match at 6—2 and 6—4.

DOUBLES RACQUET DRAWINGS.

Tournament for United States Championship Opens To-morrow.

Representatives from New York, Philadelphia, and Boston will play this week in the racquet tournament for the doubles championship of the United States, which will be held at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club. Percy D. Houghton of Boston, who won the singles championship, is not entered, but Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., and G. R. Fearing have sent in their names and will probably play together. Lawrence Waterbury will likely pair with Payne Whitnes, and Clarence Mackay will partner with George C. Clark, Jr. This will give New York a strong double string, while Philadelphia's best team will be George H. Brooke and Robert K. Cassatt.

The drawings were made according to the Bagnel-Wilde system, which resulted in five byes. All matches will be best of seven games, and the final round will be played in the afternoon of March 29. The draw follows:

March 26—Preliminary Round—11:30 A. M., Clarence H. Mackay and George C. Clark, Jr., New York, vs. J. P. Gregg and partner, Philadelphia; 1:30 P. M., T. Truxton Hare and Willing Spencer, Philadelphia, vs. Morton S. Paton and partner, New York; 3 P. M., Quincy A. Shaw, Jr., and partner, Boston, vs. Erskine Hewitt and partner, New York.

March 27—First Round—11:30 A. M., Lawrence Waterbury and partner, New York, vs. Ford Huntingdon and partner, Boston; 1:30 P. M., G. R. Fearing and partner, Boston, vs. Barclay H. Warburton and partner, Philadelphia; 3 P. M., George H. Brooke and Robert K. Cassatt, Philadelphia, vs. winner of the Hewitt-Shaw pair.

March 28—11:30 A. M., winners of the Mackay-Gregg and Hare-Paton matches; 3 P. M., semi-final round.

OXFORD DEFEATED CAMBRIDGE

P. M. Young of Dakota Won both Jumps in Annual Field Sports.

LONDON, March 24.—American Rhodes Scholarship students competed in five events in the annual Oxford and Cambridge field sports, which were held at Queen's Club to-day. Snow fell heavily as the men turned out for the opening race, putting the track in a deplorable condition. Oxford won by the one-sided score of 7 events to 3.

P. M. Young, University of Dakota, competing for Oxford, won the broad and high jumps. Warren E. Schutt, Cornell, though second in the mile run, was 30 yards behind Walsh, the winner of the event. Albert M. Stevens, Yale, was last in the hammer throw and shot put. The best performance of the day was the mile run, which was won by A. R. Walsh, Cambridge, in 4:21 4-5.

S. Abrahams, Cambridge, in the broad jump, was 15 inches behind Young of Dakota, and in the high jump. Young cleared 2 inches more than P. Munro, Oxford. Young was afterward tried for a better performance, but slightly strained his left leg.

Oxford won the hurdles, half-mile, quarter-mile, and three-mile run, hammer throw, broad and high jumps. Cambridge was first in the 100-yard dash, shot put, and one-mile run.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Percy Owen, manager of the New York branch of the Winton Company, reports a sale of 543 cars this season up to March 17. Most of them are of the new Winton model for touring purposes.

Gen. John T. Cutting of the New York Oldsmobile Company, at 1,653 Broadway, states that interest in the new four-cylinder touring car is unabated. The comparatively low price of the car has caused many automobile owners to subject the car to a careful inspection. "The public," says Gen. Cutting, "is well informed regarding the good points of reliable motor cars, and when selecting, one demonstration is usually sufficient."

Catalogues of the new Gobron-Brillie car now being introduced in this country, are being distributed by the Hartford Suspension Company, which has the right not only to sell the foreign car but to manufacture cars here under the foreign patents. The description of the engine shows it to be of the four-cycle type, but with the exclusive feature of having two pistons to each cylinder which makes it possible to use the recoil instead of having it lost against a fixed head, as in motors of the ordinary type.

Mrs. John Newton Cuneo, who drove a steam car in the Glidden Cup tour last year, has purchased a Maxwell Speedster, which she will drive in future on private tours and in beach and track races.

Again the subject of a continuous highway between Chicago and New York is being agitated by the New York and Chicago Road Association, of which W. L. Dickerson of Springfield, Mass., is President. The general route proposed for the highway is as follows: From New York up the Hudson to Rhinebeck, thence across the river to Kingston, Delhi, Binghamton, Elmira, Hornellsville, Olean, Jamestown, Erie, Ashtabula, Cleveland, Toledo, Butlers, South Bend, and Chicago.

Fred C. Carter, sales manager of the E. H. V. Company, when he returned from the Boston show to the Middletown, Conn., factory found that the authorities of that city had begun a crusade against automobilists who drive recklessly. They had adopted the system of placing bumpers and other dangerous devices on the roads. Mr. Carter and other automobilists are now trying to convince the town officials that the remedy against the scorchers is not to kill off all automobilists.

A decision of interest to the automobile trade has just been rendered in the Circuit Court, Southern District of New York, before Judge Lacombe, in favor of Hollander & Tangemann in the litigation instituted by the Hartford Suspension Company. The latter company's application for an injunction to restrain Hollander & Tagemann from selling the Diezemann shock absorber on their cars, claiming an infringement of the Hartford patent, was denied.

Manufacturers this year are giving more attention to the form and structure of motor car wheels. The Electric Vehicle Company equips the Columbia cars with wheels that are practically hand made. Few motorists seem to appreciate the strains to which wheels are subjected, especially in rounding corners at high speed. In taking a quick corner the side strain is enormous, and often destructive not only to the tires but to the wheels themselves.

A deal in patents of interest to automobilists has just been consummated. Through outright purchase the Association Patents Company, a New York corporation, has acquired all the right, title, and interest in what are said to be the broadest patents in existence relative to spark plugs, or igniters, for hydrocarbon explosive engines.

The regard in which the Lozier automobile is held by the trade is evidenced by the numerous applications for the agency, resulting from the announcement that the Lozier Motor Company has taken out a Selden patent license. Many requests have come from dealers in large cities. An agency in Boston has been established with the Harry Fosdick Company, agents for the Fiat and Studebaker.

A special attraction to users of electrical vehicles was shown in Boston last week at the Pope exhibit, in the form of a mercury arc rectifier made by the General Electric Company for the redirecting of alternating currents for charging storage batteries. The current enters a vacuum through carbon poles and is conducted by mercury vapor through to one direct wire. This device eliminates all danger in charging of electric storage batteries.

The selection of Paul H. Deming as Chairman of the Touring Committee of the American Automobile Association has met with widespread approval. Mr. Deming is one of the pioneer motorists of the country. He took part in all of the early public tours and contests, and spent considerable time touring abroad, having practically driven in every European country.

AUTO CLUB WILL LEAVE FIFTH AVENUE MAY 1

Members Will Occupy Temporary Quarters During Summer.

GOVERNORS MEET THIS WEEK

Club to Have a Lawyer for Tourists in France — Many American Trips Planned.

Temporary quarters will be occupied during the Summer months by the Automobile Club of America. The officers are now seeking desirable rooms in the vicinity of Fifth Avenue and Fifth-eighth Street, where the club is now located, occupying the entire floor of the corner building over the Plaza Bank. The club's lease expires on May 1 and, as it is hoped that at least a portion of the new club house in West Fifty-fourth Street will be completed next Fall, it was not thought advisable to secure a lease of the present rooms for another year. There will be comparatively little activity in the club during the Summer, most of the work being confined to the various bureaus of information which the club has established for the benefit of its members.

"We shall all be glad when our new home is finished," said President Dave Hennen Morris yesterday. "Unfortunately the work was badly delayed soon after digging began for the foundation. A vein of quicksand was encountered and it was necessary to go down over thirty feet in some places before reaching a strong foundation. The building will be constructed of steel, eight stories in height, and all the floors will be of concrete, making it absolutely fireproof. As the basement and first floor will be the garage quarters capable of storing nearly 300 cars, the element of safety was the most important consideration in planning for the club."

The Board of Governors will meet next Tuesday afternoon and it is probable that some decision may be reached regarding the Summer quarters. Several important matters will come up for discussion and probably final action. One will be the appointment of an automobile attorney in Paris as the personal representative of the Automobile Club of America.

"This is an actual necessity," added President Morris. "So many Americans are now touring Europe, and very often, owing to unfamiliarity with the language and the various details of French motor rules, difficulties occur which might be readily obviated if those persons knew where to apply for information. With our club membership now reaching the 900 mark, and a large number always in Europe during the favorable touring months, an automobile lawyer will be of valuable assistance, not only in helping delinquents out of trouble, but in giving proper advice so as to prevent any unpleasantness during the tour. Many Americans really bring additional trouble upon themselves by starting on a trip through Europe without ascertaining anything, or very little, of the foreign regulations."

Preparations are now being made by about thirty members of the club to tour through Europe, and the recently established Touring Bureau of the club is busy making out routes and gathering information regarding hotels, customs duties, road conditions, and other material.

The tendency, however, this year in the club seems to be toward American touring rather than foreign trips. This is due to the improvements in the roads, particularly through New England, for fully three-fourths of the members who are planning tours are selecting New England, and some will make a dash across the Canadian border. Touring in the West has also increased, and with additional road improvements more automobilists will travel through the country from New York to Chicago. The suggestion that has been made in favor of starting the Glidden Cup tour from Detroit or Cleveland is largely due to a desire to assist the good roads movement in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Western New York.

George F. Chamberlin's report on a plan to hold various automobile tests this season will be presented to the Governors on Tuesday, and the first series of contests will probably be announced in a short time.

Durland's Annual Horse Show.

With a list of thirty-nine classes, a prize list exceeding $3,000 in value and the promise of an average entry of 150 horses for each night, the outlook for the annual Durland Horse Show to be held April 17, 18, 19, and 20, is exceedingly bright.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt will show his entire string of horses, including a number of noteworthy additions. Mrs. John Gerken has made twenty-five entries. Elsinore Stock Farm has thirty, besides horses owned by W. Stanton Elliott, the Hon. George C. Clausen, Robert L. Gerry, Irving Brokaw, Miss Emily H. Bedford, Howard C. Brokaw, J. Campbell Thompson, William Carr, S. T. Harbison, C. L. Bailey, N. J. Hess, G. D. King, J. G. Marshall, Charles Pfizer, G. M. Sidenberg, Mrs. W. J. Steel, Robert E. Tod, Mrs. A. O. Van Heusen, E. Wasseman, Miss Tilie M. Whiting, and J. E. Webb.

The entries close next Wednesday.

Long Island Oarsmen to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Long Island Rowing Association will be held at the house of the Seawanhaka Boat Club, 411 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, on Monday, April 2, 1906, for the election of officers for the ensuing year and the arrangement of the details of the annual regatta of the association. The National Association of Amateur Oarsmen has approved the date chosen for the annual regatta, June 30, and the Long Island oarsmen expect to make the regatta the best the association has ever conducted. The Regatta Committee and the programme of events will be named at the coming meeting.

BOSTON SHOOTERS LOSE AT BAY RIDGE TRAPS

SNOW REFLECTION CONFUSING

Score Was 634 to 609—Palmer High Gun, with 89—Cup for Paine of Visiting Team.

Shooting under difficult conditions because of the sun's glare on the snow-clad field, the team of the Crescent Athletic Club yesterday defeated the Boston Athletic Association team by the score of 634 to 609 at the Bay Ridge traps. It was an inter-club match at 100 targets similar to the one which took place at the same time last year, the first half being shot at Bay Ridge and the final half on the Boston Athletic Association grounds at Riverside, ten miles out from Boston.

The conditions yesterday were anything but favorable for high-class shooting. The glare of the sun on the snow confused the shooters so that accuracy of aim was an uncertain quantity. During the first portion of the match, which lasted for two hours and a half, the ten men of the Crescent team led the visitors by nearly 50 targets. After that the Boston team began to shoot better and made up some of the ground that they had lost. J. S. Fanning acted as referee and the judges were W. L. Hill, for the Boston Athletic Association, and C. A. Sykes, for the Crescent Athletic Club. F. H. Owen captained the visiting team, while C. A. Sykes looked after the home team. The men shot in alternating squads of four men each, at 25 targets, all being sent from the No. 1 traps.

Neither team displayed its best form, but this was due to the bad light. Not a single full score was made by any of the competitors, but H. Kryn and H. M. Brigham of the Crescent team each shot 24 out of a possible 25. The latter's run up was 88. Lowell M. Palmer made the high score of 89. Of the visiting team John B. Paine, son of Gen. Charles J. Paine, made the only score of 24 out of 25, and he also shot the top score of 85 for his team. He was presented with a cup by the Crescent Athletic Club Shooting Committee. The scores:

French Billiardist Here for Big Match.

Louis Cure, who is the champion billiard player of Europe, was a passenger on the French liner La Savoie, which reached here yesterday morning. Cure has come over to take part in the world's championship tournament at the Madison Square Garden, which begins April 9. He expects to meet in that tournament Hoppe, Slosson, Schaefer, Morningstar, Cutler, and other well-known players. The Frenchman plays the eighteen-inch balkline game, two counts in balk, under which the championship will be decided.

He hopes to get a match on with the winner of the Hoppe-Slosson championship game before he leaves the country. Maurice Daly met Cure at the dock, and the latter will commence his practice almost immediately at Daly's Academy.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—There was not much feature to Saturday's wheat market. At one time it looked as if bulls were again in control of the situation, but toward the 1 o'clock close prices eased back to about the lowest point of the day, closing on the basis of 85¾c asked for May, 84⅛c for July, and 83⅛c for September. This was about ½c under the highest prices of the day. Foreign markets were considered unsatisfactory, Liverpool showing only a partial ⅛d net advance. Paris was up 5 to 10 points, and Berlin ½ to 1 mark higher, but Budapest, on the other hand, closed 4 points lower. Primary receipts were slightly larger than last year. Cash wheat in New York closed as follows: No. 2 red, 86c, elevator, and 89c, free on board, afloat, nominal; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 89c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The corn market had comparatively little support all day. Prices weakened, and at the close were considerably under the previous night. The 1 o'clock prices in New York follow: May, 50⅞c; July, 50¾c; September, 51⅛c, and December, 50c. The light interior receipts were partly offset by larger estimates for Monday, while Liverpool closed ⅜d lower, and there was some pressure on long account. Clearances of 747,000 bushels gave the market a temporary uplift towards noon. Cash corn was steady, closing in New York as follows: No. 2 corn, 54c, elevator, and 51¼c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 52¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 52¼c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market seemed to broaden yesterday and showed a very firm undertone, with prices reaching new high records for the bull movement. The close was within a couple of points of the best, at a net advance of 6@14 points. Sales for the half session were estimated at 300,000 bales.

The opening was firm at an advance of 5@9 points on higher cables than expected, unsettled weather over the South, and bullish week-end figures. After selling about 11 points net higher on the active months the market reacted 4 or 5 points under realizing, but offerings of long cotton were very quickly absorbed by the purchases of Southern shorts and Wall Street longs, who are being attracted to the market by the aggressive character of the bull support, and the market soon rallied again, reaching the highest point of the session and movement in the late trading, when May sold at 11.17 and July at 11.17, or 18@14 points net higher. May closed at 11.16 and July at 11.16. Contract prices ranged as follows:

STANDARD OIL ATTACHMENT.

Deputy Sheriff Murray has received an attachment for $16,700 against Louis H. Abel of Yokohama, Japan, in favor of the International Oil Company, a sub-company of Standard Oil, which was granted on the application of John Brooks Leavitt, attorney for the company, at the instance, it is said, of William G. Rockefeller, Treasurer.

The attachment was granted on the ground of non-residence, and the warrant says it is for wrongful conversion of personal property. It is said that Mr. Abel was Secretary of the company at Yokohama and took leave of absence a few weeks ago and did not return. He is looked for at San Francisco. The Sheriff served the attachment on a Custom House broker, but he said he had nothing belonging to Mr. Abel.

It is said there are sixteen cases of curios from Japan in the Custom House here which are supposed to belong to Mr. Abel.

INSTRUCTION.

DESIGNERS EARN $50 TO $150 PER WEEK AND UPWARD.

Ask any designer, grader or manufacturer familiar with this business—they will indorse unqualifiedly our statement; they will even tell you that, in their estimation, $150 per week is only an average salary.

Designing and grading is the best paid craft we know of—the demand is so great and the supply so small that manufacturers in many instances are compelled to call on foreign countries to fill their vacancies.

After years of laborious study and experiments, we have developed a method by which we are able to teach you to become an expert designer in from 10 to 20 lessons.

We do not ask you to enroll in our classes before thoroughly investigating our claims, but if you earn less than $50 per week, and if you wish to secure a prosperous future, then don't waste your time and energies on poorly-paid work that has no future in store for you, when we offer you the means to enter the best paying craft in America.

CUTTERS AND TAILORS

Should learn the most perfect and simple system of designing and grading men's and women's garments; personal instruction given by practical designer.

No interference with regular occupation; our method has received the unqualified indorsement of America's best designers and graders; we have students holding best positions and in business for themselves to whom we gladly refer you; call at once for our first free demonstration and permit us to fit you for position by which you will positively double your present salary; evening sessions Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Write for particulars. Address Dept. A, New York Designing and Grading Association, 535 to 539 Knickerbocker Building, 116 West 39th St., N. Y.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Dull—Banks Add $500,000 to Surplus.

Market Sags in Spite of Favorable Bank Return—Cotton Firm.

The stagnation of business in yesterday's short session of the Stock Exchange is illustrated by the fact that total transactions for the two hours were little more than 200,000 shares, while in only five stocks out of a list of fifty in which there was some trading were the day's changes equal to a point or more. Fluctuations were confined to the merest fractions throughout the list, and this lassitude was undisturbed by the publication of a favorable bank statement. Reading was once more the most active stock of the trading, closing with a loss of 1¼ points. Several usually inactive stocks, including Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, the "Soo" stocks and Canadian Pacific attracted attention as a result of the convergence upon them of what little activity there was outside of Reading shares. The buying in this more or less affiliated group under which advances were scored by the South Shore and "Soo" issues was accompanied by an indefinite report that in some way the roads were to be utilized in the formation of another route to the Pacific Coast. The general tendency of the market was toward a lower level, and at the end of the session small losses were found in a majority of the shares traded in. Dispatches from Indianapolis reported a continuation of the deadlock between operators and miners, and one outcome of this situation suggested was a postponement of all negotiations for several months, the status quo being maintained in the interval. A statement, issued apparently with the sanction of the anthracite operators, set forth the fact that the anthracite coal roads have about 9,000,000 tons of coal stocked in and near New York City, these holdings being entirely apart from such supplies as dealers and individuals may possess. Cabled advices from Europe on the Moroccan situation were of a distinctly cheerful tenor, although foreign markets moved heavily, gaining apparently no stimulus from this news.

A gain of $1,549,000 in cash, in connection with an increase of $3,901,000 in loans and of $4,202,000 in deposits, resulted in the addition of $498,650 to surplus, that item standing now at $6,363,775, an amount equal, to all purposes, to surplus reserve reported by the banks at this time since 1900, save only in 1904, when the surplus was $27,468,000. The cash increase reported by the Clearing House banks was larger than had been foreshadowed in conservative estimates of the week's currency movements, a fact which led to the belief that gold in transit was counted as a part of the reserves. Rates for demand sterling were a trifle higher, while exchange rates on New York City at interior points, particularly at Chicago, moved favorably. Wheat markets were somewhat lower and cotton prices were firm.

Question of Dividends Postponed.

The Directors of the United Railways Investment Company at their meeting yesterday postponed until to-morrow the question of paying off the back dividends on the company's preferred stock and beginning dividends on the common. Yesterday's meeting was adjourned for the reason that certain questions arose which it was desired to submit to counsel.

ON THE LONDON 'CHANGE

Very Little Business, Operators Still Being Cautious.

Algeciras Situation, Money Stringency, and the Condition of the Mines Department All Discourage Trading—Price Tendency Generally Downward.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 24.—Nobody would have suffered much if the Stock Exchange had been closed all the week, for there has been no business worth mentioning.

The same old influences have been operative to discourage investment and speculation. Londoners have felt a disinclination to commit themselves heavily while the news from Algeciras has indicated doubt as to a satisfactory end of the conference. They have had no disturbing reports from the continental Bourses this week, but their belief is that there would be trouble both in Paris and Berlin if the conference should end in a rupture, and they consider it the part of wisdom to move cautiously as long as the Moroccan question hangs in the balance.

Another influence tending to discourage trading has been the continued stringency of the money market and the uncertainty as to what will be the condition of the market after the turn of the quarter. Still another thing that has unfavorably affected business is the unsatisfactory state of the mines department.

The price tendency in most departments has been downward, but in the home and colonial Government section quotations are about on a level with those of last week.

Foreign Government securities have been ignored as a rule, the only group showing much activity being Japanese, and in their case the only difference in quotations is a fractional loss for the 6 per cents.

British rails have been very weak, notwithstanding the fact that the traffic returns are quite satisfactory.

American rails have followed the New York market as a rule, and the closing prices show a number of rather heavy declines, based, however, on trivial dealings.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 24.—Money was in good demand in the market to-day and rates were easier, resulting from Government disbursement. Discounts were also easier.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was quiet and irregular, operators being chiefly occupied with closing up engagements prior to the settlement. Consols were fairly steady at a fraction off. Americans opened dull, hardened slightly to about parity, became inactive, reacted, and closed dull. Grand Trunk relapsed on the traffic returns being about one-half the amount estimated.

Foreigners were idle. Japanese hardened and Russians were sold.

Japanese Imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104⅛.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £5,000.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15; Lisbon, 4.50.

The Indian Secretary to-day purchased $375,000 of Australian gold, due here April 17.

$2,500,000 STOCK INCREASE.

Hudson Valley Road to Retire Debentures with a New Issue.

The State Railroad Commission, it was announced in dispatches from Albany yesterday, has authorized the Hudson Valley Railway Company to increase its capital stock from $3,000,000 to $5,500,000. This $2,500,000 increase is the amount of stock necessary to provide for the retirement of an equal amount of 2 per cent. non-cumulative second-income debenture bonds, issued last year at the time of the reorganization of the company.

The holders of these bonds were given the right to convert them into 5 per cent. non-cumulative preferred stock after two years from the date of issue. The Hudson Valley Railway Company, a large amount of the securities of which was held by the Merchants' Trust Company at the time of its suspension, was reorganized in December last by a committee headed by John W. Herbert.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 24.—The market was slow to-day. Security holders of the Western Maryland Railroad find much encouragement in the earnings of the road for January, just made public. It is argued that if the earnings for January showed such a big increase when the company was still paying the Baltimore and Ohio toll on all freight hauled between Cherry Run and Cumberland, beginning with about April, when its own line between the two points is in working order, the figures should make a still better showing.

United Railways income bonds were fairly active again to-day, the sales of the free incomes amounting to $56,000 and the Baltimore trust certificates to $11,000. The former sold up to 75 and the latter to 73⅞. United incomes have been very strong and active this week, selling up to 75½ on Wednesday, and the certificates to 74½. Total sales for the week were free incomes $235,000, certificates $208,000. The general market closed firm, but dull. Shares, 60; bonds, $109,000.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

U. S. Steel Corporation's March Output Breaks Company's Record.

The United States Steel Corporation's production for March, as indicated by preliminary figures, will be in the neighborhood of 900,000 tons, or at the rate of more than 10,000,000 tons a year. These figures break all records not only for the month of March, but for any month in the company's history. Based on this production and prevailing prices the March earnings also will eclipse all previous figures for the month.

The company's best month was May, 1902, when the high prices of steel brought the earnings to $13,120,000, although the actual output was smaler than this month's promises to be.

Mahoning and Shenango Valley pig iron makers have fixed on $17.50 as the minimum price for No. 2X at furnace, and trade authorities say that the demand in the East is strong enough to take the entire production for the next few months at this price.

E. H. Gary, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, declares that manufacturers have oversold accounts for the falling off in the volume of sales at the present time, but the amount of unfinished orders already booked is so great that at the present rate of booking it would be impossible to fill all the orders now on hand and to be taken for at least fifteen months.

NEW HAVEN STOCK INCREASE.

President Mellen Explains the Purpose of the Proposed Issue.

NEW HAVEN, March 24.—In explanation of the increase of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company's capital stock, President Mellen to-day made this statement:

"The capital stock of the New Haven Road has been authorized to be increased for several purposes—to redeem the debentures issued Jan. 1, 1906, and to pay for securities of leased lines absorbed and for others in process of absorption, but for no other purposes.

"The amount of all the increases will aggregate about $40,000,000, but the stock will not be issued until the securities it represents are taken up."

President Mellen's statement, inasmuch as $20,000,000 of new stock will be required some five years hence to redeem the convertible debentures, indicates that about $20,000,000 additional are to be used in the acquirement of subsidiary lines, as has been the fixed policy of the company for many years, and several of those lines will soon be legally merged.

SHELDON TO SUCCEED GAGE?

He Is Said to be Slated for Next Head of the U. S. Trust Company.

A report, of which no confirmation could be obtained, was circulated in Wall Street yesterday that E. W. Sheldon was slated to succeed ex-Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage in the Presidency of the United States Trust Company. Mr. Sheldon has been counsel of the Trust Company for several years. He refused last night to deny or affirm the story. Mr. Gage's resignation will be handed in at the meeting of the Trustees in April.

The Bank Statement.

The cash holdings of the banks reported yesterday showed an increase of $1,549,300, which exceeded the largest of Friday's estimates of the gain based on the known movements of money. There was a large increase in deposits and loans to offset the increase in cash, so that the gain in surplus amounted to only $498,650. The week's increase in loans amounted to $3,901,200 and the increase in deposits to $4,202,600. The gain in cash was due partly to the imports of gold from Europe. The banks now have a surplus reserve of $6,363,775, compared with $6,479,325 at this time a year ago.

The items of last week's bank statement, the changes from the preceding week, and the statement of March 25, 1905, follow:

50 Millions More Wabash Stock.

The $50,000,000 increase in the capital stock of the Wabash Railroad Company, and announced yesterday, is the stock which was authorized in 1904. Of the increase, $10,000,000 was issued in 1904 to acquire stock of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal Railway Company. The remaining $40,000,000 is presumably still in the treasury.

THE SPECULATIVE SITUATION.

A professional trader of more than average sagacity, one who thinks nothing of swinging a line of 10,000 shares when he is in sympathy with the market, stood idly by last week, watching prices swing to and fro, and declared on Saturday that he had not made a single commitment in the five days preceding. "I am bearish for the long pull," he said, "but I dare not sell stocks short."

"And why?" he was asked.

"Because the real stocks do not come out," he replied. "The tape tells me that. Every little while the crowd goes in and hammers the market, but it doesn't dislodge stocks in any quantity. It gets prices down 2 or 3 per cent., but when it turns and wants to cover there are no stocks. A bear wants stocks to come in as prices decline. There can't be too many stocks around to suit him. The trouble is, just now, that there are so few stocks in sight."

One might go from one end of Wall Street to the other asking brokers, "Where are the stocks?" and nine in every ten would say: "We can't tell you. It puzzles us. All we know is that our people are not loaded up with them." The head of a very prominent Stock Exchange house declared last week that the loans of his firm had fallen off 60 per cent. in the last six months. Another broker stated that his loans had been cut just in two since January. The story is the same all over the Street. Brokers' loans have been reduced 30 to 60 per cent. in the last few months, which means that their lines of margined stocks have decreased proportionately, and now, when a bear crowd attacks the market, "stocks do not come out."

In the first place, investors have been taking stocks away from the Street. The investment absorption of securities in the last two and a half years has been larger than in any corresponding period of time in the history of the Stock Exchange. Thus has the floating supply of stocks been reduced, as compared with what it was three years or so ago. Commenting upon this phase of the subject, a broker remarked last week: "I happen to know a man who owns $6,000,000 of securities outright. He has them in his box. You ask him anything about the market, in a speculative sense, and he says that he is all out of it, and hasn't any stocks. He means that he hasn't any speculative stocks. He doesn't include the contents of his strong box." But investors haven't got all the stocks. It looks as if the remainder, classified as the "floating supply," had become pretty well concentrated in the hands of the larger interests of Wall Street. So far as any speculative distribution of stocks at enormously inflated values is concerned, it is, indeed, a question whether the bull market of the last two years has not been a failure. Prices are down only about 10 points in the average from the extreme high level reached in January, and brokers report that their loans are only about half as large as they were at the top, and that they are pretty well sold out.

In the market's present position there are elements of great technical strength, and whatever view one may choose to take of the more distant future, current speculative thought cannot but be influenced by the fact that after a rapid decline from the high prices of January, stocks are now so held that it is difficult to bring them out. Speculation has come almost to a full stop. The amount of energy required to induce fresh selling is a restraint upon operations for the decline, and the extreme difficulty of reawakening any speculative enthusiasm for the bull side is equally discouraging to operators who would work for higher prices. The transactions from day to day are almost wholly professional, and the comment seems justified that the trading is not in stocks, but in contracts. That is about what it amounts to. Prices are bid up one day by one crowd and put down the next by another crowd, and neither makes any headway.

If there is one clearly defined opinion in Wall Street at present it is that the so-called big interests have the market situation perfectly in hand. Assuming this to be true, the actions of the market would seem to indicate that these interests desire it to remain dull and uneventful for the sake of some ultimate purpose. As to the nature of such purpose, there is necessarily a lot of idle speculation. It could easily be argued, however, that these large interests, having control of the market and presumably having stocks to sell at a price, are likely in due time to advance prices by a concerted effort, if for no other reason than to get a higher level from which to begin selling "on a scale down."

The Street has been forewarned as to the probability of money flurries this coming week, (the last week of the quarter,) occasioned by preparations for financing the April disbursements. The belief has been established that money market conditions will improve, at least temporarily, during the month of April. Many brokers are provided with time money considerably in excess of their present needs. There is probably not a large commission house in the Street that has not a surplus of time money. This is some sort of insurance against any really serious difficulties with the end of the March quarter.

The question of a coal strike will doubtless be determined this week. The indifference of the operators, especially the anthracite operators, who have large reserves of coal and would probably have to curtail operations in any event, leads many to suppose that there will be a strike unless the miners back down completely. In the event of a strike the fear of it will cease to be a bearish influence in the stock market. A strike in prospect is a bear crowd's asset, but a strike in fact is not a thing to sell stocks on. The news that the miners had gone out might affect the market adversely for a day or so, but the weight of experience is against holding a bearish position on stocks because of a strike in progress.

In a longer view of the market, quite apart from such technical conditions as have been discussed, account needs to be taken of the fear among financial authorities that the clamor for restrictive legislation, for investigations, and for corporation "smashing" generally, will ultimately hurt business. The Chronicle, an organ of conservative financial thought, says: "Another disturbing condition, as we all know, is the socialistic tendency which has had such a rapid development in the last two or three years. We need not dwell upon this condition; every conservative man is alive to its adverse influence, and is ordering his affairs under a fear of what may be the outcome."

There are some very high authorities who declare that this fear has alreay begun to make itself felt in business. It seems a little significant that Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, should call attention to the unpleasant possibilities of the agitation. He says: "There is no reason to expect a diminution in our lines of business in the near future, unless the same is occasioned by unforeseen circumstances, such as a failure of crops or unreasonable political action. * * * Perhaps more danger is to be feared from possible unreasonable political action. At the present time the atmosphere seems to be charged with distrust and suspicion. This applies more or less to good and bad enterprises alike. Some justification is found in recent exposures for the sentiment referred to; but the feeling of apprehension undoubtedly has been exaggerated."

For several weeks the United States Steel stocks have been a heavy drag upon the market. When the general list rallies after a day or two of depression, they come up in a very sluggish manner, and when the general list goes off again they are notably weak. The significance of this lies in the fact that the stock market public has been educated to regard the Steel stocks as the best barometer of business conditions.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 24.—New York exchange was 10c. discount and par. Time and call loans, 5¼@6 per cent. Further small selling of Diamond Match shares was the feature of the business of the short session on the local Exchange to-day. On sales aggregating only 275 shares the price fell from 133 to 131, the latter the lowest price since the recovery from the general depression of 1903.

Illinois Brick shares were easy to-day, selling off from 65¼ to 65 on further reports of competition. Canal and Dock went around 60. Telephone was firm at 120. Carbon continued to be very poorly supported, and ten shares broke the stock two points, down to 86. North Chicago Street Railway was firm, selling from 30 up to 35. West Chicago rose from 28 to 30.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

E. D. Shepard & Co., bankers, of 31 Nassau Street, have opened an office in Boston.

Russell R. Coats, for many years statistician for Theodore H. Price, and William P. Quentell have organized the firm of Quentell, Coats & Co., with Theodore H. Price as special partner.

The Stock Exchange Committee on Securities has ruled that between March 26 and April 14 the Morton Trust Company certificates of deposit for Metropolitan Street Railway stock must be designated as "dividend on" or "dividend off."

The same committee has also ruled that transactions in Kansas City Southern common and preferred are ex rights since March 20 and that sales of rights must be settled March 27. Sales after March 27 are cash or regular way. The right to subscribe terminates April 2.

The Stock Exchange memberships of Thomas S. Smith and E. Hunt Allen, Jr., have been posted for transfer to William G. McKinley and William R. Massie, respectively.

The New Jersey State Bankers' Association will hold its annual convention at the Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, on April 27 and 28. Secretary Taft and Gov. Stokes of New Jersey are announced as two of the speakers.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 24.—The market was excessively dull and as uninteresting as it was inactive. There was not a single feature to the trading that calls for special comment. Prices generally were firm. Local banks look for a tightening of the money market next week and say there is little relief in sight until the middle of April.

Total sales, 7,749 shares.

Gun Ribs Must Pay 50 Per Cent. Duty —Other Decisions.

In a decision by I. F. Fischer, the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a protest filed by William Read & Sons of New York, regarding the customs classification of gun ribs, which the Government claimed to be dutiable at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem under the provision in the Dingley tariff for parts of double-barreled guns. The importers maintained that the articles came within the meaning of the paragraph in the free list for shotgun barrels, in single tubes. The board, after a review of the testimony in the case, finds that the claim is without merit.

General Appraiser Sharretts wrote a decision sustaining the claim of George Borgfeldt & Co., New York, for lower duty on articles composed in chief value of pyroxylin. It was decided that the articles come within the meaning of the tariff schedules for "toys."

In a decision by W. F. Howell, the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled a claim submitted by A. L. Tuska of New York, it being held that certain small silk flags must stand duty at the rate of 50 per cent. under the provision in the Dingley tariff for manufactures of silk. The board decided that the articles could not be considered toys, and must therefore pay the full duty levied by the Collector.

The Customs Court sustained claims filed by J. & H. Rosenberg & Co., regarding the classification of spangled horsehair trimmings and horsehair and straw braids. The board denied claims filed by J. H. Fithian & Co. regarding the rate of duty applicable to woven silk fabrics.

A protest filed by A. Hiller & Co., New York, dealing with the classification of certain flax fabrics was denied.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

HARRY E. EDER.—Harry E. Eder, a hotel manager residing at 18 West Twenty-fifth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $11,747 and no assets. Among the creditors are Thomas Hooker, Philadelphia, $1,850; Edward Davis, $1,000; estate of Henry E. Meeker, Rondout, $885; Charles R. Myers, $700, and H. E. Stevens & Son, $500. Weschler & Myers, his attorneys, said that the liabilities were incurred while conducting the Avon Inn, at Avon, N. J., during the Summer of 1904. Mr. Eder has at times managed the Lakewood Hotel, Kaaterskill Hotel, Grand Hotel, and Rudolf Hotel at Atlantic City.

HOLLAND METAL RECOVERY COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Holland Metal Recovery Company of 42 Broadway show liabilities $21,771 and nominal assets $1,500 in patents. Among the creditors are Frank M. Andrews, Cincinnati, $15,148; William M. Greenwood, Treasurer of the company, $3,650, and Cary & Fielding, Denver, $1,301.

BERTHA SPITZER.—Judge Adams of the United States District Court has appointed Robert A. Inch receiver of the assets of Bertha Spitzer, baker of 225 Second Street, on the application of Harry Krulewitch, a creditor. There are no assets in sight, as she transferred the business; but creditors may institute proceedings to have the transfer declared void.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

If there was any very noticeable difference between the dealings of the last few days and those of other recent weeks, it was nothing more than the absence of conspicuous industrial transactions. If there is some slight decline in the volume of professional trading from now on it need occasion no surprise, since the time is almost at hand when operators are trying to "clean up," rather to search out new opportunities, and when the market contains a relatively large proportion of sellers.

The work of transforming entire blocks in the territory over which the east side residential district is expanding goes on steadily. Last week it became known that the most recent instance of this invasion affects the block on Fifty-sixth Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues. Nine houses passed into the hands of new owners, all of whom will remodel the dwellings and hold them in anticipation of the very generally improved condition of all the territory east of Park Avenue, which, it is expected, will come with the completion of the New York Central's improvements.

In many respects the most important of the week's announcements was that part of the flatiron block at the northerly end of Times Square had been leased for a long term, and will be suitably improved. No details concerning the new structure are yet available, but if it proves to be somewhat less spectacular than the one exploited a few weeks ago for the same property, it is also likely to have better staying qualities and to be of a character generally beneficial to the entire neighborhood.

The lower east side continues to receive a generous amount of attention from the small speculators and builders who six months ago were confining their efforts to the East Harlem territory. The reason for this is said to be that, with the great increase in lot prices uptown, it has been discovered that the older tenement district south of Fourteenth Street presents fully as many opportunities for profitable speculation and building, and that, despite all that has been said about the movement away from the lower east side to Brooklyn and elsewhere, the demand for housings there is just as strong as ever.

The downtown district, judged by recent standards, hardly yielded its full quota of deals, and, with the exception of the purchase of the site for a new Staats-Zeitung Building at Elm and Duane Streets, those that were reported affected only small isolated parcels.

LATEST DEALINGS BY BROKERS.

A. H. Mathews has sold for ex-Mayor Charles A. Schieren to an investor the Wilson Building, 73, 75, 77, and 79 Fulton Street and 54 Gold Street, northeast corner of Fulton and Gold Streets.

William A. White & Sons have sold for the Roosevelt estate to a client 77 John Street, 96 feet east of William Street, a four-story loft building, on lot 25 by 100.

C. E. Deppeler has sold for Harriet Provost 62 and 64 Gold Street, two four-story brick buildings, on plot 29.4 by 63.6 and irregular.

S. B. Goodale & Son have sold for W. S. Patten the five-story business building 209 Duane Street, adjoining the corner of Washington Street.

Deal for Morningside Apartments.

The Corporation Liquidating Company has sold the apartment house known as the Morningside, covering the entire block front on Morningside Avenue, between 118th and 119th Streets. This is the property purchased by the Corporation Liquidating Company from Judge Leonard about two years ago. The house was put up by Iron & Todd seven years ago. The McVickar-Gaillard Company negotiated the deal.

Simon Sichel, who recently bought the five five-story double flats at the northwest corner of Broadway and 132d Street from Charles T. Barney, though Bernard Smyth & Sons, has resold the property to Max Marx.

Large Plot Bought by Operators.

Edward L. King & Co. have sold for clients of John F. Doyle & Sons to Gutwillig Brothers and Joseph Hamershlag the block front on Exterior Street, from Seventy-third to Seventy-fourth Street, a plot of twenty-two lots. This property fronts on the new Exterior Street, or East End Avenue, which has just been completed, running from Fifty-ninth Street, at the proposed entrance to the Blackwell's Island Bridge, to Eighty-first Street, and faces the new sea wall and large public docks. The plot has been in the possession of the Jones estate for over 100 years. The entire neighborhood is rapidly being improved by buildings used for manufacturing purposes.

Lots Sold in Dyckman Tract.

Max Marx has sold, through Hedley R. Weeks, to Philip Schmidt the plot, 75 by 150, on the east side of Vermilyea Avenue, 100 feet south of Emerson Street.

Houses Sold in Various Sections.

The McVickar-Gaillard Realty Company has sold for Edna L. Hoge the four-story remodeled dwelling 285 Lexington Avenue, on lot 22.9 by 80, to a client, for occupancy.

THE AUCTION ROOM.

For Wednesday, Joseph P. Day announces a long list of sales, the most interesting single item in which is 85 Nassau Street, between Fulton and John Streets, a property which has not changed hands except by inheritance since 1800. Other parcels in Mr. Day's offering are 26 East Tenth Street, 252 Hudson Street, the northwest corner of Manhattan Avenue and 121st Street, the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 135th Street, and a plot, 100 by 100, on Westchester Avenue, near Prospect Avenue. On the following day, Thursday, the same auctioneer will put up the Stuyvesant leasehold property 229 East Ninth Street.

A large plot in the Pennsylvania section will be the most prominent of Auctioneer Kennelly's offerings on Tuesday. The property consists of the four tenements at 206 to 212 West Thirty-sixth Street, on plot 68.6 by 98.9, only 95 feet west of Seventh Avenue.

The southwest corner of Sixth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, 100 by 100, a leasehold under a ground lease having forty-seven years yet to run, will be sold on the same day, as will also the dwellings 24 East Eighty-third Street and 49 East Ninety-second Street. On Thursday L. J. Phillips & Co. will offer at executor's sale the dwelling 134 East Seventy-second Street.

Under a decree of the Surrogates' Court Lounsberry & O'Connor will sell on Thursday the seven-story building 131 West Twenty-fourth Street, the northeast corner of Water Street and Pike Slip, and a plot of four lots at Bathgate Avenue and 174th Street.

The only event which occasioned any interest in the salesroom last week was the foreclosure sale of 82 Park Row, in the block to be acquired by the city for the enlargement of the Brooklyn Bridge terminal. The property, which measures 24.10 by 95.3, was struck down for $119,700—a figure which commanded no very serious attention, since it had every appearance of having been created to a very large extent for what effect it might have in influencing the condemnation awards on properties in the neighborhood.

MORTGAGE FILINGS FOR WEEK.

There were recorded last week 553 mortgages for $10,093,076, of which 277, for $2,841,830, were at 6 per cent.; 115, for $1,172,005, at 5½ per cent.; 76, for $4,154,370, at 5 per cent., and 13, for $679,200, at 4½ per cent. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 611 mortgages for $11,602,488, of which 285, for $3,076,235 were at 6 per cent.; 4, for $16,700, at 5½ per cent.; 197, for $2,357,837, at 5 per cent.; 26, for $795,550, at 4½ per cent., and 15, for $1,155,100, at 4 per cent.

NEW ENGLAND.
FOR SALE OR TO LET.

Shore-Front Property
This property is restricted, so that none but beautiful places will be found in the neighborhood. It is right on the water, high ground to insure health and beautiful views; there is no desirable dwelling property like it left for sale on the Sound. It is 20 minutes by trolley to Stamford station.

HISTORIC COUNTRY ESTATE OF 85 ACRES FOR SALE

On the hills adjoining Stamford, with elevation of 500 feet, affording extensive view of the Sound and intervening woodlands. House has 16 rooms, all modern convenience. A broad trout brook runs through the property, well supplied with fish and preserved by common consent of adjoining property owners. The woods are stocked with game and the accommodations for breeding are excellent. Price $25,000.

NURSE IN THE CITY HOME FACES FORGERY CHARGE

Detectives Arrest Her on Rochester Man's Complaint.

ACCUSED OF GETTING $600

Pinkerton Man Says Mrs. Ringe's Husband Attempted Suicide After She Got $7,000 by Forging His Name.

More than one old woman at the New York City Home on Blackwell's Island was surprised and sorry yesterday when some detectives called away from them one of their newest nurses, and one they had come thoroughly to like. The detectives arrested her on the charge of forgery, her name being entered at Police Headquarters as Mrs. Cecile Ringe, 32 years old. She formerly lived in Rochester.

Assistant Supt. Bailey of the New York Pinkerton Agency and Detective Sergts. Brown and Somers of the Central Office went to the Island, located the new nurse, had Supt. Robertson bring her in from one of the wards, and put her under arrest. The complainant is the Alliance Bank of Rochester. Mrs. Ringe had been employed there by Albert J. Denninger, a bicycle dealer, whose name she is alleged to have forged.

Mrs. Ringe sank into a chair and began protesting that she had committed no crime, that some mistake must have been made, and that she was surely the object of a conspiracy. The old women out in her ward, when they heard about how the new nurse had carried on, voted that it was the sense of that ward that they didn't believe Nurse Ringe had done anything wrong.

The prisoner will be arraigned in court to-day, and it is expected that she will be sent back to Rochester some time this week.

Mrs. Ringe is a portly woman, and her face is serene and peaceful. But Assistant Supt. Bailey of the Pinkerton Agency makes her record out a bad one.

"Prior to 1898 she lived with her husband, Harry F. Ringe," said Bailey last night. "The husband was a salesman for Spielman & Co. of this city. He had saved some money. His wife got away with $7,000 by forging his name, and in 1898 the husband, on finding out what his wife had been doing, attempted to commit suicide by jumping from a ferryboat. He was pulled out against his will. Then he spent a year in a sanitarium. He went West, and is now in business in Detroit. I am told that he expects to return shortly to get a divorce.

"That information and other information concerning the misdoings of the wife we first learned from a Miss Ringe, sister of Harry Ringe, who now lives at 515 Willow Street, Hoboken. We have verified most of the things she told us. She says that Mrs. Ringe had to get something away from nearly everybody she came in contact with, however small it was. Many complaints reached Miss Ringe of the wife's peculations.

"On Feb. 20 the woman left Rochester, N. Y. With her came the twenty-two-year-old nephew of Mrs. Ringe's employer. But he was not suspected of being connected with the forgeries. Mr. Denninger says he found out that some $600 had been obtained by extracting checks from his check book and forging his signature, and also by getting counter checks from the Alliance Bank, Rochester, where Mr. Denninger had an account.

"Mrs. Ringe and the young man went to the Grand Union Hotel Feb. 20. They remained there until March 1, when they were put out for non-payment of their board bill. It appears that the two went to St. Mary's Home at 143 West Fourteenth Street. Mrs. Ringe told a sad story about having been robbed of every cent she had while at the Grand Union Hotel. She was admitted, and the young man went back to Rochester.

"Mrs. Ringe remained in St. Mary's Home only a day or two. She then got employment in the New York City Home on Blackwell's Island."

SURGEONS MEND BOY'S SKULL

Belton Will Return to School To-morrow Wearing a Silver Plate.

Joseph Belton is going to make a new start in life with a plate of silver, two inches in diameter, in the top of his skull. Three weeks ago he was going home from school to 266 West 153d Street, and was run over by an Eighth Avenue car. There did not seem much life left in him, but they rushed him off to Washington Heights Hospital. It was found there was a fracture two inches long right at the crown of his head.

Trephining was the only chance of saving his life, and Dr. Henry M. Calvin and Dr. C. C. Sichel performed the operation. A silver plate one-sixteenth of an inch thick was fitted in, and next day the boy recovered consciousness. It was another two days before he spoke, and then he declared he felt nothing but a cut in his head. He was a good deal worried about the loss of his hair, but for a long time he refused to believe that his skull was part silver.

He was discharged yesterday, twenty-two days after the operation. He will be at school to-morrow.

BECALMED 64 DAYS AT SEA.

Scottish Hills Arrives After a Memorable Voyage from the Far East.

The British ship Scottish Hills, which sailed from Manila for New York early last September, got in yesterday afternoon, after a memorable passage, on which she lay becalmed in the China Sea for sixty-four days, to encounter afterward numerous storms, during one of which she lost one of her seamen, who fell from the upper foretopsail yard into the sea.

The Scottish Hills brought a cargo of hemp. Her crew were overjoyed when they stepped ashore, owing to the length and tediousness of the voyage. The ship encountered all kinds of gales from all points of the compass, but despite the furious onslaught of wind and wave, arrived at New York little the worse for the voyage. The seaman, Hugh Townley, who was lost fell into the sea on March 20 in a heavy southwester when the ship was twenty miles north of Cape Hatteras.

CHANGES AT THE CIRCUS.

The Auto Somersault Provokes the Wonder of Crowded Audiences.

The new week at the Barnum & Bailey circus will begin to-morrow afternoon with several important changes in the programme, to give greater concentration to the performance, and keep the entire entertainment within two hours and a half.

Miss Josie De Mott, the somersault equestrienne, who was slightly injured on the opening night, has recovered, and will resume her place. Several changes will add to the effectiveness of the new "Peace" spectacle.

The "Tourbillon de la Mort" has proved the sensation of the year. The fearless courage of Mlle. Octavie Lo Tour, who rides the somersault-turning automobile, has created a great impression on the audiences that crowd Madison Square Garden, while the mechanical part of the apparatus which makes the somersault possible, is a constant source of wonder.

There is a particularly interesting display of freaks in the curio hall this year. In addition to the "human prodigies" there is a high-class vaudeville and musical entertainment. Two performances will be given daily. The advance sale promises a most successful circus season.

NO DINNER TO DEPEW.

He Declines Montauk Club's Annual Invitation—Blames His Health.

For the first time in fifteen years, Senator Chauncey M. Depew will not celebrate his birthday next month as the guest of the Montauk Club of Brooklyn. At his own request the annual dinner in his honor will not take place. Ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, the President of the club, recently extended to Senator Depew an invitation to be the guest of the club, as usual. Mr. Woodruff has received a reply from the Senator, in which the latter refers to his illness:

> I have delayed answering your letter, hoping this would pass away, so that your dinner would be one of the old kind, and I equal to its requirements, its hilarity, and its spirit. Unhappily I am afraid that for the first time in fifteen years the Montauk dinner is to be omitted. Of all the disagreeable things that have come to me, the first time that I have been sick in many years, this loss grieves me the most. With kindest regards to the Montauks and my love to you—faithfully yours.

WOMAN HELD AS A SMUGGLER.

$300 Worth of Lace Hid In Her Automobile Coat Sleeves.

A woman saloon passenger of the French liner La Savoie, in yesterday from Havre, was arrested on the pier charged with attempting to smuggle a quantity of valuable lace. Before Commissioner Shields the woman said she was "Mme. Carruthers," and was sent to the Tombs in default of $2,500 bail. An hour later the cash was furnished by a "Miss McHugh."

Deputy Collector Norwood saw her pass an automobile coat to a friend on the pier. The Customs Inspectors found several pieces of lace, worth about $300, concealed in the sleeves.

Although the woman told Commissioner Shields her name was Carruthers, she signed the papers releasing her from the Tombs as "Mme. Cathers."

CAPT. ROBERTSON OUT.

Resigns from the 71st Regiment—He Served in Cuban Campaign.

Capt. Arthur Leslie Robertson, commanding Company C of the Seventy-first Regiment, who was senior Captain of that command, has resigned. Although the reason for the resignation is given as press of business, it is known that Col. William G. Bates desired a change in the company's command.

Capt. Robertson, when Gen. Francis V. Greene was Police Commissioner, was his secretary. He joined Company C as a private in 1889, and reached the grade of Captain in 1899. During the war with Spain he served with the Seventy-first in the Cuban campaign.

OCEAN TRAVELERS.

Some Titled Folk Arrive on Campania and La Savoie.

Among the arrivals from Liverpool on the Cunarder Campania yesterday morning were:

The Earl of Ronaldshay, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Baring, Everard Baring, Dr. C. A. Aldao, B. F. Blackburn, the Countess de Bosdari, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Edwards, A. S. Emerson, E. D. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hunt, Mrs. Katherine Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fox, J. W. Shelton, Trevor Williams, and Philip Winram.

Some of those who arrived on the French liner La Savoie were:

The Countess G. de Pontiac, the Countess de Villelume Sombreuil, Capt. J. Ery Davies, A. Binnse de St. Victor, Dr. A. H. Eherman, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Landon, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Parmentier, and Charles Jullien.

Fair for League's Building Fund.

The Young Folks' League of the Harlem Educational Institute will hold a three days' fair at Terrace Garden, beginning on March 27. The profits will be devoted to the league's building fund. A plot between Madison and Fifth Avenues, on East 111th Street, has been purchased, and $200,000 will be needed for the building.

BARRY FOUND CHINA MAKING READY FOR WAR

Author Says Anti-Foreign Feeling Is Strong.

EXCLUSION ACT ONE CAUSE

He Thinks Conditions in the Philippines Are Not Hopeful—Gen. Wood Was Right at Mount Dajo.

Richard Barry, the traveler and author, who has just returned from a trip through the Philippines, China, and Russia, had some things to say yesterday concerning conditions in those countries. For nearly two hours he talked with reporters at the Fifth Avenue Hotel of what he had seen and heard abroad.

"There is trouble brewing in China," said Mr. Barry. "There is every reason to believe that China is getting ready for war. The preparation she is making is one indication of it. For a long time past, as you may know, the Chinese have had German instructors for their soldiers. Lately these have been displaced by Japanese instructors. The reason for the change is in some measure, no doubt, due to the recent success of the Japanese over the Russians, but it is fundamentally due to the fact that the Germans demand much more for their services than do the Japanese.

"Anti-foreign feeling in China is strong. In Southern China it is especially directed against the Americans. One reason for this feeling seems to be the sale of our interest in the Canton—Han-Kow Railroad. This transaction, in which Mr. Morgan played a prominent part, is regarded by Chinamen as tending to show that we are mercenary. The Exclusion act is also a cause for their feeling against us, and the stories of exclusion which merchants returning from San Francisco to China have been telling have now become pretty thoroughly disseminated.

"The Chinese seem, strange to say, also to have become imbued with the idea that we are easy—financially I mean. This is due to the fact that Secretary Hay returned to them the indemnity after the Boxer difficulty. The idea of national integrity conveyed in the transaction seems to have been wholly lost on the Chinese. They think that a country that will return money must be a country of fools.

"The Chinese have begun to wake up to the fact that north and south they are menaced by foreigners. The Germans, you know, have crept in on them at Shantung. No legal violation has been committed by the Germans there. They have just crept in by buying land right and left until they practically own the place. They have their own soldiers, their own institutions throughout, and all this without any Governmental understanding with China. Personally, I got the impression that the new military skill of the Chinese will be directed against the Germans first.

"There is a new national figure looming up in China. It is Yuen Hsi K-ai, Viceroy of Chi-Li. This man is still young and has a wonderful hold on the guilds in China. You know they are much the same as our labor unions here. He also expounds the propaganda of unification of the army. That means more than it seems to mean to us. You know in China every Viceroy, every petty officer—I might almost say every policeman—has his army. To unify them means a great deal in China."

Of the Philippines Mr. Barry said that his visit to the archipelago had made him pessimistic. "The men with whom I talked over there," he said, "all seem to think that our colonial experiment in the Philippines will prove a failure. The Filipinos do not take us seriously. They think we will drop them again. Through their leaders they point to the fact that no republic has ever managed colonies successfully; that only under an imperial Government can colonies be managed effectually.

"Apropos of Gen. Wood and the recent engagement at Mount Dajo," Mr. Barry went on, "I desire to say that Gen. Wood did the only thing that it was possible to do. He was menaced and had to fight. Gen. Wood is showing himself to be a great executive in the Philippines. I met him and went over some of his duties with him. The impression over there is that he is destined to become a great figure, ranking with Lord Curzon and Sir Alfred Milner."

Mr. Barry's expressed impressions of Russia was concentrated mostly upon St. Petersburg, and became slightly humorous.

"I certainly got the impression there," said he, "that about 100,000 of the population of St. Petersburg, comprising the aristocracy, are in a bad way. In point of intellectual vigor they seem to be about 2,000 years behind Rome in her decadent days, and in point of self-indulgence about 2,000 years ahead of the twentieth century.

"I lost all track of time there, had to give up all my habits of daily routine. There was, for example, no use of my getting up, say, at 10 o'clock in the morning, for I could see no one at that hour. Paris and London are supposed to be night cities, and New York has some reputation along that line, but these cities are very primitive in their mode of life compared with St. Petersburg.

"In St. Petersburg the streets are as lively at 4 o'clock in the morning as they are in New York at midnight. The luxury of the interior of the residences is exquisite. One sinks up to the ankle into the carpets, for example. It is disgraceful for a young man to be engaged in any active pursuit. Strange to say, however, even with these effete notions the men have a strikingly manly bearing and the women are beauties."

Mr. Barry said that the general impression in Russia seemed to be that the Revolutionists would make another strike this Spring.

He said that he had met Gorki, the author, and that his impression of him was that he was sincere, but that he had also received the impression—"mark, this is only personal," he added—"that Gorki had done his best work."

ODELL IN ENEMY'S COUNTRY.

He Will Speak in Binghamton, Col. Dunn's Stronghold.

Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee, who was in town yesterday, will go to Binghamton to-morrow to speak in the evening at the dinner of the Binghamton Press Club. This will take him right into the heart of the anti-Odell forces, as Broome County is controlled by Col. George W. Dunn, whom Odell himself succeeded as Chairman of the State Committee. Both Odell and Dunn are to be among the speakers at the dinner.

It was learned yesterday that when Col. Dunn accepted the invitation to the dinner he did not know that Chairman Odell would be present. Mr. Odell, on the other hand, was informed that Col. Dunn would attend. In Republican circles it is expected that this dinner will develop some interesting politics.

While Odell was at State Headquarters yesterday he saw practically all the party leaders in New York and Kings Counties, and with them carefully went over matters relating to the apportionment, which must be settled within the next month. The local leaders have not yet completed their tentative plan of redistricting, for submission to the Legislature, and the plan may not be ready for another two weeks.

Mr. Odell declined yesterday to make any comment on the political situation.

"Let the others do the talking for the present," he said with a smile.

2,500 IDLE FOR A WEEK.

Erie's Repair Shops Closed Owing to Good Condition of Motive Power.

It was officially stated at the Erie Railroad offices yesterday that a majority of the repair shops on the road had closed for a week, because the motive power was in such good condition that it was deemed wise to close up and make the usual Spring repairs this week.

About 2,500 men will be idle. They will resume work April 1. The order has no bearing on the expected coal strike. The large number of new engines that the Erie purchased last Fall and the open Winter left the motive power in the best condition that it had been in the history of the road. The repairs necessary have been fewer than ever before.

EVANGELIST TORREY COMING.

He Will Address a Union Meeting in Carnegie Hall on April 6.

The first gun in the Summer evangelistic campaign for New York City is to be fired on Friday evening, April 6, in Carnegie Hall. The Rev. Dr. R. A. Torrey and Charles M. Alexander, the two evangelists who have in recent years conducted meetings in England, India, and Australia, and who are now in Philadelphia, are to come here to take part in the meeting.

There will be overflow meetings in the neighboring churches. At these places the same speakers will be heard as in the great hall. A chorus of five hundred voices is being organized, to be led by Mr. Alexander, and other musical features will be the Park Sisters' Cornet Quartet and Raffaelli's Italian Orchestra.

The Rev. Dr. Wilton Merle Smith (Presbyterian) is to preside at the mass meetings, and besides Dr. Torrey the speakers will include the Rev. Dr. H. A. Stimson, (Congregationalist,) the Rev. Dr. C. L. Goodell, (Methodist,) the Rev. Dr. Richard Hartley, (Baptist,) the Rev. Donald Sage Mackay, (Dutch Reformed,) and the Rev. Dr. James B. Ely, Superintendent of the Summer campaign. Dr. Ely will show what was done last Summer, using the stereopticon for illustration.

SHIPPERS ON DEFENSE EXPLAIN RATING TRICK

LACE CURTAINS AS TINWARE

Hairpins as "Hardware" Get Low Freights—A Handicap on Honest Dealers, Says Chairman Knapp.

The influence of the out-of-town retailer in inducing the shipper to underbill his goods was brought out at yesterday's hearing before the Inter-State Commerce Commission in the Federal Building. Two or three of the firms named as continual offenders against the freight schedules were represented, and submitted explanations of differences between the Inspectors and themselves as to the description of their goods. They told of requests from customers to get the shippings through on as low a schedule as possible.

Frank R. Davenport, Superintendent of the New York house of Butler Brothers, explained that the complaints against his house arose from the mistakes of packers, the difficulty of classifying a mixed lot of goods, and the lack of definite demarkation between china and crockery.

"We have the impression," said Chairman Knapp, "that hardly any goods you ship are labeled 'china.'"

"I doubt that," was the reply. "Our shippers have strict instructions to bill correctly. Sometimes we get a letter from a customer saying that he could take more from us if we could get a lower classification. We always reply that it is impossible."

"Does that mean that other firms are getting goods through at a lower classification?" asked Commissioner Prouty.

"Either that or they have a shorter haul," replied the witness.

Jacques Kahn, a mirror manufacturer of 531 West Thirty-seventh Street, gave as his reason for invariably billing looking glasses as "plate glass" that some years ago the railways supplied him with rubber stamps for plate-glass packages, and he had continued to use them.

"At any rate, we have always paid the highest rate," he said.

"Because the Inspectors mark all your shipments up, as a regular rule," remarked the Chairman. "Who pays the freight?"

"Wherever we have local competition we make a freight allowance to the consignee."

General Inspector Stevenson answered the defense of Butler Brothers. He quoted an instance where, some years ago, the firm had billed lace curtains as "stamped tinware, nested solid," and said recently it had described articles like hairpins and buttons as "hardware."

"Do you detect all misdescribed shipments?" asked Commissioner Prouty.

"I believe that more escape than we correct," was the reply. "We have no time even to go through all the packages we place on one side as suspicious."

"What would you recommend in the matter?"

"A vigorous prosecution of those who misdescribe either the articles or their weight," said the Inspector.

"Why don't you apply to the District Attorney? He can prosecute as well as we," asked the Commissioner.

Mr. Stevenson discussed the stress of competition leading to misdescriptions.

"The consignees," he said, "play the wholesale houses like a lot of horses. The man who can give the lowest rates, as well as the lowest prices, gets the business. Even firms that would like to be honest give way. Only the other day a manufacturer told me he had to label goods made in Massachusetts 'made in Germany,' in order to fool the customers in small stores. He was ashamed of it, but constant temptation made him do it."

A. A. Vantine & Co. was represented by the assistant general manager, William Lorenseur. He defended his house against the charge of underbilling china as "crockery" by declaring that the goods were only crockery, and set the commission off again on the riddle, "When is china not China?" He suggested the answer, "When it's from Japan," but Mr. Stevenson maintained that "when you can see through it" was the right answer.

Mr. Lorenseur would not accept transparency as the only test. He could not tell what his test was, but was sure that all the goods his firm shipped wholesale were Japanese crockery.

The commission then adjourned the hearing to a date to be fixed hereafter. If possible the inquiry will be continued in Buffalo, and there may be further hearings in New York.

"The point that strikes me," said Chairman Knapp after adjournment, "is the premium the practice of underbilling puts on dishonesty. It is difficult for an honest man to compete with those who indulge in this contemptible practice."

"Why are the dishonest shippers not prosecuted?" he was asked.

"It is very difficult to get proof of deliberate dishonesty even on one count. Then, if a jury is asked to convict because of one case of underbilling it will not perceive the importance of the matter and will consider that the corporations are making a great deal of a very small error. If we tried to get conviction on a number of counts the work of collecting evidence on each would be enormous. The remedy lies in a change of general sentiment."

ESTATE SUES ALFRED SULLY.

John Sabine Smith's Executors File a Complaint Covering 25 Years.

Alfred Sully of 221 St. John's Place, Brooklyn, a lawyer formerly at 80 Broadway, is being sued for more than $23,000 by the estate of John Sabine Smith, a lawyer, for services and moneys advanced in suits. The period named in the complaint is over twenty-five years.

Sully has not replied formally to the complaint, but denies the alleged indebtedness. He has been ill for a long time, and is now recovering from an operation. He says that in order to answer he will be obliged to employ an assistant to go over his books and papers, and that this will take at least six months. Mr. Sully is a member of the Lotos and Atlantic Yacht Clubs.

HOMES FOR JEWISH ORPHANS.

Appeal to Childless Jewish Families—Christians Caring for Some.

Dr. L. B. Bernstein, Superintendent of the Bureau of Boarding and Placing Out Jewish Dependent Children, conducted by the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, has sent out an appeal to Jewish families having no children, in which he calls attention to the fact that many Christians are the foster parents of Jewish orphans. The hard life of the Russian refugees here adds largely to the percentage of orphans, he says, so that the Jewish institutions cannot shelter them all. In his appeal Dr. Bernstein says:

"Instead of sending out foreign missionaries, let this be our missionary work, the providing of Jewish homes for Jewish children. To such people as care to avail themselves of our offer, and whose character and homes are such that they can give the proper care and training to one or two children, we offer to pay $2 per week for each child, also providing clothes and other necessities."

ANTI-SMOKE LEAGUE WANTS LAW ENFORCED

Fears That New York May Get to be Like Chicago.

AFFECTS THE TENEMENTS

Soft Coal Can Be Harmlessly Burned, If Properly Fired, Says Charles T. Barney.

Charles T. Barney gave out yesterday a list of those who have joined his Anti-Smoke League. This league, Mr. Barney says, is not an effort to prevent the burning of soft coal, but to insist upon proper firing and the practical abolition of smoke, and to stop the reckless and unnecessary disregard of the health and comfort of the city.

Many letters of complaint have been received from the tenement house districts, where clothes cannot be hung out to dry, nor can windows be opened, on account of the showers of cinders.

The law on the subject is thus stated by Mr. Barney:

> Section 1,261 of the Greater New York Charter provides that in all judicial proceedings the actions, proceedings, authority, and orders of the Department of Health shall at all times be regarded as in their nature judicial and be treated as prima facie just and legal.
>
> Section 1,262 of the Greater New York Charter provides that whoever shall violate any order of the Department of Health, or shall willfully omit to obey such order, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable to be indicted and punished for such offense.
> Section 1,264 of the Greater New York Charter provides that every Inspector or officer of the Department of Health may arrest any person who shall in the presence of such member or officer violate any order of the Department of Health, or who shall in such presence resist or be engaged in resisting the enforcement of any order of the Department of Health.

According to Health Commissioner Darlington's statement, this law is sufficiently drastic. It is the intention of the league to retain counsel and see why the law is not carried into effect. The following are the members of the league:

Various members of the league have expressed strong opinions on the subject of the smoke nuisance. Here are some of the sentiments:

"I know something about the disfiguring effects of soft coal smoke even on works of art placed within buildings. From what I have seen in Pittsburg, for example, and I quite agree with you that buildings subjected to it do not grow old beautifully."

Apart from our interest in the matter in a general way, we are quite directly affected by the nuisance, as are most all other architects, engineers, or people who have more or less drawing to do, and occupy, as a rule, the top or upper floors of buildings. The smoke and soot find a way in at all times to some degree, but in Summer, when we have to have the windows open, our drawing tables, &c., have continually a deposit, so that we have to have everything covered and hair brushes are on every table to remove the deposit from time to time, and at times it has been so bad that even in very hot weather we have had to close all the windows."

"I took up individually a year or two ago the smoke nuisance near Washington Square, which marred the comfort of our schools at that point. Except for such a fight as you make, New York will degenerate toward the condition of Chicago.

"I have written altogether four times to the Board of Health, always with the same response that 'your letter has been referred to the proper department.'"

"The reason that we are interested in this matter is also for commercial reasons. Up to within three or four years ago we were able to manufacture in New York City the most delicate silk fabrics, with a very small percentage of damaged goods. For the last three years, and particularly for the last two years, it has become almost impossible for us to manufacture delicate shades in this city on account of the impregnation of the air with soft coal smoke. It seems to us that it is becoming worse every year, and, while some of these users of soft coal are situated at a considerable distance from us, we claim that the entire atmosphere of New York City has become saturated with sooty substance."

MARRIED AFTER 29 YEARS.

Faithful Bachelor Becomes Third Husband of a Childhood Sweetheart.

When the Rev. Henry Marsh Warren, New York's hotel chaplain, spoke the words that made Tallman F. Hulbert and Mrs. Annie M. Hulbert man and wife yesterday, a bachelor's faithfulness for twenty-nine years to a childhood love was rewarded.

Hulbert, a wealthy fruit grower, who supplies the big markets in Chicago, is 54 years old. He became acquainted with his wife in Waterloo, N. Y., where both were born. When she was seventeen and he a year older, the neighobrs regarded them as lovers. They went to school together, and, as they grew up, young Hulbert was her constant escort at church and at the village entertainments.

When he was 23 years old, Hulbert left Waterloo and remained away for a year. He returned to find that his sweetheart was the wife of Moses Hulbert, his cousin. Life in Waterloo lost its charm. He went West to make a fortune, and succeeded.

Moses Hulbert died, and the girl married another man. A year ago she divorced him. Tallman Hulbert, still a bachelor, returned to Waterloo and sought out his old sweetheart. They agreed to marry when she had been divorced a year.

The time was up some days ago. They came to this city together. Mrs. Hulbert was an Episcopalian, and the couple went to the Little Church Around the Corner, but the rector refused to marry them, because the woman had been divorced.

Mr. and Mrs. Hulbert left last evening for Waterloo, where the parents of the bridegroom and the mother of the bride still live, and where there will be a family reunion. They will make their home at Breedsville, Mich. There Hulbert has built a residence overlooking the lake.

Wants a Tunnel Appeal Hurried.

The City Club made public last night a letter it has forwarded to Corporation Counsel Delany requesting him, for the city, to take an appeal immediately in the injunction proceedings against the progress of further work on the Steinway tunnel to Long Island City. Justice Blanchard has made permanent an injunction secured by the company restraining the city from interfering with the work. The City Club wants the matter hurried to the Appellate Division.

DIES IN ELEVATED STATION.

Frank A. Vivanti, a Silk Importer, Stricken as He Steps from Train.

Frank A. Vivanti, one of the best-known silk importers in the United States, died on the Forty-second Street station of the Sixth Avenue elevated yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Vivanti lived at the Don Carlos apartments, 595 Madison Avenue, and was returning from his office at 515 Broadway about 4:30 o'clock. As he stepped out of the car he was seen to put his hand to his side and turn white. Before help could reach him he fainted. He was carried into the waiting room. When Dr. Shanster of the New York Hospital arrived he pronounced him lifeless.

There was no means of identification on the body, but a pill box was found bearing the name of Dr. Edward Quintard, 145 West Fifty-eighth Street. Dr. Quintard identified the body. Mrs. Vivanti was prostrated when she heard of her husband's death. There are no children.

Mr. Vivanti was 55 years old. He was the last surviving member of his family in the firm of Vivanti & Bros., silk importers, with a branch in Yokohama. Recently he published a treatise on silk culture which brought commendation from the Kaiser, the King of Italy, and the Secretary of Agriculture of the United States. While on a visit to Japan last Summer he received a decoration from the Mikado. He was a member of the Players and the Lotos Club.

THE MULES LAUGHED FIRST.

Then Swearing Motormen and Snarling Conductors Felt Better.

It was a beautiful jam, with not a traffic policeman in sight and with the afternoon hurry at its worst.

Through Watts Street, toward Hudson, crowded half a dozen teams laden with dripping, muddy snow. Three up-bound Eighth Avenue electric cars had turned into Hudson Street, the motormen waiting impatiently for a chance to make up lost time. Four south-bound cars were in the same fix. Scores of teams were wedged in with the cars.

Two trucks squeezed in between the cars and the east curb in Hudson Street, and eight Italians began to rain shovelfuls of dirt from an excavation into the carts. The tangle had been disintegrating, but the dirt carts tied it up again tighter than ever. The sand and gravel went into the carts as fast as any one in normal condition could expect, but that made no difference to the waiting.

An apoplectic motorman clanged his bell harshly and swore between bangs. The other motormen banged their bells and cursed. Conductors swung out on the rear platforms and snarled. A fat woman in one car vowed she'd get out and walk, even if she did have a big bundle from the milliner's. She managed to squeeze off the car, but couldn't get any further because of the teams, then stepped back and told the conductor what she thought of the Ryan-Belmont merger. Babies in two cars began to squall. A man on one of the rear platforms lighted his pipe, refused to put it out, and looked at the undersized conductor in a pitying way.

A wicked snowball, apparently from a clear sky, showered slush into an open car door. Faces of good-humored men tightened up, women looked around as if they were either worried or disgusted; everybody was cross.

Then the dirt carts started to pull out. The sigh of relief was cut short, though, in a second, when a wheel on the first cart locked with a hub on a snow wagon. That was the limit.

A motorman had already started for the police station, when a big covered wagon, drawn by two reserved-looking mules and driven by a jolly faced negro, halted at the south end of the jam.

"When is we gwine to git home, Nellie?" shouted the negro.

The off mule pricked up her ears.

"Haw, hee-haw!" she blared.

"Hee-haw, haw!" blared the nigh mule.

Everybody laughed and got good-natured at one gulp. A motorman led a relief party to the two tied-up vehicles, and they were pried apart. The traffic tide flowed all ways from Canal and Hudson Streets, and the mule team jogged along up town, as reserved as ever.

UNIONS SEEKING PEACE.

Another Attempt to be Made to Have Housesmiths' Recognized.

Though the Allied Iron Associations have gone on record as being against recognition, another attempt has been begun to obtain it for the Housesmiths' Union. The new movement was started last evening at a meeting of representatives of thirty-one unions in the building trades in Groll's Hall, in East Fifty-third Street.

Though the unions under the arbitration agreement have decided not to strike in sympathy with the housesmiths, some of them, it was said, were afraid that the open shop in one trade would pave the way for the open shop in other trades. It was decided at the meeting to appoint a subcommittee to devise a plan for harmonizing the old and the new unions in the trades where there are two unions. An attempt will be made in May to induce the Allied Iron Associations to rescind their open-shop declaration in the housesmiths' trade.

"WE WANT ARMS!" SAYS TCHAYKOFFSKY

"Tragedy of Russia" Described by Noted Revolutionist, Who Arrived Here Last Week to Raise Funds to Buy Weapons.

COUNT WITTE

AFTER THE ARMED UPRISING IN MOSCOW

Venerable Founder of the "Tchaykoffsky Circles" Tells the Story of Years of Effort to Arouse the Lower Classes in Russia to a Sense of Their Wrongs--What He Thinks of the Czar---Count Witte and His Policy---Father Gapon's Weakness--An Interesting Insight Into the Revolution.

A PIONEER in the struggle for freedom in Russia is M. Nicholas Tchaykoffsky, who arrived in New York from St. Petersburg last week. He is a remarkable man, who, though he has reached 70 years of age, is still in the intellectual prime of his life. His mind has all the alertness of a man of 40, and he is physically tall, erect of bearing, active, tireless.

No man understands better the cause and extent of the present revolution in his native land, and when he discusses what he terms The Tragedy of Russia it is not merely as a student and philosopher, but as one who has played an important part in bringing the present revolution about.

There have been other revolutions in Russia besides this one, there have been other scenes of bloodshed and famine and oppression there, but up to 1868, when Alexander II. was assassinated by the party of the "People's Will," there had been no national comprehension of the psychology behind these manifestations of a spirit of unrest.

This act, which M. Tchaykoffsky described as "necessary," was the beginning of the students' movement toward a libertarian agitation, and among these, then a student at the University in St. Petersburg, was Nicholas Tchaykoffsky.

"I will tell you the story of the tragedy as I have seen it," he said quietly, seating himself across the table from me, "for I should like to make it all concretely clear to Americans. I should like to point out wherein the true heroism of the struggle lies, too, which has been more or less a confused activity.

"The intellectual dawn of the libertarian movement in Russia began about 1868, when I was a student at the University in St. Petersburg. In those days the Government saw no reason to suppress the sale of books, both native and translated, that have since been forbidden. We students of a privileged class, enjoying by means of our inheritance a privileged education, discovered in our enlightenment that what our forefathers had gained in wealth had been taken autocratically, unfairly from the people, and having made this discovery of moral obliquity, of the crushing process by which the majority of our own people had been kept in treacherous darkness, we agreed to return to them our portion of that inheritance which our education enabled us to do.

"The first wedge between the spirit of our intentions and active organization began when Nitchayoff, a public school teacher, was arrested for political conspiracy. As a leader he was not a good type, because he was despotic, a typical conspirator, of which Russia has many; his personality or his influence were not important; but his trial, which was the first to be conducted legally and fairly, educated public opinion in Russia. It pointed out to us our rights, our prospects, our oppressions.

"There was a liberal policy in Russia at that time, and books of all sorts were available. So plans were made to establish reading groups, not only in St. Petersburg, but in all the large places in Russia."

"You were the organizer of these groups?" I suggested.

"I was never a leader; there are men in Russia more competent for that sort of thing than I; but I established these groups upon an orderly business basis and became responsible for their financial affairs. When it came to putting into practical shape these endeavors to render back to the people that which had always belonged to them, they usually came to me for a formula of action."

"What were these groups called?"

"They were known as the 'Tchaykoffsky Circles,' but my name was used to facilitate the business methods rather than to inspire the cause," said M. Tchaykoffsky modestly.

"The subjects we took up were those not taught in the public schools—politics, economics, literature, and art. The curriculum of public school education in Russia was never informing. Their history and their laws are official versions. This sinister form of educational programme only tended to inflame us the more, to make us feel the moral idea of returning to the peasants our share of an education that was ours by privilege of our noble relations—which should have been theirs also. We made contracts with several publishers to send us a number of books, for in a short while there were over 3,000 of these 'Tchaykoffsky Circles' spread all over Russia, the nucleus of which was controlled among ourselves in St. Petersburg.

"We chose such writers as Tcherneshensky, an eminent Russia critic and economic essayist; Dabroloudoff, an essayist on art and literature; a statistical Russian work on the 'Position of the Working Classes,' by Fleroffsky. Then, among books translated into Russian from other languages, we chose such authors as Karl Marx, La Salle, John Stuart Mill, Draper's 'History of Civilization,' and Spencer. These books were sent from one reading circle to another, with certain code signs on the margins; for an important motive in all this was complete intellectual harmony. It was above all things necessary that we should see the same things, feel the same motives, agree on the same plans."

"The 'Tchaykoffsky Circles,' then, were the beginning of the libertarian movement in Russia?"

"I suppose that is so, but the agitation could have no result so long as it was confined to a merely intellectual sympathy, because the masses were still ignorant and oppressed. We were not influencing them, for our reading groups were confined to men and women like ourselves—students. It was found necessary to transfer our activities from the intellectuals to the peasantry.

"The psychology of the peasant problem in Russia was at that time one of lethargic contentment, induced by the promises of more land held out to them by the reformers during the reign of Alexander II. Of the two classes of peasantry we approached the migrating mill hands first, because the skilled workmen were satisfied, full of hopes held out to them by the throne, and would consequently not listen to us. But the mill hands are called from their own villages to the factory towns, and when the busy season is over are sent back to their homes.

"It was easy to reach these men, because they all lived in special barracks, and the sight of a face from their own home was welcome. Deputies from the 'Tchaykoffsky Circles' visited these barracks, and, though their eyes at night were heavy with sleep and they were tired out, they read, and listened, and worked."

"Did they welcome your deputies?"

"Yes, they were anxious and willing to know something besides wages and work.

"'What do you want to learn?' the intellectual would ask them, and they would say, 'Teach us proper science.'

"'What do you mean by that?' the intellectual would ask.

"'Teach us how to live, what is the best way, what we can do to be better than we are.'

"By this time the Government had discovered our plans, and arrests began among the intellectuals. As we were scattered in prisons and banishment, however, the peasants began to form reading circles of their own, and we were comforted with the fact that we had helped them to carry on a libertarian agitation, for by October, in 1874, we were arrested by the wholesale.

"Such were the beginnings of the agitation in Russia, in which the man before me had taken such an executive part."

Of himself and his own sufferings, (which were considerable, since he was imprisoned for over ten years,) he had scarcely time to think, much less to talk, so full was his spirit of ultimate triumph, and so busy was his mind in tracing the economic tangle of his country.

Unlike Tolstoy or Gorky, Tchaykoffsky is not a literary man, or an idealist, but a cabinet minister by temperament—of the People's Will.

"Finally," he continued, "in 1881 the Government established a 'State of Special Protection,' among a people of 44,000,000, that had been under the heel of autocratic will since the time of Peter the Great. This new exhibition of military force practically placed Russia under martial law, and yet there was more freedom in fact than had ever existed in Russia, for the people simply went about doing forbidden things, printing papers in defiance of the censor.

"A freedom of conscience had begun in Russia, and the nobles, because of a division of opinion, hesitated to annihilate us.

"There is no doubt that the army could have suppressed the whole libertarian movement in Russia easily. That was shown during the eleven days' siege in Moscow, which was nothing but prolonged guerrilla warfare, behind barricades, in crooked streets, because, when the authorities decided to destroy the city by districts, it was done with terrible effect. Since last December martial law in Russia has been resumed, under the severest possible conditions. There are Military Governors and Governors General in every town and village in Russia now, for there is no doubt that the libertarian movement, an organization led by the intellectuals and followed by groups of workmen, is in earnest. I wish I might say that we had the masses also with us. That is the tragedy of Russia—its darkness—its ignorant masses.

"Conspiracy is an inevitable weapon in the hands of the autocrat as well as the terrorist, because the conflict between the autocratic power and the democratic forces is so close. There is no middle-class force in Russia to compromise their difficulties: the commercial representation is in the hands of the Government, so that these two gigantic enemies face each other—to kill or to be killed.

"Autocracy is not law—it is sweet will delegated by divine right, which can again be delegated to serve the selfish, brutal instincts of blind cruelty.

"There is hope in the struggle of opinion that surges about the throne, for the Government is divided into two classes, those who desire to shoot us down, and those who desire the spirit of the manifesto of Oct. 17."

"And where does the Czar stand in this conflict?"

"The present Czar is only an autocrat by education, not by character," said Tchaykoffsky, smiling indulgently at the mention of the Emperor. "By character the Czar is a small country squire, desiring only personal peace and domesticity."

"What are the Czar's distinguishing traits?"

"Want of feeling, to begin with. His most persuading impulse is superstition. He is terribly superstitious, and for this reason he has fallen under the influence of quacks. At first it was Kossuf who fascinated his mind by a scheme of grain elevators, and he for a time was his adviser. Then followed Dojinski, a meteorologist, whose specialty was prophesying the weather. He was perhaps the least dangerous of advisers, because he was by nature mild and liberal.

"The Czar's latest fascination was a hypnotic professor named Phillipe, a charlatan, who claimed to be able by spirit influence to gratify the Czar's ambition for an heir. He used to materialize spirits for the throne, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that Plehve, after insisting that he be sent away, succeeded in banishing him from the Court."

"Has the Czarina no influence with her husband?"

"That has been one of the disappointments of the liberals in Russia. They always hoped that her German training would have espoused the interests of the people. But she has no influence with the Czar, because of a woman's jealousy between the Dowager Empress (the mother of the Czar) and herself, due to the long-delayed heir apparent. She is of the narrow-minded German type—sees only Germans, and talks only German."

"And what of Witte—what is his power; how will he use it?"

"Witte, of course, was forced upon the Czar at the termination of the Japanese war. Witte is a clever financier, and when I say that I mean that he is responsible for the degenerate conscience of national affairs.

"Witte is described in Russia among the intellectuals as the man with 'wolf's teeth and a fox's tail,' and I will show you clearly why. His financial system has been to concentrate in the hands of the State all economic measures, and he has practically in this way ruined the people. Witte fostered the trust system in Russia. He organized the sugar trust, the petroleum trust, the iron works trust. The mine trade is exclusively in the hands of the Government, as are the railroads. He might be satirically described as a Bismarckian Socialist, for Bismarck is his model.

"The central starting point of his financial system has been railways. He has always planned to keep his assets higher than his expenses, so that from the surplus, collected in this way free of expense, he has accumulated over 2,000,000,000 rubles. This surplus is controlled at his own discretion, for the departments are not allowed to increase the budget of expense; Witte alone can do this. The result is that he has used these funds to increase his system of trusts.

"Witte has done this regardless of national interest; he has done this solely through his financial temperament, without regard for the democracy of the people. The taxes on imported goods are 30 per cent. of their value; the consequence was that the price of home made materials was forced up beyond normal values, so that the manufacturers were enriched at the expense of the people. On the other hand, the price of raw materials went down, and, as the consumers of the nation were principally the peasants who produced only raw materials, they were caught in a trap, conceived by Witte's financeering genius, and were helpless.

"The true inwardness of their problems of poverty was a mystery to them; they could not understand why, do what they would, there was no escape.

"This was the web which Witte spread over the country.

"But he has forgotten the psychology of the peasant problem.

"The poor peasants, the Russian masses, gradually realizing that their hopes aroused in the reign of Alexander II. were lost, that the promises of the reformers were not fulfilled, were driven to drink.

"What else was there?

"Religion could not help them, since it was only another name for State power. Then came the Social Democrats, teaching the Karl Marx doctrine of inevitable economic evolution. They pacified the masses, restored the spirit of the people, by declaring that the final outcome of everything was Socialism, but that capitalistic development must occur and vanish naturally beforehand. This economic fatalism was treated indifferently by the Government, who regarded it as an illegal secret, but saw no political danger in it.

"In 1900 the Socialist-Revolutionists revived the struggle of the masses, and the People's Will Party demanded a change in the economic system. In ten years, from 1898 to 1908, the budget doubled, from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 rubles, 'because of increasing police expenses.'

"For the present revolution Witte is directly responsible, and he must perish with the sinking ship. His liberalism is a mere shallow veneer, for he has been brought up in the autocratic school. He is no statesman, otherwise how could he have thought that a Minister's mere promise of concessions to the people would restore national confidence?

"When it failed he did not come out openly and declare himself a reactionist, as he should have done if he had been sincere. He always keeps beside him, in apparent counsel, a reactionist, so that when he makes a promise and it is not fulfilled he can accuse the latter of countermanding his intentions.

"Witte has not had principle enough to resign, if he ever insisted upon the honest fulfillment of the manifesto of Oct. 17.

"Treachery holds the entire nation by the throat. Let me tell you how the worst form of treachery proceeds directly from the throne.

"There is a band of ultra-reactionists called the 'black gang' in Russia to-day, which is nothing but organized hooliganism, their purpose being to arouse racial passion, and so hide the truth from the world. Witte made no effort to prevent these conditions, though he was aware of all the plans. The centre of this 'black gang' is near the throne, for the leader, perhaps the inventor of this movement, was Gen. Eugene Bagonovitch, who appeared before the Czar and said that 100,000 of these people were prepared to protect the autocracy. This subsequently proved to be false, because there were only 6,000. During his audience with the Czar his emissaries were waiting in St. Petersburg to receive orders to go forth and start this trouble, which was done the very day following the manifesto.

"This is how it was done: Criminals confined in prisons were released and recruited under the Czar's portrait, armed with revolvers of Government make, and taken to the cathedral in a body, to receive the blessing of Archbishops, by them admonished to destroy the enemies of the Czar. Under the leadership of disguised police officers they were marched through the towns, their first demonstration being in Tomsk, the only university city in Siberia, where they killed 300. They began by going directly to the municipal buildings and railway offices, firing into the windows and doors. The frightened petty officials asked the assistance of the militia, and the 'black gang' retired. Then came the Cossacks in arms against the militia, presumably by official order, and scattered them, after which the 'black gang' returned and set fire to the buildings, shooting down all who tried to escape. This was under the personal direction of the Governor of the province, he regarding it as his duty for the honor of autocracy.

"Then there are tricks to arouse race hatreds. A forged proclamation, using the motto of the Socialist-Revolutionists, 'Rights to be obtained through struggle,' was posted in the town of Vilna, declaring that a certain Jewish banker must be their leader by order of the society. Then the soldiers use this to depreciate and mock the motives of the intellectuals, to deceive the people.

"A number of school children at Kursk, celebrating the victory which the manifesto appeared to give, were flogged and beaten by the Cossacks in the name of autocracy and the Czar.

"The Chief of Police at Odessa, who was obliged

"An Englishwoman in New York": Our Lack of Privacy

She Finds It Strange That Draperies Should So Frequently Replace Doors and Again Pleads for the "Persecuted Husband."

IN setting up housekeeping in New York it has been my intention to put my newly arrived Aunt Louisa somewhat in the position which the husband and father seems to hold in the American scheme of things—that of the ostensible head of the family.

It was she who wrote out the advertisement for a maidservant:

> REQUIRED—A nice young person to work for and wait on two ladies in convenient flat. Must be excellent needlewoman. Caps supplied. Wages $16. Call, all day Monday and Tuesday, at ——

"The wages," remarked Aunt Louisa, "are really without precedent, but you say they pay high wages here. You know I never paid my maid-housemaid more than £25 a year, a very superior person, too, my dear, as you will remember, and she supplied her own caps. Really, I suppose we must go out and select some nice caps, and though streamers are out of date, I must say I like them. There is something so genteel about streamers."

All day Monday and all day Tuesday Aunt Louisa or I sat in state in the boarding house parlor waiting for the "nice young persons." Only on Tuesday evening came an answer. She was an Irishwoman of perhaps 50. To our amazement she sat down without being told to do so.

"Really!" said Aunt Louisa. "Really!" I could see her fumbling for her glasses; then she said gently:

"You will not do, I fear. I advertised for a young person."

"Well, now," exclaimed the applicant, "talkin' about bein' young, you ain't so young as you used to be yerself!"

⁂

For a minute my dear old auntie was speechless, and then I saw her reaching out for a bell. She reached for a bell in order to say to a maid who should appear:

"Show this person out!"

There was no bell. There never is in a New York boarding house, so it was I who ushered Erin's daughter out of the house and my aunt to her bedroom, while she murmured:

"Without precedent! Everything in this country is entirely without precedent!"

I did not think it best to tell her that as the applicant stamped her departing feet upon the brownstone step she had turned to me menacingly, saying:

"Caps supplied, eh? I'll cap ye! Needlework! It's a dressmaker yer a wantin', and at starvation wages!"

So it came to pass that we had a flat and no maidservant, while our boarding house rooms had been rented over our heads. We had to move. We arranged to have our meals sent in by a near caterer, we engaged the small daughter of the janitor to answer our door, and the morning and the evening made the first day.

"Good night!" said Aunt Louisa to me, and then she went to shut the door between her bedroom and mine.

There was no door!

"Why, where is that door?" she exclaimed.

"They've taken it down to move in the furniture. The janitor will hang it in the morning," I said sleepily.

"That could not be," said Aunt Louisa. "There is an entrance from the passage into all the rooms."

True! We had our own beautifully papered "private hall," which in England we designate as a "passage." There was no need to go through one room into another. And I had been so pleased that all these doors into the passage had door-knobs which the outgoing tenant did not carry away.

"Did you notice there was no door?" pursued Aunt Louisa.

"I didn't think about it. You see it would be natural that the doors connecting certain rooms should be thrown open."

"There has been a door. Here is the place where the hinges have been. They'll hang it again," said Aunt Louisa, comforted, "and I must ask you for to-night not to burn your gas late. I cannot sleep with it streaming into my room."

When Aunt Louisa was asleep I opened the door—a real door—from my room into the passage, and then opened the other door that went into the drawing room. Then I went to open the door from the drawing room into the dining room, but there was no door, only a doorway, and finally I found five doorways and no doors. Every door had been taken down.

The kitchen and the bathroom were the only rooms that were securely separated from the rest of the place. It was the most peculiar arrangement I had ever seen. When I examined certain of the doorways a second time it appeared that these never had been meant to be a door. The doorways were arched and ornamented with fretwork and there were rods for draperies. There was no privacy for any member of the family that might inhabit the flat.

In the morning we called the janitor, who said there were three doors in the basement which had never been hung. He regarded me suspiciously when I said: "Hang them at once, please, for this lack of doors is barbaric!"

On that day he hung the door between me and Aunt Louisa, whose whole soul revolted against the utter lack of "precedence" which she continued to find. I kept her out of the kitchen, fearing that if she looked through the window and saw the pulley lines of the neighbors with their burdens floating all unashamed in the March blizzard she would immediately set sail from a country which lacked both privacy and modesty.

Steadily, during these days, the doors that were never hung before are being polished and placed upon hinges, and while I hear the sound of the janitor's hammering and exclamations upon the eccentricities of the new British tenants I reflect upon what seems to me to be a doorless city, a city lacking the exclusiveness that we English so love, a city of beautiful and convenient houses and flats, where the families are so sociable that they are always unhinging the doors.

I remember now that an English friend, after returning to London after a six months' visit here, said:

"I never saw such comfortable and convenient houses and apartments, but would you believe it, they don't have any doors!"

I paid little attention to it at the time, but during the past ten days I have been very observant when I have called at the homes of my New York acquaintances, and I do discover a peculiar aversion to doors. Wherever a door can be taken down it is dispensed with, and a beautiful curtain hung up, sometimes a curtain of bamboo sticks and colored beads. The effect is pretty, and with the even heat that one has in a modern New York dwelling place it is not uncomfortable, except to the occupant of the room who may desire to be let alone.

I pass along the streets after the gas is lighted and I find scarcely a window shade drawn. Families sit in drawing room, library, and dining room with brilliant lights, minding not the gaze of the passersby. In England the drawing of the blinds is a ceremony religiously observed the instant the lights are turned on. From top to bottom of the house goes the maid, lighting up and drawing the blinds. Should she forget to draw a blind in a room where she has made a light it would be considered grave cause for a month's notice. Should she forget twice she would have difficulty in procuring another situation if her mistress told of the cause of her dismissal.

It seems to me you New Yorkers have almost everything except yourselves. In this matter of the lack of privacy in your homes you impress the outside observer as somewhat of a colony of Socialists. Your houses are not your castles, your rooms are not your dens. You do not seem to own yourselves.

I can fancy the family which occupied the flat that Aunt Louisa and I are trying to turn into a home—for to us it cannot be a home if one, all unasked, can invade the other's sacred privacy. One of the rooms is papered with that wonderfully quaint and original paper which children so delight in—groups of animals, toys, and children scattered about, telling stories. I conclude that in these slept a child or children. Then, with unhung door, comes the larger bedroom, that of the parents, doubtless, which means no privacy for the parents and none for the child or children. On and on stretches the vista of doorways, with no doors. To us English it would seem that so much familiarity, even in the most devoted of families, must breed a certain amount of contempt.

In this scheme of things the plight of the New York husband and father particularly appeals to my sympathy.

"This," said a dear little New York woman to me the other day when she was showing me through her new house, "is my husband's own den."

I looked about the room, and my eyes rested upon what seemed to be a conglomeration of pretty antimacassars, tea-cozies, knitting needles, pictures and books that every manly man would despise, a sewing machine, some tin soldiers, a block house, and some scented notepaper. I was meditating upon the calamity of this woman having married so effeminate a man, remembering particularly how one of the chief attributes of the American man had seemed to me to be manliness, when she went on:

"It's the sunniest room in the house, so the children and I spend a great deal of time here. I love to do my embroidery work here by the fireplace, and the children seem to think their toy trains run more easily over this rug than over any other in the house."

I turned my face away suddenly. It is not polite to laugh when you cannot explain what you are laughing at, and how could I explain to this woman that her calmly taking possession of her husband's "own den" with her embroidery frames and her small son's choo-choo cars appealed very deliciously to whatever sense of humor I, as an Englishwoman, may possess?

My thoughts flew back to the room in England which I had known as my father's "den," its dust and disorder, its smoking jackets and ashtrays, and I could not seem to remember anybody who had ever dared to invade it.

The other day I was growing enthusiastic over the large number of hanging closets in one of my friends' homes.

"My dear," said she enthusiastically, "the American architect is the most thoughtful man in the world. Now, in the planning of these flats a cedarwood closet for the keeping out of moths has been provided, and closets for every mortal thing else you can think of. So large, too, and actually with coat-hangers fastened in and small windows as well."

She kept opening closet doors for my admiring inspection. "This," she said, "is my husband's closet for his own personal use. You will see that even trousers' stretchers have been provided by the thoughtful landlord."

Blinkingly my eyes lighted upon a variegated silk petticoat, a Paris blouse, an opera cape, and the hat-box of a well-known milliner. There were also some bits of masculine apparel.

"It's the nicest closet in the flat. I put some of my things in here, too," she purred.

A flat full of closets, and not one that poor husband could have to himself!

"Yes, we each have a dressing room," said another devoted New York wife in showing me her home. "This is my husband's. Don't you agree with me that husbands should have their own dressing rooms where possible, and their own individual dressing tables?"

Certainly I agreed with her, but I thought that a cut-glass and silver powder box, a bonnet whisk, a bodkin with pink bebe-ribbon in it, a bottle of complexion balm, and an entirely feminine manicure set ridiculously out of place in a man's dressing room. One did not expect to find them in conjunction with large ebony military brushes and shaving tools.

"I keep a few of my toilet things in here," she went on unconcernedly. "I don't know that this room is any better than my own dressing room, which is on the other side of the bedroom, but I like to come in here and fuss around, especially when he's shaving."

Somehow I always find myself blinking and turning my head away when a New York woman talks to me in this strain. It was so very funny, so I did not see her face when she continued innocently and confidentially:

"Is there any time when a man looks so absolutely horrid and ugly as when he's shaving? I think they know it, too. My husband cannot bear to have me here when he's shaving."

"Then, why watch the poor man?" I asked with a determined straightening out of my amused face.

"Why, am I not his wife?" she asked.

And ever since I have been trying to puzzle out what connection there must necessarily be between wifehood and watching a man shave. But the thing that puzzles me most is this very evident lack of ownership of himself in the American husband. Has he anything that is his very own?

Well-to-do, hiring a comfortable flat or house, paying rent or paying taxes, he apparently has no part of it that is his own exclusively. With a house full of libraries, dressing rooms, dining rooms, he seems to wander hither and thither, pursued always by the eternal feminine and the ubiquitous child. In his smoking room you find gilded rocking chairs and copies of "Poems of Passion"; on his dressing table are invisible hairpins and curling tongs; in his clothes-press hang chemisettes; in his writing desk is violet-tinted and perfumed notepaper.

He works hard all day, and in the evening sits in the drawing room while his younger children romp over him and his older children stand around the piano gleefully singing—sometimes, after constant urging, even joining in, reminding one somehow of a holy martyr singing while the stakes are being piled round him.

"Everybody works but father,
And he sits round all day"—

The more money he earns the less opportunity he is given to enjoy it. The bigger house he has the less is it his own. If he takes a fancy to the library for a quiet smoke and a newspaper he cannot shut out the noise of the pianola, which the children play in the dining room, for the library hasn't any door; you enter it through a beautifully carved arch by swinging aside the tapestry curtains.

If he wants to be alone it would really seem that there is nothing for him to do but to lock himself up in the bathroom, which would seem to be the only absolutely exclusive and private room in an American house.

It may be answered that the American wife and mother has no advantage in the way of exclusiveness. If she has a boudoir it is invaded by her children, so where is her privacy? True, but it seems to be the wife who arranges the house, the furnishing and the apportionment of the rooms. She at least would appear to have the power to arrange them for her own convenience and comfort. Whose fault but hers that her young son and small daughter walk into her room without the formality of knocking; who better can teach them that the front hall is not the place for their rocking horses, and the bathtub not the only sort of swimming pool for their automatic china ducks?

One wonders if the American child itself would not relish a little privacy if it were once taught the better plan of having its own room, which no one might enter without a rap on the door, even its own father and mother.

* * * * * * * * *

Now I hear the sound of a departing janitor, which means that the last door has been hung in such doorways as have been originally meant for doors.

"Queer people, the English," he mutters, "wantin' doors, when draperies is so much more stylish! You'd think they was goin' to keep a boarding house with all their doors! What's an aunt and her niece got to be shut off by theirselves for?"

Why, indeed, except that Aunt Louisa is one individual and I am another, and we like to feel that something in our home is our very own!

It is the lack of a certain individuality that is so noticeable to my English eyes in your American homes; a Socialistic tendency to share so much in common, with the smaller share falling to the husband and the father, and I find myself wondering if he really likes it, or merely submits to save trouble.

"TRAGEDY OF RUSSIA"

to resign or be killed, was thanked by the Czar for his services.

"What is lacking in Russia is economic leaders," exclaimed Tchaykoffsky. "Tolstoy has no political sense—he is a moralist, a sectarian. He never understood the political situation. Gorky is only a literary man, to-day more popular than Tolstoy."

"When is the finale of the tragedy?"

"If the Ministers should fall at the hands of the terrorists that would be the end of oppression. Now the people are silent, aghast, waiting, struck dumb by this unscrupulous blood-thirsty condition—waiting to spring."

"Father Gapon is forgotten?"

"Gapon was a man with no political principle. He was at one time an organizer of workmen's clubs for the Government, for administrative purposes. He was a priest with all its insincere possibilities. The events of Jan. 9 were a wave that washed him forward. He understood the psychology of the masses, but he had no principle. He had no political initiative when he was needed. He tried to return to Russia, and sought an interview with Witte, who for a claim Gapon made against the Government for destruction of property belonging to the workingmen he represented, sent him 30,000 rubles, which he accepted and kept."

M. Tchaykoffsky had talked for two hours—he had outlined the tragedy of Russia, and his last words were:

"We need arms—money to purchase them!"

"How much?"

"Two hundred thousand dollars would be ample—at present." PENDENNIS.

TOAST BETTER THAN BREAD

TOAST is better as an article of diet than ordinary bread, says Health, for the simple reason that it is better cooked, and, therefore, more easily digested. The toasting destroys the life of the yeast and eliminates some of the harmful products of yeast fermentation, and the action of the heat converts the starch into a more digestible substance.

MANY EXPOSITIONS WILL BE FEATURES OF THE YEAR 1906

THE year 1906 will go down in history as the year of expositions, no less than seven of these "large fairs" of international interest being scheduled to take place in 1906. Besides these large exhibitions of a general scope there will be an unprecedented number of local and special exhibitions throughout the world.

First in importance among these expositions will be the Milan Exposition, in honor of the completion of the Simplon Tunnel. The Italian people have exerted themselves to make the forthcoming enterprise a fit commemoration of the magnificent engineering feat. Milan is the industrial centre of the Apennine monarchy, and its inhabitants glory in the cognomen the "Yankees of Italy." The exhibits will comprise not only the latest improvements in machinery, transportation, industries, and the application of science to the needs of the trade, but will also devote a large amount of space to exhibits of a sociological character. Special attention will be given to the problem of housing factory employes, improving their social condition, &c. For the first time in the history of international expositions the problem of aerial navigation will be very seriously treated, and the application of motive power to land and marine navigation will include the most thorough exhibits of pleasure and industrial automobiles and of motor boats yet shown. Needless to say that the Department of Fine Arts will be a division of the exposition which will command more than passing interest, and lovers of art will find therein as much food for their souls as the industrialist will find for his practical brain in the Machinery Hall.

Not to be outdone by the Italians, the Catalonians have planned an international exposition at Barcelona, although probably the opening of this will be deferred to 1907. This exposition will be of particular interest to Americans, for it will mark the first public participation by Americans in a function of this nature on Spanish soil since the Spanish-American war. There has been a marked tendency in Spanish industrial circles to seek an economical rapprochement with the United States, in order to escape, at least to some extent, from the clutches of the economic domination by the Germans. A suitable and varied American exhibit will do a great deal toward acquainting the Spaniards with American products, and men best able to judge the temper of the people unite in stating that there is no resentment in the heart of the Spanish people which would in any way be a hindrance to the strengthening of commercial relations between the United States and Spain.

⁂

An exposition which is somewhat minor in character, but none the less very important, will be held this Summer at Bucharest, Roumania. That country has magnificent natural resources, and is but awakening to the realization of the industrial possibilities which lie latent within. Roumania is a large buyer of agricultural machinery and implements, as well as of oil well supplies, cotton goods, and textiles in general. The Bucharest exposition will be visited by the business people of Roumania, Servia, Bulgaria, Turkey, Greece, and the South of Hungary, and should prove an excellent medium for familiarizing the people of the Balkan States with the products of this country.

Probably one of the most interesting expositions of 1906 will be the international exposition to be held in November, at Christchurch, New Zealand. That exposition will last up to April, 1907, and will be in every way worthy of the magnificent development of New Zealand and the Commonwealth of Australia. The object of the exposition is to demonstrate the resources and the possibilities of the colony as one of the world's food-producing factors, its vast mineral resources, its unrivaled and varied scenery, thermal wonders, and the exceptional opportunities offered to sportsmen. The colony of New Zealand imports almost $70,000,000 worth of products annually, which immense sum is for distribution among a population of less than 850,000 persons, which stamps New Zealand as one of the largest pro rata importing countries in the world.

It is a far cry from New Zealand to South America, but two important expositions will be held in Chile and Paraguay during 1906.

The Chilean Exposition will take place at Santiago in April, and will be industrial in character, and special interest will be given to the application of motive power to machinery. It is desired to promote the development of smaller industries in that republic, and American manufacturers are planning considerable exhibits.

The Paraguay exposition will be held at Ascuncion, Paraguay, and as the country itself is agricultural and pastoral in character, the exposition will be for the purpose of fostering the use of improved agricultural machinery and implements in Paraguay.

Last, but not least, is the International Automobile Exposition which is scheduled to take place this year in Berlin, and which will be the largest automobile exhibition ever held.

Village Blacksmith Is "Pooh-Bah" of North Pelham

"Jim" Reilly, Who Defeated the Republican and Democratic Tickets in Village Presidential Election, Is Now Mayor, Fire Commissioner, Chief of Police, and Practical Horseshoer.

THE biggest shock North Pelham, N. Y., ever received was last Tuesday, when North Pelham elected as President of the village "Jim" Reilly, the village blacksmith.

Not that North Pelham had any right to be surprised at its own act, but—well, North Pelham, N. Y., had been straight Republican for twelve years. The retiring President was a Republican, the Village Trustees were Republicans, and the Constables were Republicans. And now, not only was Jim Reilly not a Republican, but in winning the village Presidency he had pulled through his whole ticket, which, worse than not being Republican, was a Social Labor Party, headed by the village blacksmith.

When Pelham, N. Y., awoke to the fact that it was awake it just drew a long breath and gasped in unison from North Pelham, through Pelham, to Pelham Manor:

"By—gum!"

"I told you so," said "Old Man" Barrie.

"You did nothing o' the sort," said "Old Man" Gleason. "I'm a Democrat, and I'm ding sorry, but it's some cons'lation to see the Republican vehicle wi' the wheels busted."

"Talk all ye like and 'told-ye-so' till you've got colic," said Mr. Marks of Fifth Avenue, North Pelham, "but it's you and your Democratic Party that's responsible t' the people for this. The split among the Democrats did it, ding 'em!"

"'M-well," drawled Ezra Daggett, wiping the ale froth off the counter of the village oasis, "I'll up an' say right here that I'm blame glad to see Jim Reilly boss man o' this rising burg. He's a man. The peepul seen their duty an' they done it, an' that's all there is to 't."

It is said that the true reason for Reilly's victory is that the Social Labor Party cornered all the rigs and gave everybody the choice of trudging through the snow to the polls or riding in state to vote for the blacksmith. Nevertheless, for the rest of the week there was only one topic in North Pelham, N. Y. Probably they're at it yet. James Reilly, blacksmith and practical horseshoer, had beaten Jacob Wirth, (Rep.,) manager of the Methodist Book Concern and a city-bred politician, who, as the local press said, had "figured prominently in the Seth Low campaign." And Jim had also beaten A. Wilbur Crane, (Dem.,) artist by profession, large property owner, and also a New Yorker. As for Jim, the village blacksmith, he is a rare type of Irishman, with a wife and five children, the family living over the smithy. But "the smith, a mighty man is he"—in Pelham, N. Y.

An interviewer for THE SUNDAY NEW YORK TIMES visited the battlefield the day after the dead had been removed. The village was still. A mantle of snow lay upon the landscape, which consisted of woods, white meadows, a few streets, a man, a boy with a sled, a trolley car, and a wagon on the far horizon. Another passenger getting off the train at Pelham hailed the trolley car, which was 200 yards away. It continued on its way. The passenger made a megaphone of his hands.

"All right, Mr. Blank," cried the conductor.

Then the trolley backed 200 yards to take on Mr. Blank. North Pelham, N. Y., is about thirty-five minutes from the Grand Central Station.

The interviewer walked down Fifth Avenue, the main street, keeping a sharp look-out for a spreading chestnut tree. It did not turn up, but the village smithy was where its spreading branches should have been. The sign read, "Jas. Reilly, Practical Horseshoer." President Reilly was not in, but an assistant was quite sure he would come back. It was then 2:30 P. M.

"He sleeps here every night," said the assistant.

"Where is he now?"

"He might be some're talkin' to the boys." A long silence. "He'll be back here, though."

"Much excitement here yesterday?" asked the interviewer.

"'M-yes," said the assistant horseshoer, after long reflection. "There was quite a piece."

Fifth Avenue stretched away in desolation. A cannon ball fired along it would have damaged nothing but the railway viaduct a mile away. South, two points east, the boy was sliding down a hillside on the sled.

"Quite a piece," echoed the assistant blacksmith.

"You don't know where Mr. Reilly might possibly be at this moment?"

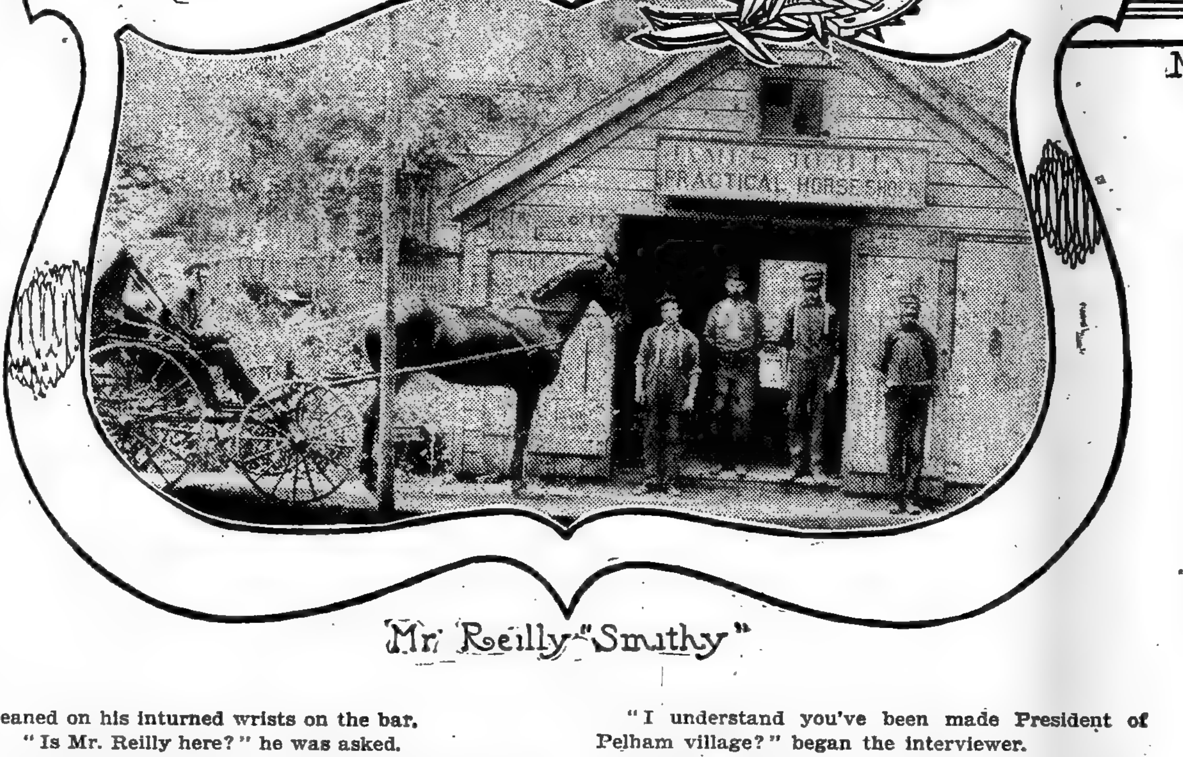
"'M-well." The assistant thought hard. You wouldn't put it in the paper would you?"

"What? Of course not!"

"You see, Jim's the President now—the Mayor, you might say—also the Fire Commish'ner, an' the Chief of Police, an' a lot o' other things; an' it might—well, you go over to Ezra Daggett's, crost the way. Mebbe he's there—on—business—with the boys."

The interviewer crossed to Ezra's oasis. There was a sudden stillness as he entered the bar, where a number of men sat. Some were astride chairs; some had their feet on the stove; one, wearing rubber boots, a black flannel shirt, and an antediluvian derby hat, had his feet on the table and his hands in his pockets. Ezra wiped the ale froth away and leaned on his inturned wrists on the bar.

Mayor Elect "Jim" Reilly in his Blacksmith Shop



Mr. Reilly "Smithy"

"Is Mr. Reilly here?" he was asked.

The silence deepened. The feet were gently removed from the stove. Ezra jerked his chin in the direction of the rubber boots on the table. The man behind them looked up. His face was fair and smooth, except for a heavy brown mustache and deep crow's feet sweeping into wide, brown eyes.

"Mr. President?"

He bowed slightly. The interviewer explained his mission. The man bowed again. There was an awkward pause. The men around the stove and Ezra looked on. They knew their man; the interviewer did not. He explained precisely to the blacksmith-President that he would like to talk with him. The blacksmith took his booted legs off the table, and, walking out of the saloon, crossed the street to the smithy. He was a big man and covered the space with a few slow strides. The interviewer, a minute later, found him sitting on the anvil.

"I understand you've been made President of Pelham village?" began the interviewer.

"North Pel'm," the blacksmith corrected. "There's three villages—Pel'm, North Pel'm, Pel'm Manor. I'm President of North Pel'm." He spoke with a slight brogue.

"On the independent ticket?"

"Social Labor."

"Strong Social Labor organization here?"

"There isn't any."

"Yet you have a whole ticket elected under the Social Labor Party!"

"There'll be one after this."

"What will be your duties as President?"

"Look after the village. Once a month there'll be a meeting of the board. The board is composed of two Trustees—and me. The Trustees appoint a Road Superintendent, constables, and other things—if they agree about the appointment."

"And if not?"

"I appoint with a casting vote."

"Will the Trustees agree?"

"Then you're Pooh-Bah?"

The village blacksmith looked steadily at the interviewer. His face lighted up with a gleam of interest.

"What's that?"

The character of Gilbert's Pooh-Bah was explained.

"Thanks," said the village blacksmith. "I'm President. I'm Chief of Police because I'm President. I happen to be Fire Commissioner also."

"What will your policy be?"

"Haven't outlined it yet."

"Most candidates outline it before they're elected. They explain their stand on the paramount issue."

"There isn't any—issue in North Pel'm. I'll do my best for the taxpayers."

"Will there be any changes among the appointed officials?"

The village blacksmith gazed long at the interviewer. Slowly his face became diffused by a smile.

"There will be."

It was difficult to keep up an animated conversation with this remarkable Irishman. Unlike others of his race, he was close-mouthed and deliberate in all he did say. When asked by the interviewer if there was anything else that might be of interest to the public he replied:

"Ask me questions."

That his monosyllabic manner, however, was not reserved for strangers to North Pelham was evident when "Old Man" Gleason came in. While this well-known local character talked about the election the blacksmith, comparatively silent, but fully appreciative, sat on the anvil, leaning on a steel jigger used for lifting the horseshoes from the pegs on the roof joists. The interviewer looked around the smithy for evidence of the true inwardness of its owner. By the window was the blacksmith's desk. A cat sat purring on it beside a red book, entitled "Leaders of American History." On the smoky wooden walls were pinned pictures of President Roosevelt, Vice President Fairbanks, and other celebrities. Various other things suggested that the village blacksmith was a man of ambition. The cat and two dogs, which sat at the booted man's feet, and a brood of pups yelping behind the furnace bespoke a man of heart. Over the roof there was a sound of some one sweeping a floor and a patter of little feet. The back door opened. A boy of 10 came in and stood beside his father.

"I hear old man Barrie went strong for you," said Gleason. "And Eddie, too, his son. Eddie's growin' some."

"Eddie's a fine boy," said the village blacksmith.

"I guess you cleaned up Fifth Avenue, except, mebbe, for old man Marks and Long Mike. Hey?"

"Mebbe."

"You must ha' got a chunk of votes from the split Democratics."

"I did," said the blacksmith, "and about twenty Republican votes."

"I suppose the village is so small you can almost name every man who voted for you," put in the interviewer.

"I can name about 80. I got 90 votes against 64 Republican and 37 Democratic."

When the interviewer asked how many people were in the village the blacksmith President evinced that zeal for accuracy and decision which marked him. He said he did not know and frowned as he said it. Gleason allowed it was about 400.

"The vote's 200," said the village blacksmith.

"But the pop'lation's twice that," declared Gleason.

"Wait a minute," said the blacksmith. Ten big strides and he was across Fifth Avenue in a grocery store. In a minute he was back. The grocer had declared for nearly 900 inhabitants. The blacksmith seemed more annoyed that such a detail should have missed his own observation.

"John," he said to the boy, "go to Mr. Case and ask him what the population of North Pelham is."

Who was Mr. Case? It may seen incredible, but the thorough blacksmith had sent to the taker of the last census. Which reminded the interviewer of some questions, which were promptly answered.

James Reilly, blacksmith, is 38 years old. He was born in County Meath, Ireland. He came to the United States in 1882; learned his trade at Dubuque, Iowa; settled at North Pelham in 1890; ran for Justice of the Peace in 1902, and was defeated. He was appointed Fire Chief in 1904; elected Fire Commissioner January, 1906, and elected President of the village two months later.

As the interviewer left the smithy his impression of James Reilly was that here was a man of tremendous menace or promise to the village of North Pelham and the country at large. The sense of menace arose mainly from the impenetrable silence of the man, but that this was not due to ignorance or what the Scots calls "dourness" was clear from a review of the man's career and of the recent interview.

He appears to be simply a man of few words; one who is too busy learning to flaunt what he has already learned. Asked if he drank he said, "Sometimes—not now." Asked if he would smoke a cigar, he said he preferred a pipe.

The interviewer was asked in the oasis by Ezra Daggett if he had learned anything from Jim Reilly. Upon the interviewer replying, "What I wanted and no more," Ezra said:

"That's like him. There's a man it'll take some folks a long time to know. But he'll make a good President."

As the reporter walked toward the station a small boy tapped him on the arm and said:

"Mr. Case was out, Sir; but father says there are 160 houses in the village and over 600 people."

CRITICAL EPISODE IN LIFE OF CUBAN REPUBLIC HAPPILY ENDED

HAVANA, March 19, 1906.—With the departure of Gen. José Miguel Gomez from Havana to Ciego de Avila there has been closed, apparently, the most critical episode in the life of the Cuban Republic to date. Following the murder of the Rural Guardsmen at Guanabacoa on Feb. 25 in the name of the Liberal Party, the pursuit and capture of the outlaws, their confessions implicating Gen. Gomez, the late candidate of the Liberal Party for the Presidency, and the sending of a company of artillery to Ciego de Avila for the apparent purpose of suppressing an insurrection, Gen. Gomez came to Havana to meet and answer all charges made against him.

The episode was given almost an international importance from the fact that Gen. Gomez is now the administrator of the great plantation of the Silviera Sugar Company, an American corporation of which J. M. Ceballos of New York is President, and which, on its completion will be the largest sugar estate in the world. Here Gomez has under him 2,000 men, and it was the assembling of this great force that gave the Government much concern. The combination of Gen. Gomez—the defeated candidate for the Presidency—and an American corporation, gave rise to the belief in minds always suspicious and looking for intrigue that some concerted plan was on foot looking to the overthrow of the existing Government and the turning of the island over to the Americans.

This is the fear that is always uppermost in the mind of the Government. There is undoubtedly a strong pro-American sentiment among the people of Cuba, a sentiment so strong that it may at any time become the alternative between the two parties. Undoubtedly the Liberals would rather see the Government in American hands than in that of the Moderate Party, while the Moderates would choose American rule in preference to Liberal success, if that were the alternative. In the meantime, so long as there is a chance of success for either, neither will yield to that alternative, from which there is no return. It has become a part of the policy of the party now in power, the Moderates, to strive in every way to suppress any expression of pro-American sentiment. Amid all the speculation as to the cause for the retirement of our Minister Squiers it is undoubtedly true that it was his freely expressed opinion that the Cuban people were pro-American at heart that caused him to become persona non grata.

In this Gomez incident, that at one time threatened to become serious, the wisest of counsels prevailed. Government pressure was brought to bear upon Mr. Ceballos, as President of the company, to cast Gomez off. It is shrewdly suspected that in some of those ways known to diplomacy Mr. Ceballos was made to feel that the course that would appeal to the American Government as being most conducive to peace was to keep Gen. Gomez where he was, clearing the ground and doing a great work in building up Cuba industrially, rather than to dispense with his service and throw him—a man with a grievance—among the plotters again.

Happily this solution has appealed to the Cuban Government, which realizes that without this great force of men he could not accomplish industrially what he has, namely, according to his own statement, to clear for cultivation 4,667 acres which were woodland, in a little over a month's time. Now that the reason for the gathering of this small army is understood by minds not accustomed to American hustling methods, a feeling of greater ease results, but the "scare" for a few days was more than a little one. Gen. Gomez himself has added much to the restoration of tranquillity by his plain, direct, and convincing utterances, which have been published throughout the island as a kind of manifesto to the members of the Liberal Party, and has effectually silenced all intriguers who have attempted to stir up trouble in his name by saying: "I have completely retired from politics, and, as a Cuban, I condemn every action that might compromise the peace and stability of the republic."

Gen. Gomez in the centre talking to F. M. Ceballos, Manuel Silviera at his right.

Whatever may be the grievances of the Liberal Party in the matter of the last election and in the course of the present Government in ruling by executive decree rather than by the Constitution, there is no real dissatisfaction among the people. They laugh at the well-known graft in public office, since the wonderful prosperity of the country, aided by the results of the reciprocity treaty with the United States has piled up a large surplus in the treasury. The people are all at work and their crops have been large. The payment to the soldiers has made money plenty, and it is not the concern of the people that this money has come from the United States in the form of discount of their claims, even though those who have discounted these claims are being compelled to wait to get their money back. The Cuban treasury has ample funds on hand with which to pay the last of these claims, but arbitrarily it has been decided to postpone this for a matter of some eight months, and in the meantime the American purchasers can wait with as much patience as they can command.

But it is the liberality of these Americans who have cashed these claims that has appealed to the Cuban people, together with the great influx of American money to promote industries that have made the island prosperous through stimulating its natural resources. Were it possible to obtain and publish a list of the shrewd American financiers who are interested in Cuba, far-seeing men who have built up great fortunes because of their ability to discover an opportunity in advance of their fellows, it would present a surprising array. Many of these, like the Havemeyers, are concealed under corporate names, though others can be located. For example, J. M. Ceballos is President of the Rosario Sugar Company at Aguacate, of the Cardenas City Water Works recently acquired, the Development Company of Cuba, the Silviera Sugar Company, already mentioned, besides being probably the chief owner of the Bank of Ceballos, at the town of Ceballos, where 25,000 acres of land are being cultivated in fruit and cane, with further projects in development. Here he is called the J. P. Morgan of Cuba. Sir William Van Horne's great railroad interests are well known, and, in fact, if one takes the twenty most prominent public utility or public carrier corporations in Cuba, fifteen of them will be found to be American—mostly from New Jersey—the other five being divided between British and Cuban interests.

It is this which has caused much uneasiness to the party in power and various plans have been adopted to offset this swing toward America. Some are rather strenuous, like the recent forfeiture of the concessions of the Havana Subway Company, about which little or nothing has been said publicly in this country, but which is now the subject of representations made to our State Department, and like the threat of the artillery sent to Ciego de Avila. Other methods are more subtle, like the encouragement of Spanish immigration to offset the American and Canadian colonization, and this plan has resulted in bringing to the island thousands of Spanish workmen of good character and under circumstances far more advantageous to them than in the case of many of the American colonists who have been lured, under false pretenses, by the literature of American land agents. Among these there are cases of great pathos, but the fault has lain not with the situation in Cuba, but with the unprincipled methods of land speculators and the gullibility of the buyers, for, if there are lands in Cuba that are the richest and most fertile on earth, so also are there lands that are utterly worthless.

Perhaps the most notable effort in the direction of the Government's effort to offset the swing toward American influence—an effort that failed utterly—was the negotiation of the Anglo-Cuban treaty. This caused quite a stir in the United States because it apparently favored England, and meant the influx of British capital, which was precisely what was intended. A few threats appeared in the Senate to abrogate the reciprocity treaty, and Cuba at once became good. The treaty is dead, killed by a wink or a nod from Washington. It is in this that the security to American capital in Cuba lies. Cuba must have that reciprocity treaty in order to live. It is her great asset, as 80 per cent. of her products find their markets in the United States. Those here in the Government who wish to keep Cuba free from a political absorption in the United States are not unaware of the case of Hawaii, even though in a better position to compete with their sugar in the open markets of the world. The wonderful soil of Cuba produces crops that are unknown in Hawaii for size and without the expensive irrigation necessary there. Cuban cane fields are known to produce as high as 80 tons to the acre, with an average, perhaps, of between 30 and 40 tons. The banner yield in Hawaii—one acre on the Island of Oahu—is 15 tons, while the average is from 10 to 12 tons of cane. But the American market is not only nearer but also much more profitable, and the loss of that market on the penalty of the full duties would lay Cuba under stress that would be serious.

Further than that the Platt amendment stands always as a safeguard to the protection of life and property in Cuba, with the strength of the United States behind it. Frankly, the self-government of Cuba is still an experiment, one that shows some points of notable success and many failures, none of which, happily, have endangered the general peace or the safety of property.

"Animals with Histories": The Young of the Wild

Peculiarities of the Babies of the Zoo--Caring for Sick Lion Cubs--How the Young Elephant Behaves--The Monkey Mother and Her Offspring.

ALL young things are attractive, especially the young of the wild creatures. In infancy these babies seem to have little or no savageness to speak of, no treachery or vice of any kind. Like human babies, they are too young and feeble to show of what material they are made, and give no indications—except in rare cases—of what their real natures and dispositions are or are going to be.

To my mind one of the prettiest things in the world is a little lion cub. With his sturdy, tawny little body, his thick, heavy paws, his straight tail, and remarkably well-shaped head he is a thing of beauty. The faint, dark spots with which he is born wear off after a time, and the newly awakened look with which he appears (with his eyes wide open) also gives place to a very wideawake look, but when he mews or attempts to move about in the first few days of his existence he is certainly most fascinating.

I once saw three little lion cubs a few hours old, and I have never forgotten them. The mother was extremely nervous, and great care had to be taken, as lionesses have frequently been known not only to kill their young ones through nervousness, but actually to eat them. One of the three little cubs was too weak to stand on his legs, and the funny way in which he would tumble down and then try to gather himself up was too amusing for words. Every time he tumbled over he would mew faintly, as though a little puzzled, and every time he gathered himself together he would give a curious guttural cry as though of satisfaction.

At another time in an animal show there were two little sick lion cubs, suffering from convulsions. They had been put in a wooden box, with some clean straw, and the keeper attended to them every hour. It was a pitiful sight to see these small babies of the forest, with their big, muscular limbs drawn up, convulsed and shivering with agony. The keeper was as gentle and tender with them as any mother with her sick baby, but all he could do was to hold them until the paroxysms were over, or try to pour some specific through their clinched jaws. These convulsions are generally caused by teething, and many lion cubs die from them. Those that recover from convulsions are said to be strong, healthy animals, and to thrive even better than those that have not had them. Whether this is a fact I cannot say.

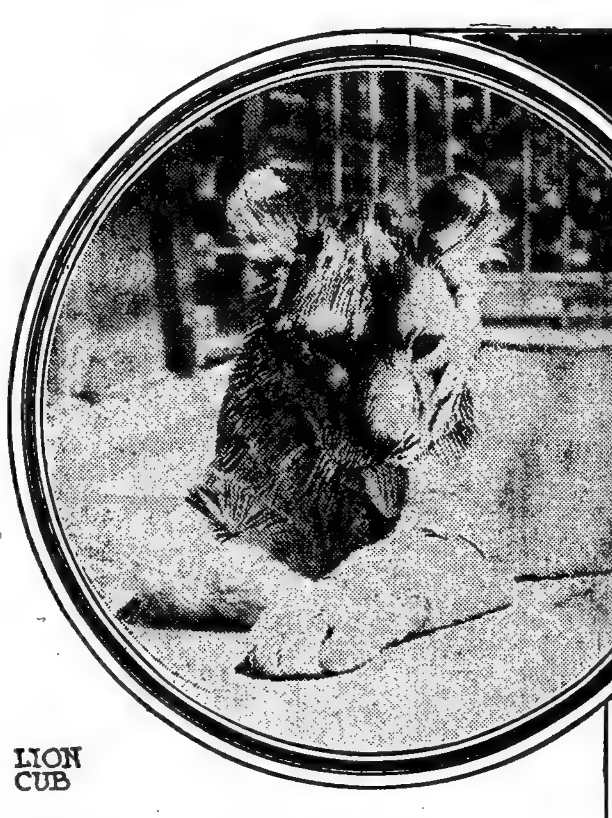
I used often to take a peep at the little creatures, and my heart ached for their suffering, but one day when my attention was taken up with something else I felt a sudden sharp pain in my ankle, and there was one of those little cubs tearing at my foot in the most savage fashion and barking and growling angrily! He was better, and proved it by so many savage little actions that he and his brother were taken back to the cage and their freedom was over.

It is one of the prettiest sights of the world to watch lion cubs at play. Their daring liberties with their mother, the sudden skipping away after a particularly daring deed, and their cries when she gets out of patience and administers a reprimand are very comical.

It appears to me that young leopards or tigers are not nearly as playful as lions. I was photographed once with a young leopard on my lap, and in order to get him in a good temper I did my level best to play with him. But he was a savage, vindictive little brute, and it took all my strength and patience—although he was still quite a cub—to keep his strong claws away from me. Even when lying on my lap at the very moment of being photographed he tried to dig his claws through my dress.

Few have ever seen the young of a tapir, but there is a fine specimen in the Zoological Gardens in Philadelphia, which when first born was covered with dark stripes and was a very pretty little creature.



LION CUB

This is a rare instance, as these creatures are not only extremely difficult to obtain, but have only bred in captivity on one or two occasions. The mother seemed quiet and gentle, and allowed herself and her little one to be photographed when the latter was only one day old.

A young elephant is never very small, never very playful, and not, it appears to me, very interesting. He keeps close to his mother, waves his small trunk to and fro, up and down, as though he had been accustomed to doing it for years, and is about as stolid a specimen as could be found anywhere. Occasionally the mother will caress it with her trunk or trumpet a little if she is a trifle uneasy about her offspring, but beyond this there is no inducement to watch or take notice of them.

Of all the clumsy, ugly, apparently uninteresting specimens, except that it is a baby, is a young hippopotamus. It is, if possible, even more ungainly than its mother. Beyond moving about and looking around with its tiny eyes it appears to do nothing. Even when first born the muscular indications and strength are remarkable, and it is interesting to study it, if for this alone. A young hippopotamus which was born in captivity weighed forty pounds at birth, and was a strong, healthy specimen.

⁂

A baby camel is a curious object. He appears to be all legs, and very long legs, too. The youngest baby camel I ever saw was three days old and weighed about twenty pounds. His parents were Asiatic camels, and the young camel's coat was as white and curly as a young lamb's. He was not at all playful, and extremely rickety on his legs, which certainly looked much too long for his small, thin body. But his queer-shaped head, his mouth with the protruding under lip, and his eyes, which had the appearance of having just been opened, made him a very interesting little fellow, and his mother's love and keen anxiety lest any harm should come to him were pathetic in the extreme. Not a movement could he make without his mother following him step by step, and every time he stumbled—which he did incessantly—she caressed him tenderly.

ELEPHANT AND YOUNG.

Bear cubs are interesting little things, but are rarely reared in captivity, although in 1879 two Himalayan bear cubs were reared successfully in the Dublin Zoological Gardens. This was—at that time—without parallel in any zoological garden's history, and evoked a great deal of controversy in the newspapers and among scientists.

Hybrid cubs appear to be the most aggressive, savage little animals. I saw some hybrids—between lions and tigers—who were continually fighting, without cause or reason, evidently simply for the pleasure of fighting. This seems rather curious, as when tiger and lion cubs are put in the same cage there seems no particular disposition to fight. In the Dublin Zoological Gardens two lion cubs and two tiger cubs lived for some time in the same cage without the slightest sign of ill-will.

The young of deer are most beautiful little creatures. Most fawns when born are covered with dark spots, and their slim, delicate limbs, beautifully formed bodies, well-shaped heads, and dark, liquid eyes combine to make them the most attractive and loveliest specimens of young in the animal world. Perhaps the tiniest specimen and one of the most interesting is the young of the Dorcas gazelle. To look at it one wonders how so tiny a body could be so beautifully modeled and formed.

The nearest approach, however, to a human baby is a young monkey, although I am afraid some mothers will be greatly hurt at my saying so. I do not mean in actual appearance, of course, but in actions between the mother and her little one. The grimaces, the fondlings and caresses of the mother, the way in which she holds her little one to her, the way in which she picks it up, and the manner of nursing it are so distinctly human that it is impossible to watch them together for even so short a time and not wonder whether, after all, Darwin's theory was not right in some respects.

There is at present a young monkey in the New York Zoological Park who is extremely interesting. He has a small, pale face, with a worn, troubled, anxious look about it which impresses one with the idea that he must have a world of trouble on his shoulders. His ears stick away from his head like the ears of many small boys, and his quick, agile movements, his mischievous actions, and his sudden rush to his mother whenever there are signs of trouble are all indicative of the human child.

It is interesting, too, that in some curious manner the mother seems to understand all the keeper says to her. For instance, she may be sitting quietly at one end of the cage, apparently taking no notice of the little one who is playing at the other end. But let the keeper go near the cage and say:

"Where's that baby?"

In an instant a frightened look comes into her eyes, she will spring forward, catch up her little one, clutch it tightly to her, and with both arms folded round it will look back at the keeper with disdain and defiance written on her face, muttering under her breath all the while. I thought at first it was the mere presence of the keeper, but unless he says these words she will take no notice of him, but is on the best of terms with him.

Few have had the privilege of seeing a baby orang-outang, but those who have declare it is even more human in its actions than a young monkey. It will hold on tightly with its long, slim fingers to its mother's long, red hair, while every action of the mother is exactly like that of all women when nursing and taking care of a young baby. The mother love in an orang-outang is remarkably strong, and, like all wild animals, it will willingly face death itself in order to protect its young. The orang-outang in the New York Zoological Park came there in his mother's arms, and when his mother died from sheer inability to adapt herself to her new surroundings he nearly died too.

The young of the llama are pretty little things, with short, curly wool, (not a bit like the mother's long, silky hair,) small heads, and slim, delicate limbs. It is a common thing to see the young of two successive seasons being fed and cared for by the mother. As a rule they live amicably, but in many cases the elder is exceedingly jealous, and then the younger one has a hard time of it. Generally, however, when this is the case the mother drives the older one away.

Perhaps the cubs of the sloth bear are about the most ungainly little objects in the animal world. They are certainly ugly, uncouth little creatures, and perform the most absurd antics. When they are too young to walk much the mother will lower herself until the cubs get on her back, and then carry them wherever she wants to go. But this is done in the very clumsiest way. The sloth bear is a clumsy animal at all times, but in this case she does not appear to be able to go more than a few steps without tumbling her little ones off her back. However, she always waits until they scramble up again, and then the ambling and tossing go on again.

Of all the extraordinary little creatures in the whole world, however, the young of the duckbill is perhaps the most remarkable. The duckbill is an egg-laying mammal and an inhabitant of Tasmania. It has a flat, oval body, which is covered with short, close fur, a deep, dark brown on the top and a pale brown underneath. Short, dumpy legs terminate in curious webbed feet with five toes on each and with long, strong nails. Its head is flat, the eyes are very small, no ears are seen, and it has a strong bill, like a duck's. This animal generally lays two small white eggs in strong, flexible shells, and from these eggs, which the duckbill covers carefully with her warm, soft, furry body, just as a hen does, come forth curious little creatures, blind and naked, with soft, short bills, which open continually in a circle as an invitation for food, and little webbed feet of a pale yellow color.

For some time the mother feeds them like all other mammals, but as soon as they are a little older she given them snails or slugs or any other dainty she can find in the near-by water, for she always makes her home near either a pool or river.

There are so many babies in the animal world that it would take a whole book to tell one-half the many interesting facts about them. No matter, however, what they are or where they come from, there is one strong characteristic among them all. This is the mother love, which is just the same whether the young one is a beautiful object or the most ugly specimen in the whole world.

ELLEN VELVIN, F. Z. S.

BOZZUFFI, THE ITALIAN BANKER WHO DEFIED "THE BLACK HAND"

CHRISTINA, the cobbler, a prosperous man in his line, employing three assistants, had been told in a communication written in red ink that the "Black Hand" would drink his blood if he didn't either quit business in the neighborhood of East Sixty-third Street and First Avenue or come up with $300 cash. Campisi, the grocer, had been informed through the mails that he would be cut into small pieces and packed in a barrel if he did not put the shutters over his windows for the last time and no longer make the profits he had been making. Fascietta, the barber, had been addressed in red ink and with threats, but had been dignified with a dynamite explosion which had ruined his beautiful barber's pole.

These merchants, all in the upper east side Italian colony, had in turn put their cases up to John Bozzuffi, the banker, at Sixty-third Street and First Avenue, the man of wealth and the man of nerve in the colony.

"Virgin Mother!" cried the grocer to the banker. "I will get out before they kill me or kidnap one of my children."

"Stick it out!" said the banker. "Stick it out; not for your own sake, but for the sake of the decent Italians in New York who are making their way in the world, and who will be easy victims of the banditti if you or I give tribute to such cattle."

One after another of the successful Italian-Americans was harassed by these letters from the hidden foe—all written in Italian, and so far as can be ascertained, all from Sicilians. To each of them Bozzuffi gave the same advice: "Don't pay blackmail; die first!"

The grocer is still in business in East Sixty-third Street, just in the rear of the bank; the barber is still shaving Italian-Americans, perhaps the very men who threatened him, and the cobbler has gathered enough courage to hiss the name "Petrosini!" when the "Black Hand" is mentioned, Petrosini being the Detective Sergeant who investigates the troubles of the Italian-Americans.

But not many days ago Banker Bozzuffi missed his eldest son, Antonio, a bright boy of 14 years, just beginning to get ready for the higher American education, a youth the banker hopes to see distinguish himself in Harvard or Yale some day. Bozzuffi has seven children, but Antonio is the firstborn and the namesake of his father's father, who founded the family in this country, and who slaved as a laborer in the trenches of the streets of New York in 1872 to give his own eldest son a chance at a public school education.

For a time Bozzuffi thought his son gone beyond recall. He considered him dead. He had been kidnapped by the same class of Sicilians that had promised to drink the blood of the cobbler, to pickle the grocer, and had ruined the beautiful barber's pole of Fascietta.

Twenty thousand dollars was the sum asked of the banker for the return of his boy, and with the quick spreading of this plot to extort a big part of his wealth from the banker came a fear to the humble Italians that he would be compelled to pay it, and in paying it would use their savings on deposit in his bank. A run on the bank followed, and in two days $7,000 was drawn out, money that would have remained in the bank had Bozzuffi been at the door to reassure the depositors that he would not pay the ransom. But he was hunting his son in the hospitals or following on the heels of Petrosini.

When a last letter came to him telling him to post a placard in the window which would let the "Black Hand" know when to expect the ransom, and while the run on the bank was still on, Banker Bozzuffi scrawled in Italian on a bit of pasteboard, which he hung in the window, this inscription of defiance:

> The Money In This Bank Belongs to The Depositors and It Will Be Paid To Them If I Never See My Son Alive Again.

The banker who had counseled the cobbler, the grocer, and the barber to stick at their business if they paid their lives for it was in their fix now. But the loss of business was as nothing compared to the loss of the eldest born.

Bozzuffi was counseled to meet the demands, as two days passed and his son did not return home.

Before he had received the first of the letters from the kidnappers the banker had called up all the hospitals in the city, thinking that perhaps his son had been hurt in an accident. From the Presbyterian Hospital he had received word that a man with his name was there. He broke the news to his wife, thinking the boy hurt, and hastened to the hospital, only to find that the attendant on the telephone had taken the name for "Duffy" instead of "Bozzuffi," and his boy was not there.

Then when he got the letters from the captors of his son he stood his ground boldly, as he had advised his humbler associates in business.

"I have enough wealth," he declared, "to pay off every cent on deposit in my bank—$40,000—and paying that off will leave me a good sum to start over again in this business. I will take the loss of my son as an accidental death. I have six other children. They can take them one by one, but not a cent will they get from me in tribute. If I give it I am a party to a crime. For the sake of decent, honest, hard-working Italian citizens I will sacrifice everything I have before I will let the lawless of my nation prey on me. Some one has to make a sacrifice, and I will make it if necessary."

The kidnappers became frightened and abandoned Antonio in a room not many blocks away from his father's home. He escaped, the run on the bank was not only stopped, but old depositors and new ones came to Bozzuffi to place their money, and to-day the banker stands higher in the regard of the people in his colony than ever before.

During the past week the banker has had the pictures of his entire brood of children taken as a precaution against more kidnapping and a new attempt to break him in his stand against the lawless Italians.

Bozzuffi is a type of the Italian father who stands on hard-earned advantage in preparing his sons for American citizenship of a high order.

His father, Antonio, came to this country in 1872 and worked as a day laborer, but saved his money, and in five years had enough to buy a farm in Parma. The farm barely made his family a living. He decided to return to America, and with his two sons, Dominick and John, he came back to New York. The father had a mighty struggle to educate John even in the free school, because he would have to be fed and clothed from the profits of penny bargains in fruit. But the boy got his education and landed a job as ticket taker on the elevated. From this post he graduated to platform man at a quarter of a dollar more a week, and again he graduated to ticket seller at $12 a week.

This was good money to a young immigrant and he married and began raising a family. But the growth of the family was swifter than the increase of salary, and he worked on the outside as a notary public first, picking up small fees and saving them. Then he saw a chance to sell a parcel of real estate and get a bigger fee. Finally he found enough money saved to go shares in a little grocery store, and this brought in a bit of an income. Before he knew it the long hours in the ticket box of the elevated were unnecessary, and he gave up his job and finally concentrated his efforts in real estate and insurance, and then got to lending money. Before he knew it he was a banker.

Bozzuffi's old mother, the wife of Antonio, who now lives in Parma, to-day draws an income from her son's bank that many an American mother would like to have at her disposal.

"I'm not ashamed of my people, family, or nation," said Bozzuffi. "I would rather be the son of a laborer who saved his money and gave me a chance at the American public school than be the son of a sire that produced only a Boni de Castellane. In my country there are plenty of Bozzuffis of ancient lineage. I don't know whether they are connected with my father's family or not, and don't care. I know that I'm an American citizen by the sweat of my father's brow, and by my own endeavor I have managed to get my head above water and raise a family. My son can be an American college graduate from the best institution the country affords, and as soon as he is old enough for me to judge wisely as to his inclinations I will see that he gets everything money can command to uplift him.

"Of course his loss to me would have been more than a man could reckon in profit and loss. I believe that I have as much of the instinct of a parent as any human, but I have something beyond that. I have never ceased to love my fatherland and the people of it. I want to share in the development of those Italians who come here. I find that my people are handicapped here only by the ugly element that comes over with the element which wants to struggle upward. There are no American restrictions upon us. Our only restrictions are made by the unscrupulous Italians who in their envy try to extort from those who have been successful a part of their honest gain. To give a cent to the demands of these robbers and assassins would be to encourage them. I will give all I have—money and children, home and wealth, life itself—before I will be a means of hindering the honest development of my people as Americans."

JOHN BURROUGHS AND HIS DOGS

NOT long since in one of the daily papers I chanced upon a paragraph in which some one expressed commiseration for John Burroughs because he evidently had never known dogs intimately. Instantly my thoughts went back to certain days when I had been permitted to enter into the life of this man and learn something of his friendships with these animals.

It is more than twenty years since I first met Mr. Burroughs in his home in West Park. I was an enthusiastic lover of nature and of Mr. Burroughs's books, and occasionally in the essays I had come across dog tracks. In the course of our talk I asked after this dog. Then a shadow seemed to fall on the face of the naturalist, and he said:

"I have no dog now. Like all my dogs, Lark came to an untimely end. And he was such a companion to me! He understood not only what I said, but what I thought. If I but looked at him angrily he would lie down and put up his paws in the most pathetic way, seeming to say, 'Here I am; do with me as you like; kill me if you will.' Then, when I spoke kindly and told him it was all make-believe, he would be beside himself with joy.

"But he had one bad habit—he would fight, and he never learned that discretion is the better part of valor. Any dog, big or little, was subject to attack if Lark thought it needed to be disciplined. Naturally he would often have fared badly had I not been with him to preserve the balance of power."

In those days Mr. Burroughs was Bank Examiner, and often away from home for days. As there was then no West Shore Railroad, his journeys were mainly by boat. At such times Lark was the last to give him good-bye and the first to welcome his return. He would go with his master to the dock and watch with wistful eyes as the boat carried him away into the unknown world. Then dejectedly he would climb the hill to the house

But once when Mr. Burroughs returned he missed the dog's greeting. "Where is Lark?" he asked, and was told that the dog had joined battle with a larger one and had been so badly injured that nothing could be done for him. Mr. Burroughs hastened to the shed and found his comrade cold and apparently lifeless, but as he spoke to him the little dog's faithful heart responded to the loved voice and his wounds began to bleed afresh. After a silence I said: "Why don't you have another?"

"I shall never have another; it hurts too much to give up what one has loved so dearly."

A few years later I was again a visitor at West Park, and found my friend attended by two dogs—Ino, a large, silky-haired black and white creature, evidently with a grandfather to boast of had he chosen, and Laddie, a little "no 'count" black dog with short coarse hair. As we walked Ino kept at his master's side in a dignified manner, a perfect Sir Charles Grandison of a dog, and Laddie, when he was not off on a side excursion, usually trotted at his master's heels. Later in the day, when we rested in the study, Ino sat placidly beside his master while Laddie lay at his feet. Occasionally, as Mr. Burroughs talked in his charming way of his birds or his vineyards, he would softly stroke Ino's silky head, whereupon, once at least, Laddie sprang up and tried to lick his master's hand. There was love in the beautiful eyes of the larger dog, but worship in the eyes of the smaller one.

In the course of a year or two something happened to each of these, and again Mr. Burroughs was bereft.

Somewhat recently, when he was calling upon one of his wealthy neighbors, Nip, a highly bred fox terrier, fell in love with him. A few days later the lady sent him to Mr. Burroughs, to Nip's great delight. When he accompanied the naturalist on his walks afield the terrier was rather a doubtful blessing, for he had so many weighty affairs of his own to attend to and made such a noise that he was often sharply called to order. Then Nip would look up with a look that plainly said, "Ain't my business as important as his'n is?" and try desperately hard to be good. But there was never much fun for Nip in keeping still, and soon he would be off on another mad chase. When he went with Mr. Burroughs to the meadow after wild strawberries he was greatly mystified; he could not see what any one could want of those little red things. A look of thorough disgust would come over his face as he vainly tried to coax his friend away to the woods, where "something was doing." When he and his master escaped to the wilderness and made their home at Slabsides, Nip was the happiest dog alive. But, alas! he, too, met a tragic fate, and now for several years Mr. Burroughs has walked alone so far as four-footed companions are concerned.

There were dog friends before the time of Lark, and certainly in the old days on the mountain farm, but I doubt if any was quite so dear to the heart of the naturalist as was he. Dear, faithful heart, if there is a happy hunting ground for dogs, Lark is surely there.

Race Suicide Inefficient.

RACE suicide has not prevented the human family from making a fair showing, for it now numbers 1,450,000,000 noses. Of Papa Adam's children 250,000,000 go naked, 700,000,000 clothe only the middle part of the body, while 500,000,000 are accustomed to envelop the whole body with some kind of garment; although in Summer the women in the last class are somewhat inclined to revert to aboriginal styles of dressing the body from the standpoint of decoration rather than protection from the inclemencies of weather and the observation of man.

New York's "Bad-Girl Problem": How It Is Being Met

Wherein It Differs from the "Bad-Boy Problem"---Its Worst Phase Is a Form of "Faginism"---Views of an Experienced East Side Teacher.

MISS MARY L BRADY

WHATEVER may be the gravity of the "bad-boy problem" in New York, it will rejoice those who are proud of the efforts put forth to uplift the city by its public-spirited citizens, to know that there is at least no "bad-girl problem" to speak of. Careful inquiry develops the fact that the future sweethearts, wives, and mothers figure only to a small extent among the so-called incorrigible element of our juvenile population.

To begin with—and get through with statistics gathered at the head centre where the really bad youngsters sooner or later find their way—the Children's Court: During last year 9,418 boys and girls, all under 16 years of age, were arraigned at the bar of this tribunal. Of this total only 1,011 were girls, and 745 of these were there not because of any offense committed by them, but in order that they might be transferred from improper guardianship to institutions where they would be taken care of. This, then, left 257 who faced the Judges on charges.

One hundred and thirteen were arraigned for being morally depraved or in danger of becoming so through association with vicious or disreputable characters. Fifteen were discharged.

Forty-four were accused of being habitually unmanageable and running away from home. Fifteen were acquitted.

Thirty-four were merely charged with being ungovernable. Twelve were acquitted.

Thirty-one were up on petty larceny charges. Fifteen were acquitted.

Four were accused of grand larceny. All were acquitted owing to insufficient evidence against them.

One poor child was before the court for trying to commit suicide, being the thirteenth girl to be arraigned on this charge since the court was first opened, on Sept. 2, 1902. No boy has been before the court on this charge, so appalling in the case of a child.

The remainder were accused of miscellaneous trivial offenses.

School Principals and teachers in widely distant parts of the city agree that the girl truant is comparatively a rara avis, and are unanimous in the belief that there is no necessity in the case of girls for the establishment of an institution intermediary between the ordinary primary school and the regular truant institution similar to the one for boys which is doing such excellent work on the lower east side.

Why is it that girls brought up in the same environment and conditions as boys and subjected to the same demoralizing influences manifest a far less tendency to go astray? After giving the subject much thought and out of the wisdom of her wide experience with children of both sexes, Miss Mary L. Brady, Principal of one of the largest public schools in New York, School No. 177, at Market and Monroe Streets, in that terribly congested lower east side district where the "bad-girl problem," like the "bad-boy problem," perforce is most difficult to solve, attributes the difference to this: That there is something in the feminine nature, in that of the small girl as in that of the woman, that in spite of all adverse influences and temptations impels imperatively toward refinement and right thinking.

But while really bad girls would seem to be exceedingly few as compared with the boys, when they are bad they are "horrid." It is the experience of those whose duty or mission it is to reform them that they are extremely difficult to manage. They are not nearly as appreciative of, or responsive to, efforts on their behalf as are boys. It requires patience, persistence, and a rare amount of discretion to get them to take the strait and narrow path, and more especially to keep them to it.

As one goes further from the congested tenement districts down town the "bad-girl problem" grows, it may well be said, beautifully less. For instance, in the German, Hungarian, and Bohemian district no very unusual trouble is experienced by teachers. Miss Mary C. O'Brien, Principal of the primary department of the big school at Eighty-first Street and Avenue A, who has been there for some years, has not encountered one case of a bad girl, or, for that matter, of a bad boy, which she and her teachers have not been able to handle. Among the Germans and the residents of other nationalities in this neighborhood the home conditions appear to be far more normal from the American point of view, even in cases where both parents are out at work all day.

Little if any tendency to truancy is displayed by Jewish children. The worst offenders in this respect appear to be the youngsters from Italy or those born here of Italian parents. And it is being noticed by educators that the Italian element is steadily increasing in those quarters on the lower east side at one time almost wholly occupied by immigrants from Russia and the Polands. The greater propensity of Italian children to break from the irksome discipline of the school is ascribed to their complete difference of temperament. They are full of play and mischievousness, whereas the little immigrants from Russia, brought up in an atmosphere of oppression and repression, and on whom the blight of wretchedness seems to have rested from their birth, are grave and old far beyond their years. They do not know how to play when they first go to school, and have to be taught and have their latent play instinct brought out.

There is, however, on the lower east side—and it seems to be mainly confined to that section—a peculiar condition which the teachers are striving hard to overcome, and which is rarely brought to the attention of the courts or the police. This is thievery among the girls. It is very prevalent, it would appear, and though the light-fingered proclivities of the boys are marked, it is their sisters who are the worst and most numerous offenders.

"Faginism in the district," said Miss Brady, "is carried on to an extent that persons who have no opportunity to become acquainted with life here would never dream of. It is a larger problem than that of immorality. It is not, however, altogether a child problem. The responsibility for it rests almost entirely upon the parents, and especially upon the mothers, who connive at and encourage thieving by their children.

"The greed for money among our people is nothing less than a disease, and it is inherent in the children. The adults are all money getters, and the little ones are affected by the craze. They steal money or articles and take them home. The parents know that the coins and things could not have been acquired honestly, but they raise no question about it and take the money. All is grist that comes to their mill. The poorer the surroundings of the family the more ambitious are they to better their lot, and if taking what belongs to other people furthers the attainment of this ambition, why, so much the worse for other people."

The thieving habit grows quickly upon a girl, who needs little encouragement to become a dexterous pilferer, and she invariably operates with as much boldness as skill.

"Nevertheless," said Miss Brady, speaking of the general subject, "considering the home and neighborhood conditions, the girls of this part of the city are a credit to their sex."

Statistics of the Children's Court show, and teachers agree, that the moral question as it affects girls of tender age is not by any means such a terrible one as alarmists have made out, and this notwithstanding the shocking conditions disclosed by cases brought before the courts not so very long ago.

The first cause given by those in a position to speak with authority is the old familiar one of the congested tenement district. What healthfulness of mind or body is possible where human beings can huddle six to a dozen in a kennel a few feet square, and take a boarder into the bargain? Girls brought up in such an environment necessarily live a large part of their lives on the streets, where at least there is room to move. They grow wise in vicious knowledge at the neighborly symposiums in hallways and on stoops, where in Summer the heat drives the tenement denizens to promiscuous sociability and where the presence of children does not act as a check upon subjects of conversation. As a result they are unabashed at meeting with the advances of people however vile.

Even where the mother is right-minded and does her best, she cannot, if she have several children, confine them to the room or two they call home. She sends them to the street also that they may be out of her way while she works. She does not know where they go. They run wild and some of the companions they associate with are very bad.

The moral problem that exercises the workers among the children, however, is not so serious in the case of the girls at school as in that of those who have left the classes at an early age to earn their living. These have long hours of work for the little pay, which generally is turned over to the mother. Their minds are unformed. They are subjected to the familiar temptations attendant upon the need for recreation and the taste for dress incidental to their age and branching out and the examples set by companions of the workroom.

But, as an endeavor has been made to show, the "bad-girl question," taken all in all, does not exist to any great extent, consideration being given to the fact that nearly 2,000,000 people dwell in Manhattan Borough alone. As to what is being done or ought to be done to deal with the whole problem affecting both girls and boys—that must be another story.

A SOCIALIST'S REPLY TO DAVID M. PARRY'S NOVEL, "THE SCARLET EMPIRE"

ACCORDING to the Socialists' theories, the pictures of Social Democracy, of Philosophic Commonwealths, and other descriptions presented in the form of fiction since the times of Bacon and Shakespeare up to our present-day American writers have been absolutely untrue and absurd.

There are Socialists in this country who say so.

Mr. Morris Hillquit, for instance, one of the two delegates appointed by the Socialists of the United States to attend the International Socialist Bureau in Brussels, can be safely considered as a man who has grasped the full intents and purposes of the Socialist movement in this country, and he says so.

In fact, he has grasped the subject so well that he makes a lot of Socialistic propaganda look ridiculous, to say nothing of other various sorts of Socialists themselves.

As Mr. Hillquit sees the prospects of a Social Democracy, there will be no such conditions as Bellamy's "Looking Backward" predicted, or as Mr. Parry's "Scarlet Empire" is about to publish to the world.

The review of the latter, printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday, was spread out on the table before Mr. Hillquit as he talked, and he punctured Mr. Parry's weird picture with a sharp, incisive paper-knife.

"To understand what a rational Socialist is really trying to do, let me say that everything in the Socialist movement, up to about 1850, was in the order of Utopian effort," said Mr. Hillquit, in so quiet and orderly a tone that it would have made some people suspicious of his sincerity, but that is because we who are still in the darkness of idealism confuse the agitator and the Anarchist and the social madman with the Socialist.

* * *

"Of course there are people who say that Plato was a Socialist, or Oliver Cromwell, or any great man who has benefited humanity, but I only reckon the beginning of Socialism perhaps somewhere soon after the year 1800, when industrial conditions were being worked out on a basis that destroyed the individual tool, and created the class of wage earners. Before machinery existed every man owned his tools, and, save for his term of apprenticeship, he was free to set up in business for himself. The ownership of his tools made him independent of any one but his own industry and ability. Only when the simple individual tool had developed into the costly social machine of to-day, the private ownership of that machine by the few became unjust and oppressive to the many, and modern Socialism, i. e., the movement to do away with the private ownership of the machine and all other means of production and distribution, became possible."

Mr. Hillquit paused, smiling, as he ran his paper-knife over some of the quoted passages from Mr. Parry's "Scarlet Empire."

"Now, presuming that a novel is, in the first place, a proper medium for the description of social ideals, (which is a matter of doubt that assails all fiction, because of its purely imaginative manufacture,) the author of this absurd story has denied the Socialist one of the first principles of his philosophy, improvement—moral, intellectual, and, above all, economic improvement. The fact that a capitalist like Mr. Parry finds it necessary to write such an absurd, untruthful fantasia of a Socialism that does not and never will exist proves that in the interests of a capitalistic minority he considers it important to distort the truth by ridicule.

"I find an extraordinary similarity between 'The Scarlet Empire' and a book written by Eugene Richter in Germany called 'The Future State.' Even to many details the absurdities are similar. In both of these ridiculous commonwealths the people all dressed alike; there was no outward distinction between men and women. The citizens all had cards of identification, and there was an even distribution of food, &c. Richter's 'Future State' was largely circulated by the capitalistic interests of Germany, but it made no great impression.

"I must confess I do not understand why Mr. Parry had to invent an imaginary submarine commonwealth for the dreary social conditions he describes. Those conditions are in actual existence to-day, and Mr. Parry will find them in full bloom in the factories of his friends of the National Manufacturers' Association. The hands in the factories are known by numbers instead of names; they dress, eat, live, and think alike, and there are plenty of Inspectors around them to watch over every one of their movements. It is just this obliteration of the individuality that Socialism opposes."

"What, then, will be the actual conditions of a Social Democracy?" I asked.

This is a question so often and so easily tossed at the Socialist that he has got used to it, but, as Mr. Hillquit very conservatively explained, no rational Socialist ever attempts to answer it with any exactness, any more than the rational reformer can describe the millennium.

"I cannot tell you what we shall look like, what the exact forms of government will be, what foods we shall eat, or what clothes we shall wear when a Social Democracy is established. Your idealists and sentimentalists are always romancing; we Socialists are pursuing our studies upon definite, scientific principles; we are observing the evolution of the earth we stand upon, which is a material earth at present, not a dream-world of imagination."

"But we are led to believe that equality of rights and equality of ownership will divide everything up, that the State will take care of us all, and we shall live like Princes," I said, purposely voicing the usual understanding of a Social Democracy.

"I know. That and many other absord conclusions are put forth as the Socialistic dream, but there is as much difference between such wild predictions and the actual process of the Socialists' philosophy as there is between ridicule and sense," said Mr. Hillquit, settling back in his chair, having with a gesture of his paperknife drawn an erasing line across "The Scarlet Empire."

"The Socialist is, first of all, a thinking man; he is an economic student who puts his information and observations into practical uses for the benefit of mankind. He believes the human instinct for the best, the highest, the noblest outcome of individuality is the prevailing power in an advanced condition of society. This condition may come fifty years or a hundred years from now. The Socialist bases his philosophy of the future not as a fatalist, who waits for the inevitable to drop into his lap from the sky, but upon carefully worked-out conclusions, drawn from the evolutionary history of the world. Every upheaval of political or ethical failure in conditions to meet the economic progress of the race has been a step onward toward the Socialist's faith in the eventual democracy of the world.

"This is the economic age. The statute books are full of laws made solely to protect the rights of property ownership, to lend dignity and respect to the accumulation of dollars. Fully 99 per cent. of the crimes and at least 75 per cent. of the laws are the outcome of an economic struggle to satisfy private greed."

"How are you going to abolish greed in human nature?" I asked.

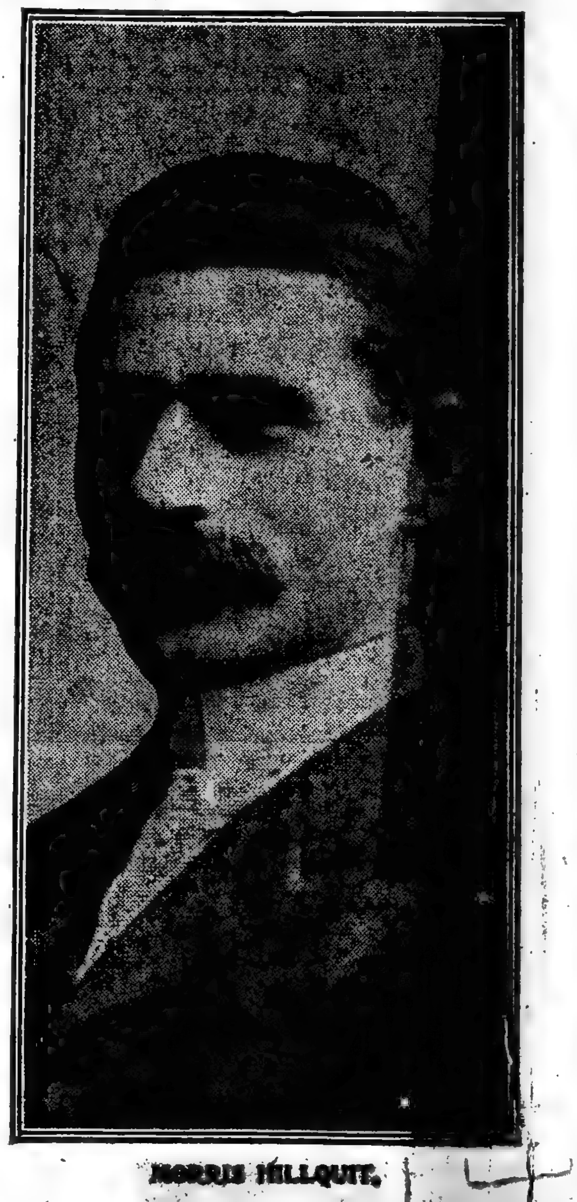
"The Socialist does not believe that human nature is mean or violent or wicked. He places a high standard upon the natural impulses of men and women. It is the grinding of conditions that cleanse and squeeze society into a higher state of civilization, the process of sociological fermentation that is always proving the confidence one can have in the ethical foundations of human nature.

"The Socialist is among those who applaud the ethics that grow out of his economic text. I do not mean to say that the political prospects of the Socialist movement should be classed second to its ethical motives, because the economic conditions that prevail now must be improved through political effort.

"The Socialist must influence the ballot, to bring about a Legislature that will not be bribed and a Government that will not be controlled by the trusts."

"And if the Socialists controlled the will of the people by votes, what would they do first?"

"They would take out of the hands of a few men the industrial plants of the country, and operate them under new laws—laws that would have in them an ethical purpose for mutual instead of individual profit. Whether the ownership would take form in municipal, State, or National Government will depend upon the nature of the industries in each case. It is absurd to prophesy what the shape of an object so distant will be, but I believe that men and women will look and be very much as they are to-day, with the added benefits of enlightenment that the evolution of society will involve."



MORRIS HILLQUIT.

"The changes of society being inevitable, what assurance has the Socialist that his theories will ever become effective?"

"He has, to my mind, the most positive foundation, by drawing a straight line of precedent, in facts, without other imagination than that of contrasting economic problems of to-day with their prospects for to-morrow. We are not so concerned with the morals of the future as we are with the economics. Out of economic independence will come individual morals, freedom of action within ethical impulses, and an appreciation of industrial necessities that will give more leisure for individuality, for art, or literature, or poetry, or music.

"We do not enter into the matter of religion, either. That, we believe, will find its level in the enlightenment that follows all economic improvements.

* * *

"The Socialist opposes the present capitalistic system because it ties up industrial conditions for the benefit of the few at the sacrifice of the millions. It is not Rockefeller, or Morgan, or Vanderbilt we object to personally. If they would be content with the enjoyment of their amassed wealth we should be satisfied to leave them in peace, but they are the representatives of a system of private ownership and exploitation that pursues them, drives them into complications they cannot avoid so long as they continue their plans of trustification.

"Commodore Vanderbilt was a pioneer in industrial improvement, personally, but his heirs are merely the beneficiaries of a system so well worked out now that no one man is necessary for its achievements.

"You see, all the mechanism of industrial interests is complete, it moves like clockwork designed by previous generations, and the personal power of one man over an economic problem that is solved is a menace to individual freedom."

"The Socialist would overthrow the capitalist?"

"Not the capitalist, whose capital is an inactive agent in industry, but we would overthrow the capitalistic influence exerted against the individual's privilege to share in the industrial improvements that have been worked out for him by previous wage-earners.

"The Socialist sees a great difference between inactive wealth and active, exploiting capital."

"Will the Social Democracy continue the present form of republican government in the rank of its officials?"

"We cannot tell what the form will be. The changes in society will bring about their own enlightenments, and we shall have a state of government that will belong to the conditions.

"I am positive, however, those conditions will be more peaceable than they are now. There will be no overproduction; industrial improvements will have solved the exact quantities of manufacture we require, and therefore the hours of labor will be shorter, the leisure for individual privileges greater."

Mr. Parry's contentions in his novel "The Scarlet Empire" were in no place sustained by Mr. Hillquit's argument.

"It will be some time before the Socialists' predictions will come?"

"The evolution is slow, but we are busy and faithful to our conclusions."

"Is the Socialist agitator to be feared?"

"No. There are all sorts of Socialists. Socialism is the name for a restless sociological condition that precedes an improvement. There are many immature and thoughtless expressions of Socialism that do not go to the root of the idea, and though these misconceptions do temporary damage, they all indicate a tendency toward some enlightenment of our economic failures.

"But it will come gradually.

"Some Anarchists, of course, advise mob violence, believing that they would be supported, but the Socialist never urges his philosophy that way. He knows that time will bring about an inevitable evolution of society, and he sees no other solution than an economic improvement. Another thing, your rational Socialist never fears a retrograding scale of things. Nothing degenerates, entirely, for at the time of decay a new growth is in process."

* * *

"Conditions were better, however, in the days of George Washington," I suggested.

"I know it is customary to refer to the integrity and wisdom of the men of those days, but they had no corrupting industrial conditions such as ours to encounter. Those were the days before Socialism, because no conditions existed to demand it.

"The tremendous industrial strides the world has made since then have developed capitalistic problems and wage-earner problems. If Depew, for instance, had lived a hundred years ago, perhaps he would not have been betrayed by the subtlety of conditions, and would have remained and died a true and unselfish statesman."

"Do you think the Socialists' methods will ever lead to a revolution in this country?"

"Only in the event of force being attempted by the capitalistic party at the polls. At present such a contingency seems very remote, because until the Socialists' influence at election brings about a possible contest, let us say, for President, there is no danger, and I fancy when that time does come it will be because the Socialists are in the majority, and the clash will be hard on the minority."

"Perhaps fifty years from now?"

"Perhaps more—the rational Socialist is neither utopian nor radically violent in his predictions."

None of these things, Mr. Hillquit pointed out, had Mr. Parry touched on in his novel, and all the conditions he had described were absurdly out of tune with what the Socialists themselves advocated.

The Dream-way.

IT did not look so far, and yet, and yet,
The moments were so easy to forget,
For now, without your hand to guide, it seems
I seek in vain to find a way of dreams.

A moonlit path between aspiring trees,
'Neath wind-blown leaves rustling in harmonies,
A little song that I shall never sing—
But of the wondrous memory lingering.

And though I never may return until
I clasp your hand beyond these years, why still
There is one guide the path of life along—
A fleeting end of dream-remember'd song.

Interesting News and Comment from Foreign Lands

Kaiser Wilhelm Runs Afoul of His Parliament---King Edward's Continental Tour---Russia's Latest Jewish Bugaboo---Adieu to the Moulin Rouge.

Mysterious Itinerary of the "Duke of Lancaster"

OWING to the furor created in the German press by King Edward entertaining former French Minister of Foreign Affairs Delcassé at the British Embassy in Paris, the King has "requested and directed" that the programme of his Continental travels shall be kept a secret. Of course, this has merely official significance, for wherever the "Duke of Lancaster" appears there will his Majesty be also.

Labouchere's Truth, of London, whose paragraphs concerning the doings of royalty experience has shown to be accurate, states positively that the King will not meet the Kaiser either in the Mediterranean or at the Olympic games next Summer; in fact, he will not see his nephew at all unless he goes to Berlin. As far as etiquette is concerned, the King certainly owes his nephew a visit, and the Kaiser, it is understood, has presumed to exact the minutest punctilio of that etiquette. In the meantime, it is reported on excellent authority from Zara that the Governor of Dalmatia has received advices stating that the "Duke of Lancaster" will visit Ragusa, a picturesque watering place on the Adriatic coast situated at the foot of Mount Sergio, and there remain from March 27 to April 1. Proceeding from Ragusa to Abbazia, the "Duke of Lancaster" will be entertained for a few days by Emperor Francis Joseph, who will come thither from Vienna for the purpose. More importance is attached to this meeting on account of the German Kaiser's well-known attitude toward the German-speaking subjects of Austria than because of the present internal conflicts in the Dual Empire.

The German press, after its first resentment of the Delcassé episode, has taken the alleged personal dislike of the King toward his august nephew very much to heart. In Berlin and Homberg and other places frequented by English travelers in Winter German nobles pour forth their tale of woe to their English acquaintances something after the following fashion:

"Ja, ja, your King certainly does dislike Germany. But why? What have we done to him? It seems so unnatural, when his own father was a German. We used to think it was on account of his mother-in-law, die alte Königen Luise; but it cannot be her now; she is dead. Then why does he dislike our Emperor, his own nephew? Ja, ja, you English have absolutely no family affection.

"Now, do not deny this. I know the König dislikes the Kaiser. It has been told to me—no mere gossip. I have, of course, relations at Court—and I am told—this is on the höchsten autoritat—that, when King Edward was informed that he must go to Berlin, because, until he did, Kaiser Wilhelm could not go once more to London, he actually laughed and declared that, if such were the case, wild horses should not drag him to Berlin. And when our Kaiser, thinking to have a little joke, sent word that Paris was not Berlin, your King declared that Paris was London and that his nephew might meet him there! Unglaublich, nicht wahr? And after all the Kaiser's kindness to him when his mother died! Every one says that the Kaiser nearly worked himself to death at Osborne making arrangements for that funeral.

"Doch waren kaum what your Shakespeare calls the funeral baked meats consumed before King Edward goes to Paris to tell the French what a noble nation they are, and how much better he likes them than he does us. Ja, Ja, der König has some fine qualities—he is certainly clever, but he is secretive; he does not tell us what he is going to do next, and he goes about with an incognito that is no incognito, for everybody knows who the Duke of Lancaster is; and then he lacks gratitude. Unglaublich, nicht wahr? Do you suppose that those embracings at Brest and Portsmouth and London, and those crowded steamers running from Calais to Dover and back again, would occur if Queen Victoria were alive? My personal belief is that these whole affairs were arranged by your King and jener Delcassé just to worry us and annoy the Kaiser. And then, that dinner at the English Embassy! Do you know, I have it that for that one dinner your King dropped his incognito so that he ceased to be a guest at the English Embassy and became the host there, and as host he received jenen Francose!"

Moroccs's Postal System

SINCE the Sultan of Morocco, he of the euphonious name, provides neither Post Offices nor postage stamps nor postmen, certain foreign powers having dealings with Morocco decided not long since to establish their own local and international service. Thus, along the "Little Socco," the boulevard of Tangier, may be read the following signs: "British Post Office," "Poste Française," and "Correo Español." Now another sign has been put up. It bears at the top an emblazoned black Prussian eagle, and reads, "Deutsche Reichspost."

"Verily, the flag follows the stamp," writes M. Mennevée in the Echo de la Timbrologie, and he draws attention to the curious fact that this latest comer has created a special staff for dealing with the postal service in Morocco, while France has seen fit to leave its service in the hands of its Consular officials. The amount of business transacted at the German Post Office in the "Little Socco" is said to be unprecedented in Tangier. For ten years the French Post Office disposed of 1,125,300 letters, while the German Post Office, although its career has been brief, has speeded to their destination no less than 727,800 letters. In the light of his patriotism if not in that of the above figures, M. Mennevée is astonished that the French authorities should have allowed another nation, with certainly comparatively small local interests of every kind, to have gained such a strong foothold in Morocco.

Venezuela Ready for War

PRESIDENT CASTRO has not yet formally declared war on France, possibly because his present means of communication with Paris are rather uncertain and irregular. Nevertheless, one is assured by a correspondent that the first French ship of war which gets in range of the port of La Guayra will be fired upon.

The heights above the port are being fortified with eight and ten inch guns—whence these guns come nobody seems to know—and twenty of these guns are already in position, with a competent staff of officers and men behind them. The War Office at Caracas is said to be inundated with applications from ex-officers of the German and Russian armies for permission to enter the Venezuelan service. Such military activity, it is stated, has rarely been seen in a South American republic. There are at present 5,000 men constantly under arms, and 50,000 more drilling night and day who can take the field within forty-eight hours. These do not include the coast artillerymen, who are constantly on guard.

THE MOULIN ROUGE AND BOULEVARD DE CLICHY.

Spanish Generosity and Spanish Improvidence

THE enthusiasm in the Spanish Cortes the other day, when the bill was introduced providing for the maintenance of King Alfonso's prospective consort, formed a curious contrast to the silence with which another measure asking for an investigation into how certain money had been used was received a few days previous.

As Queen of Spain Princess Ena of Battenberg is to receive an annual allowance of 450,000 pesetas, or $90,000. After marriage, should she survive the King, her allowance is to be cut down to 250,000 pestas, or $50,000. And the enthusiastic way in which this bill was worded, in preamble and conclusion, shows how official Spain regards the matrimonial alliance which may pave the way toward one of an international character.

On the other occasion mentioned, Señor Nougues, a Republican member of the Chamber, asked the Government to hold an inquiry into how the sums allotted for the repatriation of Spanish Generals after the late war had been expended. He pointed out that these Generals had been known to return home with as many as 400 trunks, while one of them had luncheons on the way costing 25,000 pesetas ($5,000.) The widow of another General had deposited in her name 70,000 douros ($70,000) in a London bank. As the Spanish Courts of Honor were not "capable" of investigating such cases, Señor Nougues asked for the appointment of a commission to throw light on the subject.

Señor Moret, the Prime Minister, made a set reply, while the members of the Chamber looked bored or impassive. The inquiry, declared the Minister, was impossible for two reasons: so much time had elapsed that the elements for a decision would be lacking; moreover, parliamentary commissions did not have practical results, and, in conclusion, he appealed to the majority to reject the proposal, which it accordingly did by a vote of 143 to 18.

While this was going on in the Chamber a similar proposal was made in the Senate and eloquently defended by the Minister of War, who thus found himself opposed to the Premier. Gen. Weyler, formerly Governor General of Cuba, sprang to the rostrum and denied that he had deposited millions in a bank, while he insisted that it was the duty of the Minister of War to defend the Generals, and not to embarrass them. Thereupon the Minister in question replied simply that he was ready to defend their honor, but that a military tribunal should punish those who had none. The matter was then laid on the table.

England's Threatened Disestablishment

M. CHARLES BOS, writing in the Rappel of Paris, sees in the pending English Education bill a law which will bring England nearer to disestablishment than ever before. He points out that, while there is not much analogy between the position of the Roman Catholic Church under the Concordat and that of the Church of England under the British Constitution, he nevertheless feels the inevitable approaching and politely trusts that it will be delayed as long as possible, because he abhors to hear bitter disputes among "the dear friends of France on the other side of the Channel." He says:

"If England sets herself to achieve the separation of religion and the State she will carry out her work with the tenacity she displays in everything she undertakes. It will be a good occasion to give us a true political lesson, and show us how the genuine Parliamentary régime ought to work. Let her accomplish separation while guarding herself against the upheavals, whether Clerical or Jacobin, from which we have not been able to protect ourselves. England has the sense and the taste for liberty. Here we love the word rather than the thing. Perhaps it is reserved for England and the democracies of Europe to make prevail the famous formula of a free Church in a sovereign State."

Dr. Vidi, in Le Journal, of Paris, suggests a new label for absinthe bottles and writes: "Everyone agrees that absinthe is a real poison. A glass at first, then two, then three, and finally a sea, which submerges everything—health, reason, life. I demand for absinthe a simple label which shall be stuck on every bottle of that poison." The picture of a skull and cross-bones accompanies the paragraph.

FRANCISQUE SARCEY, the late critic and novelist, once said that the Moulin Rouge was responsible for more than half the fiction produced by Paris writers. If that be true, there will shortly be a distinct falling off in the number of French novels published, unless scenes are shifted from the present to the past. The Moulin Rouge—that famous Red Mill at No. 90 Boulevard de Clichy, in Montmartre, is about to be pulled down. On March 7, the Tribunal of Commerce pronounced a decree of bankruptcy against it.

For many years, Montmartre has succeeded in rivaling—at least as far as attracting foreigners is concerned—the Quartier Latin, on the other side of the Seine. It is there that the Bohemianism of middle life has outdone that district of narrow streets and old houses lying between the river and the Odéon, between Rue Dauphine and Boulevard St. Michel, which, in the days of Paul de Kock and Henri Murger, successfully fought unaided its fight against philistinism. In the last quarter of a century, however, Montmartre with its Moulin Rouge and its Chat Noir which first brought the Willettes, the Alphonse Allais, the Auriols, and the Toulouse Lautrects together, quite outdid the old Quartier in publicity. But the Moulin Rouge, from being its most attractive feature, finally became its white elephant, and it has steadily declined in the favor not only of the Parisians, but also of foreigners, particularly Americans, who used to be the chief patrons of this once famous dancing and concert hall.

Argentina's Gladstone

ARGENTINES in this city resent the memory of the late Gen. Bartolomeo Mitre being grouped with other notorious South American Dictators—Rosas, Lopez, Francia, and Castro, especially Castro of Venezuela. They familiarly call their late President "Don Bartolo," but to strangers they speak of him as the great patriot, the Gladstone of the Republic of Argentina.

The modern city of Buenos Ayres, where Mitre died a few weeks ago, bears slight resemblance to the city as it was twenty-five years ago. A like change has taken place in the administration of the Government. There are many Mexicans, Bolivians, and Italians in this modern Argentina which Mitre brought forth from the wreck of a republic torn asunder by internal strife. To them he is respectively a Diaz, a Bolivar, a Garibaldi, while as has been said, Argentines under Anglo-Saxon influences call him their Gladstone.

What Maxim Gorky is Doing in Berlin

AS a cable dispatch announced last week, Maxim Gorky is in Berlin for the purpose of rehearsing a new play at the Deutsches Theatre. He then purposes to make a tour of the country in order to perfect himself in a knowledge of the language. Before he leaves Berlin he will give a series of readings from his short stories. He keeps himself much secluded, but has not evaded the search of correspondents. To one of them he said the other day something which may serve to supplement his article on "A Year of Revolution in Russia," printed in these columns a fortnight ago:

"Aside from the benefits which the lives and property of future Russians will derive from the Revolution, there is an aesthetic benefit which will be not less important. With the censor of literature removed, to say nothing of administrative encouragement of literature established, the Russian who can use the pen and who has been studying what he would like to do could he use that pen freely, will achieve great things.

"I am of opinion that there will be a complete evolution in the direction of romanticism, and that the character of the new Russian literature will be on a considerably higher level than it is at present; in the new works, we shall betray more sentiment and more power, but, perhaps, also less intelligence. This tone will be especially perceptible in the dramatic works. The contents of the dramas will become more idealistic, the personalities in them will be stronger; the writers of dramas will be compelled to devote more attention to social questions.

"With regard to the present political situation in Russia, I do not anticipate that there will be an improvement soon. We must, indeed, be prepared rather to see the situation become worse. The summoning of the Imperial Legislative Assembly or Douma will not appease the country. The excitement among the Russian people, even to the most distant parts of the empire, grows daily, and the people will be satisfied only with radical reforms which insure justice and guarantee personal freedom. I am, however, by no means pess'mistic with regard to Russia's future. I believe that in the end the people will be victorious. Reaction, which feeds on its own sap, which meets with no sympathy in society, will consume itself."

Dr. Paul Nathan's View of Russian Massacre

STARTLING reports of the condition and future of Russia's 6,000,000 Jews were made on March 12 in Berlin to the annual meeting of the Central Jewish Relief League of Germany by Dr. Paul Nathan, a well-known Berlin publicist, who has returned from an extensive trip through Russia as the special emissary of Jewish philanthropists in England, America, and Germany, to arrange for distribution of the relief fund of $1,500,000 raised after the massacres last Autumn.

Dr. Nathan paints a horrifying picture of the plight and prospects of his coreligionists, and forecasts at any hour renewed massacres exceeding in extent and terror all that have gone before. He left St. Petersburg with the firm conviction that the Russian Government's studied policy for the "solution" of the Jewish question is systematic and murderous extermination.

Dr. Nathan read to the meeting a circular addressed to the garrison of Odessa, calling upon the soldiers to "rise and crush the traitors who are plotting to upset the holy Government of the Czar and substitute for it a Jewish empire."

He concluded with an appeal to the Jewish money powers of the world to arrest Russia's career as a borrower. The financiers of the world should call a halt to Russia, not only for humanitarian reasons, but for practical reasons. Russia's bankruptcy is an established fact, he added.

A wail has gone up from the Hotel Keepers' Association of Naples to the effect that American and English tourists are rapidly being supplanted by Germans. One is informed how the Italian host does not relish the change. "Are we to credit the Teuton," inquires a local paper, "with the welcome announcement that the Hotel Keepers' Association has formed a league to protect the foreign wanderer from 'fraud, general trickery, and imposition'? The proverbially deliberate economy of the Teuton forbids such an assumption. There must be some other reason."

Why the Reichstag Snubbed the Kaiser

THE special cable dispatch from Berlin in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Thursday morning announcing that a committee of the Reichstag had turned down the Kaiser's pet measure to establish a Colonial Office as one of the departments of the Imperial Government gives publicity to a matter which has long formed a bone of contention between Prince von Bülow and his imperial master.

As everbody knows, the Kaiser is most anxious that Germany should have colonial possessions; his intrigues in Turkey, in the Philippines, in China, in West and East Africa, and now in Morocco are too well known to be detailed. At present, what for want of a better term may be called "the German colonies," consist of patches of land in various quarters of the globe, whose total area amounts to about a million and a quarter square miles, and whose population is estimated at 13,500,000. In Africa there are Togoland, Kamerun, German Southwest and Southeast Africa; in Asia Kiau-chau Bay; in the Pacific there are German New Guinea, Kaiser Wilhelmland, the Solomon Islands, and five or six other islets, whose individual area is less than 700 square miles apiece. These "colonies" or dependencies are ruled directly from Wilhelmstrasse by means of Imperial Governors or Imperial Commissions.

Chancellor von Bülow has always contended that these possessions per se did not require a Minister for the Colonies, and now the Reichstag committee, which was brought together to report on the matter, seems to be of the same opinion. The trump card which the Kaiser had to play for the furtherance of his pet measure was the "White Book" recently presented to the Reichstag, and dealing with the period covering April 1, 1902, to March 31, 1903. This book, as may be supposed, had been prepared with the utmost care, and no expense had been spared to make it a formidable and inviting volume. Most of the text is written in a popular, convincing vein, and there are elaborate tables and a quantity of beautiful maps. In short, it is a "brief" for the establishment of a Ministry for the Colonies, edited by the Kaiser. Everywhere development and progress are expatiated upon, and, where the facts offer no inspiration for this treatment, they are excused, qualified, or turned through a new channel into an advantage. Here is a passage dealing with German Southwest Africa:

"The colonial administration recognizes that no more effective means for the strengthening of German rule and the simultaneous development of the colonies are at its disposal than the amelioration of the social status of the natives. Protection of person and property, the liberation of natives from bondage, the reservation of sufficient land for the maintenance of the native population and its natural increase, the instruction of natives in the principles of our spiritual and moral civilization, as well as training them to work and to rationalize economic methods—all these aims have formed the subject of earnest care and solicitude during the year under review. * * *"

It was a somewhat unfortunate coincidence that the "White Book" was presented to the Reichstag at the very moment when the German War Office was sending troops to put down the rebellious natives whose "solicitude" the writers of the report or their instigators had so much at heart.

This is why the Reichstag, while admitting the Kaiser's contention that a Colonial Office would add a certain prestige to the Imperial Government, turns down his Majesty's measure because it is not supported by a record of current events.

Threats of a Duello Reform

DEATH to the aspirations of those would-be duelists who meet on the field of honor with photographic, phonographic, and cinematographic accompaniments is threatened by a club recently formed in Paris. This club has passed a resolution forbidding its members to publish any information whatsoever regarding their "affairs of honor." The members are much disturbed. "Why fight duels at all," they ask each other, "if the public is not to be taken into the secret?"

The brilliant careers which this ill-advised rule will probably destroy are too numerous to mention. The ascent of a Parisian duelist of fame has been as constant heretofore as the descent of the "rake" depicted by Hogarth in his "Progress." The first puncture of the skin brings a man's name and picture into the papers. Next season he "exchanges two bullets without result" and is then hailed as the "well-known duelist." A third encounter, and his name is admitted into "Tout Paris"—the "Who's Who" of the Parisians. After this he gets free seats at the theatres, dines out, and is indicated to foreigners on the Bois as one who has "proved his valor on many a field."

The new club with its new resolutions, it is feared, will change all this—sic transit gloria mundi.

To Spy on Russia's Enemies

AN interesting complication is likely to arise through the appointment of ex-Supt. Melville of the famous Detective Bureau at Scotland Yard to the staff of M. Ratshkowsky, Russian Chief of Political Police. During the Czar's last visit to London M. Ratshkowsky met Supt. Melville and was greatly impressed by him and by the precautions he took to guard royal visitors in London.

Three years ago Melville retired from Scotland Yard and was presented with a check for £2,000 raised by public subscription, and his name entered as the recipient of a generous pension from the Home Office. Now the people who contributed to the subscription and many of those who are indirectly paying the pension object to Mr. Melville's becoming a spy in the pay of his Majesty Nicholas II. At Scotland Yard one is told simply: "Mr. Melville is a pensioner, and as such we have no control over him. He is free to enter any service that he likes, and nobody can prevent him. We know nothing about his present whereabouts or his occupation."

Certain Russian immigrants reaching England without money have been passed by the immigration authorities, although they should have been rejected under the new Aliens act. They were passed when they declared themselves to be Social Democrats, and by replying to the following question: "Are the operations of the society directed against all governments, or only against the Russian Government?" "Only against Russia." "Admitted." The immigration authorities now find that they are overwhelmed with impoverished Social Democrats from Russia. In fact, nobody but Social Democrats seems to be emigrating from Russia just now.

An American Girl Tells of Audience with the Pope

ROME, March 10.—Although the Pope is to all the world one of its greatest citizens, and to some millions of persons the greatest, he is not hedged about with half the difficulties and obstacles that usually surround the minor royalty of some practically unknown Anthony Hope-like kingdom. Not that he can be approached by every one who wishes it, for, in that case, he would have very little time to bestow upon the affairs of the great Catholic Church; but it is safe to say that any one who wishes to see him and has intelligence and patience enough to unwind the two or three yards of red tape which stand in his way, can very readily find himself, as I found myself the other day, the possessor of that simple slip of white note paper which states that "Sua Santita" requests the pleasure of his company at an audience.

Naturally, my first question as, sitting at our hotel lunch table, I looked at the much-desired ticket, was the typically feminine one, "What shall I wear?"

"I believe it states on the ticket," replied the man at my right. "Yes—signori go in 'frack,' and ladies in black with veils."

"'Frack?'" I questioned.

"Oh, that's the Italian for evening dress. I don't know how it is about the ladies, but evidently they are very particular about men being in proper costume. I was at the American College the other day and overheard a conversation there between a rawboned person with a very strong American accent, and a distinguished prelate of the Catholic Church who had just obtained an audience ticket for him.

"'I suppose you have the regulation evening dress to wear?' inquired the distinguished prelate.

"'Well, no,' replied the American. 'I have a Prince Albert coat, but I ain't got any black pants. Got a pair of pale-gray ones, but I guess they wouldn't fill the bill now, would they?' and the distinguished prelate gently but firmly replied that they would not.

"Still," the man next me went on, "he probably borrowed some dress clothes from his hotel waiter and got along all right, and if you don't happen to possess a black gown, you can do the same."

"What! Borrow the waiter's clothes?" I questioned in dismay.

"Goodness! No. But you can borrow a black frock from somebody."

And so I did. That afternoon, arrayed in a dress kindly loaned, but very ill-fitting, and a black veil, I set off for the Vatican. Once arrived at the great Papal palace that nestles against St. Peter's, I descended from my cab and was received by a Swiss Guard, armed to the teeth.

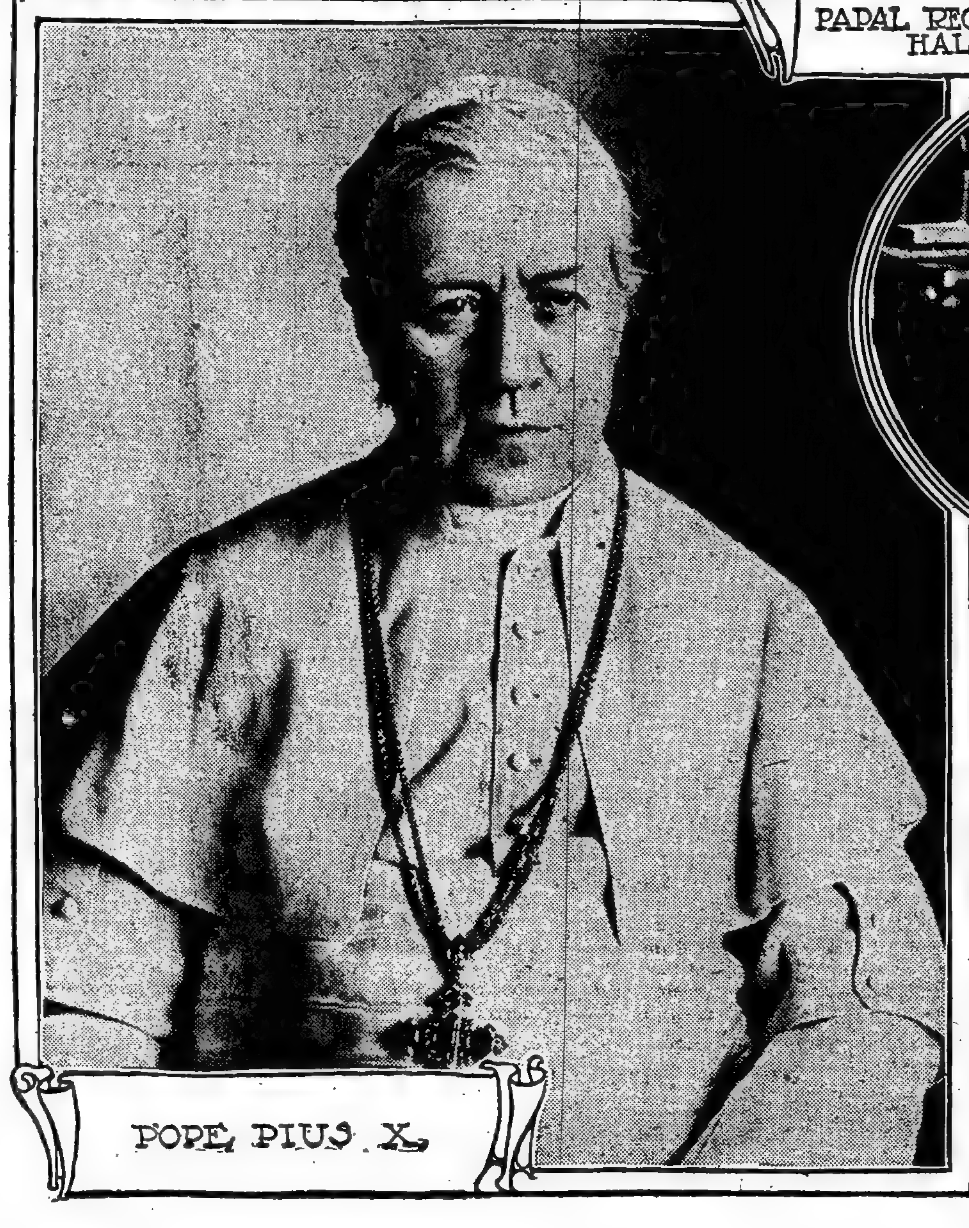
Now, to one who has never chanced to see a Swiss Guard before—and it so happened I never had—they are more than a little startling, not in themselves, for I am sure they are the most harmless people in the world, but because of their preposterous uniforms, which are of such a vividness as to make London's Beef-eaters seem quiet and demure by contrast. The Swiss Guards' dress is indescribable. You must see it to understand, but he who pictures to himself a large man dressed in a garment of alternate strips of yellow, red, and green, made up after a most mediaeval cut, and topped off with a large, shapeless parti-colored hat, will have a certain vague idea of their gorgeous grotesqueness. It is said that Michael Angelo himself designed their costumes, which, I suppose, should lift them far above the possibility of my humble criticism.

In the face of one of these guards I brandished my ticket, and was directed toward a staircase up which were toiling a crowd of black-veiled women and a few stray men, looking very strange by daylight in their evening clothes. Up and up we climbed, to be received at the top of each flight of stairs by a fresh Swiss Guard, who politely indicated a new flight to us. Finally we reached the top and were taken in tow by a flunkey in Papal crimson, who relieved us of our wraps and tickets and led us into the audience room.

PAPAL RECEPTION HALL



POPE PIUS X.

THE POPE IN HIS LIBRARY

It was a great place hung with red brocade, with a gilded ceiling, and a row of perhaps 150 red-backed chairs set all the way round the wall except at one place at the end, where the row was broken by a great black throne. Already, though the audience was set for 4 o'clock and it was then barely 3:30, many people had arrived and were seated uneasily on the red chairs—without exception the most hideously uncomfortable affairs I had ever sat in—and talking in low whispers. In the audience chamber, as on the stairs, the greater part of the crowd were women, and as one looked around the room, one saw one black-robed figure after another, with here and there the break of a man's white shirt bosom. Only once was this sombre monotony interrupted by a little white-clad girl, a small, frightened Italian child, who had come in clinging fast to her mother's hand, her stiff little mosquito net veil sticking out quaintly behind her.

Italians, French, Germans, and Spanish, whose gracefully arranged veils put the rest of us to shame, and above all Americans and English, sat about stiffly, looking at one another from underneath our eyelashes, and fishing out from their hiding places and hanging over our arms the rosaries and other relics with which all of us were armed. For, as all the world knows, whatever one carries to an audience is blessed by the Pope—even down to one's shoes and stockings, and few people fail to bring with them rosaries and crucifixes, which will always have a greatly increased value, sentimentally, because of the Papal blessing.

Some folk do not content themselves with a few rosaries, but carry to the Vatican a whole bagful and stick out to be blessed an arm hung with them thick from wrist to elbow, while other people bring with them more bulky articles—like the woman who sat at my side, holding on her knee a bronze St. Anthony as large as a good-sized baby.

Suddenly, as I was taking in the crowd with a roaming eye, some one near me uttered a stage whisper of "Hush! Something's going to happen!" and at that moment an official in evening dress entered and made us a sign to stand up.

Obediently the crowd arose and stood with bated breath and on tiptoe, waiting eagerly for something to take place. Five minutes passed, absolutely uneventful, and the lady with the bronze St. Anthony, tired of her heavy burden, sighed wearily and was just about to sit down again, when the official returned and made us another sign, this time to kneel. Now we had not so long to wait, and hardly had the old ladies of the crowd bent their joints painfully and creaked down to the ground when the Pope entered.

Surrounded by half a dozen Bishops and priests in black cassocks, his first appearance was doubly striking and impressive, clad as he was from his little skull cap to the hem of his long robe in pure white, a simple garment with a little cape and a wide white belt, and fastened all the way down the front with big white buttons. The only touch of color about him we noticed as he moved about holding out his hand for each person to kiss the famous emerald ring was the pair of scarlet shoes he wore.

Walking slowly around the edge of the room, he held out his hand in turn to each of the crowd, waited while the ring was kissed, and then passed on, a figure full of beautiful, sweet dignity. Now and then he paused a moment longer to say a few words to some one who attracted his notice. At one lady's request he wrote with her fountain pen some words of blessing on a paper she offered him and signed it with his name, "Pius X.," while the attendants looked with considerable suspicion at the pen, in its little black case, perhaps fancying it some sort of infernal machine.

Speaking of fountain pens, they tell a story of a man who, at a former audience, handed one to the Pope and begged for his signature. Complacently the Pope wrote the autograph and gave it to the man, and then, absent-mindedly, walked away with the fountain pen, to the dismay of its owner. This time, however, he returned the pen before continuing on his round.

At the little girl in white he paused again and said a word or two. This so increased the poor little thing's alarm—for she was already frightened almost out of her little wits by the tremendousness of the occasion—that she burst into tears and hid her face against her mother. Looking down at her, the Pope smiled so benevolently that I would dare wager if there had been no crowd present he would have attempted to console the little maiden on the spot, and, looking at his sweet, kind old face, one finds it hard to think he could fail.

At last all the tour of the room had been made and, pausing at the door, the Pope delivered a simple little benediction, and then, with his retinue and the servant who solemnly bore his red cloak and hat, withdrew. Then slowly the crowd moved toward the door and waited before it till it should be opened. Meanwhile, in low tones, they discussed the ceremony.

"Isn't he a wonderful old man?" I heard an American woman near me saying to her daughter. "He looks so good and saintly, doesn't he?"

"Oh, he's just a dear!" whispered the American girl fervently. "I just wish he was my uncle; I kept thinking of it all the time he was in the room. He'd make such a lovely uncle, I'm sure; he'd be so kind and good when I told him things, and he'd preach me little sermons in the sweetest way. I know he would; and yet somehow he'd always understand, and that is the reason I don't quite agree with you that he is a saint. I am sure saints never understand ordinary people, and I believe he would. No, he's human; but he looks just the best man I ever saw in my life, and yet, do you know," she went on ingenuously, "I don't think I should be afraid to talk slang to him!"

CATHARINE WELCH.

CIGARETTE SMOKING AMONG ENGLISHWOMEN NO UNCOMMON PRACTICE

ALL the world—that is, the American world—felt a bit of a shock when a cable dispatch announced last week that a first class carriage of a train running from London to Liverpool had a paper placard glued on the window announcing:

"LADIES' SMOKING."

Those who know their England, and especially their London, well, will not feel any particular astonishment, unless it is at the fact that a party of Englishwomen who wished to smoke on a railway train should think it necessary to ask for permission to do so or to advertise it. Englishwomen frequently smoke on their railway journeys if a party of friends are in a compartment by themselves. Of course, it is against the rules to smoke except in the smoking compartments, but English rules are made of elastic, and are frequently stretched to the breaking point. A woman, or a man, for that matter, who wishes to smoke in a non-smoking carriage can do so, provided the other occupants do not object or complain. A shilling tip to the guard makes that official blind.

In England it has long ceased to be a matter for comment when a woman smoked either privately or publicly. By privately I do not mean on the sly, for I have never known of an Englishwoman who made a secret of the fact that she was a smoker. That is the main respect in which she differs from the American woman smoker, for in this country it is still considered not quite "the thing" for a woman to take a cigarette, so she hides the habit, or attempts to hide it.

⁂

Calling upon an American girl recently she said to me:

"Do you smoke? They do say women smoke in England, and American women over there are taking up the habit."

"No, I don't smoke," I answered as calmly as though I had told her I did not take sugar in my tea; "do you?"

Finally she confessed that she did, adding, "that is, when I feel real devilish!"

"How funny!" I exclaimed. "Englishwomen smoke merely because they like it. They do not look upon it as smart nor 'fast,' nor immoral nor objectionable, unless it may be among persons who object to the smell of smoke. If you are under the impression that it is 'devilish' to smoke your ideas are provincial. Many Englishwomen do not smoke because they do not want to, or because they consider it a nasty habit, but those who do smoke do not conceal it or labor under the impression that they are either chic or degenerate."

It is a question whether it would not be good for this particular American girl and those like her to encourage them to smoke openly and take it as a matter of course, when they would undoubtedly drop the habit shortly, for, robbed of its supposed "devilish" aspect, it would immediately lose all charms for them; or, let them be convinced that it is not a "pretty" habit, and that breath and clothing smelling of tobacco are not attractive.

"What a pity," said the Frenchwoman, as she delightedly drank a glass of sparkling cold water, "that this is not a sin!"

It is the old story since the days of Eve—a hankering after the forbidden. Had it not been forbidden I can fancy our frail mother passing by the apple, merely remarking as she noted its beauty, "What a pity it is not a sin! If it were I should like to eat it."

⁂

Personally I never happened to have seen a woman smoke until I went to England about a dozen years ago. I was invited shortly after my arrival there to a reception, where I met a large number of men and women, many of them eminent in art and letters, and all of them moving in good society. A well-known man, the sort of English gentleman who has every grace and charm of manner, held out a cigarette case to me, saying:

"These are very mild. I always try to have some on hand to offer to ladies. Try one, will you not?"

I shook my hand laughingly, thinking it but a joke, and then I looked about the room and saw a half dozen women smoking.

And then—how I laugh at it now!—I made an excuse to go home very early, for it seemed to me I had somehow made a mistake, and had got into a crowd which was not exactly "nice," and I wondered what my dear old guardians out on the Wisconsin farm would think of me and say to me if they should ever know that a man had in earnest offered me a cigarette. I had gone to London and fulfilled the dream of my girlhood, for I had actually on this occasion shaken hands and talked with a great literary man, whose books I had read and loved from my childhood—and I had been offered a cigarette!

As I have said, this was in the long ago. It was not until I had lived in London two years that I could see a woman smoke without having a queer sort of feeling.

⁂

At the present time there is perhaps not so much smoking among American women as among Englishwomen, or it may be that there is quite as much, only that here the habit is concealed and abroad it is not. Given the occasion and what they may consider the "necessity," many American women are not above being a bit hypocritical. They will smoke their cigarettes behind screens, as they will drink their high balls from teacups, with spoon and saucer accompaniment. One would not precisely wish to say that this is creditable to them. The cigarette and the high ball, being considered in the light of a "sin," are attractive. Teach such women rather that they are not sinful, though they may have other disadvantages, and they will be given up in secret and perhaps never taken openly.

Some of the women's clubs in London have their smoking rooms. An Englishwoman being shown through a Chicago women's club said innocently: "You have forgotten to show me your smoking room. Where is it?" and created a sensation.

It may be said for the average American man that he has an objection to women smoking. Not so the Englishman. Many of my English women married friends have told me that they never thought of smoking till their husbands suggested it for the sake of companionship and good comradeship. An English husband and wife enjoying their after-dinner smoke over their coffee is not an unfrequent nor an altogether unpleasant sight in London.

Smoking in some of the most reputable restaurants is common, especially if a woman is accompanied by her husband or brother. Once an American man friend just arrived for his first visit to London took me out to dinner, where at a table in a high-class restaurant I suddenly noticed the blood springing to his face. He jumped up, stammering:

"I beg your pardon for bringing you here! I know you'll overlook my blunder, for I don't know London, and I thought this place was all right. Come, we'll find another restaurant."

"What is the matter?" I asked, following him out, bewildered.

"You didn't see those women smoking at the opposite table?" he inquired.

"I am not sure that I noticed," I returned, "but what about them?"

"Why, I thought it was a reputable restaurant."

"It is quite reputable, I assure you. I have dined there dozens of times."

"A reputable restaurant and women smoking in it!" he ejaculated. "I thought the Englishwomen were so shy and down-trodden!"

"Oh, they're like Truth—crushed to earth, they rise again," I answered. "What sort of looking people were at the table?"

"A young man, a young woman of perhaps thirty, and another one of possibly thirty-five or thirty-six. All thoroughly respectable looking; no make-up. In fact, I thought the women rather dowdy in their dress," replied the American.

"The young man was perhaps engaged to one of the women, and the third woman—whichever was the married one—was chaperoning the unmarried one. She might have been the elder. Whoever was married chaperoned the other. They are very particular about chaperoning here."

"But I tell you both women were smoking with the man," he retorted.

It was difficult for him to understand the situation—a woman not allowed to go unchaperoned and yet allowed to smoke, and openly. When one comes to think of it, there is something rather ridiculous in the situation which I conjured up to fit the case.

Yet in England we have this anomaly, if such Americans may wish to consider it. An unmarried girl or woman in good society does not usually go out with a man unchaperoned. She may, however, smoke a cigarette with him.

Not all English girls and women smoke by any means, but certain a goodly number of them do smoke, and do it most innocently and gracefully, and would be astonished at the idea of concealing it.

One of the funniest sights I have seen in London has been a prim, puritanical-looking elderly-young lady, whom the term "bachelor woman" could not possibly fit, but upon whom the old-fashioned title of "old maid" seemed to set so aptly that one felt she belonged to the Mary E. Wilkins style of Vermont old maids, calmly smoking and enjoying quietly her cigarette in her mother's drawing room. There is something pathetic in her attitude. Perhaps she has never once in her life talked naturally and frankly with a man, for she has been chaperoned for forty years.

But she enjoys her cigarette. It would seem but heartless cruelty to deprive her of it.

ELIZABETH BIDDLE.

ANOTHER NEW BUSINESS

DID it ever occur to you that one disadvantage of flat life is that it affords your family no burying ground?" said the mother of a large family of small children. "Oh, I don't mean for the immediate members," she laughed, in answer to her friend's shocked exclamation; "I mean for the children's pets. We have had a succession of canary birds, kittens, and dogs as pets during the time we have lived in our apartment, and when their time comes to depart this life there is absolutely no final resting place for them but the garbage pail.

"Of course the children feel dreadfully at such a seemingly heartless way of disposing of their loved ones. Imagine how you would feel if you saw your baby consigned to a garbage pail! Well, I suppose children have much the same sort of feeling for their pets; and as I like to consider their sensibilities whenever I can, I gave the matter much thought, and finally I found a way of getting our pet animals buried with the proper rites and ceremonies."

"Do tell me how you managed it," said her friend. "I've been in the same sort of fix myself."

"Well, you know, our laundress comes from Brooklyn, and in Brooklyn people—even washerwomen—live in houses and have back yards. She finally (in return for a modest remuneration) undertook the contract of acting as undertaker for our defunct animals, and they are now helping to fertilize her vegetable patch.

"I have also recommended her to other apartment dwellers, and she has acquired quite a clientèle among my friends. Her charge for burying canaries is a quarter; for cats and dogs, 50 cents, and now her undertaking business is becoming so extended that it bids fair eventually to pay better than washing."

Truly Scientific.

ONE virtue of an uninteresting book has been discovered by a Brooklyn physician. He says he tried to read a dull novel the other night, but soon found himself turning over the pages hurriedly. He claims that when he commenced to read his library was uncomfortably warm, but after rapidly turning about a hundred pages looking for bright things he gradually became aware than the room was getting cooler. Being, like most doctors, inclined to experiment scientifically, he consulted his thermometer and learned that when he struck long historical passages in the novel his lack of interest and skipping of pages reduced the temperature at an alarming rate. Just as he felt sure he was getting a congestive chill he turned to throw the book into the grate and saw that his fire had gone out.

THE PEOPLE THEMSELVES

In one of the towns it had been arranged that, when the big orators of the day had had their say with reference to politics, there were to be a number of entertainments of the side-show variety to be held on the common.

A pompous politician, who had served a term in the State Legislature, and was by reason of that fact on extremely good terms with himself, while endeavoring with a number of ladies to make his way through a dense crowd that surrounded one of the shows, found himself unable to proceed further because of a burly individual whom he could not thrust aside. Drawing himself up to his full height the politician tapped the offending one on the shoulder, saying as he did so: "Here! Make way there!"

"Who are you, that you should push me round that way?" demanded the native.

"A representative of the people, Sir!" exclaimed the politician indignantly.

The man grinned. "Oh, that ain't nothin'," said he. "We folks here air the peepul theirselves!"

Measuring the Player by a Proper Standard

LAWS in mechanics have an application in the science to which they belong, but it has not yet been satisfactorily demonstrated that the same principles have a practical bearing on the art of acting. This truth, which ought to be understood, is frequently overlooked. The strength of a beam is measured by its weakest point, but the measure of a man may more properly be determined by his strongest point in character. And it would be a safe rule generally to temper one's judgments on an actor's failings with a remembrance of his virtues. Estimates based on the mechanical law are apt to be misleading. Henry Irving, for example, through a long and useful career was frequently the subject of denunciation on the part of those who were unwilling to overlook his faults, and especially the peculiar mannerism of his vocal utterance. But it is reasonably certain that the offense was only a natural development of a somewhat heroic effort to overcome constitutional physical deficiencies. Here, then, was a specific case where a deeper understanding of underlying causes, while not sufficing to make the fault less objectionable, would have served to justify sympathetic endurance rather than impatient abuse.

Richard Mansfield's mannerisms are abominable, and, so far as can be determined, there appears to be no such physical defect as in Irving's case to palliate his offense. With a speaking organ that for breadth of tone, depth of feeling, and variety of expression has few if any equals on the stage, he has allowed himself to degenerate into tricks of voice which must try the patience of even his most confirmed admirers. He has other faults, too, the resort to statuesque posing, the employment of wholly mechanical means to gain dramatic ends, such as the rubber-ball elasticity with which through the earlier scenes of "Don Carlos" he seeks to enforce the suggestion of youthful buoyancy and spirit, but, these peculiarities aside, he is a remarkable artist, and no fair measure of his ability is possible to those who insist on giving his mannerisms primary consideration.

If our architects suddenly determined to proceed on a reversed rule in mechanics—if, instead of measuring the beam at its weakest, they took it at its strongest point, we would soon have all our houses tumbling about our ears. If we, on the other hand, insist on the application of the mechanical rule as it stands to our actors and our plays, where are we to look for the best examples? If Mr. Mansfield does not represent our theatric art at its very best, where are we to seek for such a representative?

No one—probably the actor least of all—could have been deluded with the idea that "Don Carlos" would prove a popular play. As theatregoers we are not so imbued with the love of philosophical preaching as to be willing to sit through five long acts of more or less inconsequential moralizing. And this early effort of Schiller is far from being of such a nature as to carry any firm convictions. Nor will it qualify as a drama of action in the class of ent. And in a period of pitiful dealing of personalities in the theatre, that is no mean ambition.

We might have wished that, in his devotion to the idea of presenting a new classic masterpiece each year, he had made a different choice, and to our mind there is little doubt that in the rôle of Posa or Philip he would have had more satisfying opportunity for his broad and expressive range. But such doubt does not in the least minimize the actual value of what he has attempted nor detract one whit from the sincerity of his purpose as accomplished.

One has only to bear in mind the character of the Prince as it projects itself through the imagination from a casual reading of the text and as it has been made to qualify in the ordinarily accepted method of its acting, to understand the keen, alert, original bent of this actor's mind. Don Carlos, a creature of contradictions throughout, weak, willful, and in no sense a being moved by any lofty passion, has been steadily projected to the ordinary mind as a figure of graceful appealing romance. It would have been a comparatively simple matter for Mr. Mansfield to have acted him in this vein, and he might easily have been made a replica of Prince Heinrich in "Alt Heidelberg." Looking away and beyond the superficialities of the accepted notions, however, Mr. Mansfield has sought out the heart of Carlos's mystery and illuminated the dark places with the light of his own penetrating perception. Seeing Mansfield in Carlos may not be a reading of Schiller by flashes of lightning, but it must be admitted that much that seems strange and incomprehensible in the text is made clear and understandable in the actor's suggestion of the Prince's neurotic degeneracy.

Not so long ago there was printed in these columns a description of the method of M. Antoine in securing an actor to play the rôle of Prince Heinrich in "Alt Heidelberg." He scoured the highways and byways of Paris until he happened upon a youth who in face and figure satisfied his ideal of how the Prince should look. Then the novice was transferred to the stage with instructions not to act, but to be himself. We have on our own stage Italians playing Italians, Germans uttering their own broken English in rôles that call for such a characteristic, Chinamen, Japs, negroes, and even Indians cast as themselves. But what becomes of the art of acting under such conditions?

In personality Mr. Mansfield was not a natural selection for a Heinrich. But his was the greater achievement, since he succeeded through sheer force of artistic suggestion in overcoming the difficulties of an individuality at variance with the rôle. So in Carlos, a part which will never be among his popular triumphs, the actor is most to be commended for what he has overcome in making the rôle of the Prince qualify as something tangibly, if, at times, disagreeably and painfully human.

From the dramatized cartoon to the stage representation of a painted masterpiece represents progress in degree conscience has received any especially painful wrench. In transferring Munkaczy's "The Last Hours of Mozart" to the stage an effective tableau has resulted, and there are occasional other bits of pictorial grouping in the piece which serve to make this entertainment both novel and pleasing.

Having said this much, little remains to justify serious comment. Mrs. Root has not succeeded, as the programme states, in arranging her episodes in dramatic form, and as a matter of fact for all save the most unsophisticated this pictured life of Mozart will be least satisfying just when it seeks to be most dramatic. Some conventions are respected that might better have been forgotten, for they are in every respect so trite, so commonplace, and familiar that they have long since lost any semblance to reality.

It would be hard at best to respect a villain with such a name as Schikaneder, and when it develops that this enemy of the great composer was no more adroit and plausible in his plotting than the arch conspirators of such classic dramas as "Why Women Sin" and "Why Girls Go Wrong," we lose our last vestige of patience with his easy dupe.

In both the drawing and the acting of the composer the chief mistake has been an insistence upon the sickly saccharine. Mrs. Root's pen drips only honey when the composer is its subject, and Mr. Kyle, taking his cue from the feminine essay in unqualified appreciation, presents us with a portrait that more nearly resembles a sugar image than a man. At worst, however, it is only a mistake in judgment on the actor's part. He has served a long and valuable apprenticeship, has natural and acquired gifts that justify respect, and needs only to develop a new perspective on his rôle to fashion it into something more reasonably appealing.

THE HIPPODROME.

Adele Von Ohl, a member of the Hippodrome chorus, and a good horsewoman, figures as the heroine in a new sensation this week at the Hippodrome, wherein will be introduced in "A Society Circus," Thompson & Dundy's herd of plunging horses, fifteen in number. The entire scenario of the jungle scene, the first in the second act, has been changed to permit of the introduction of the plunging horses. It will be recalled by those who have seen "A Society Circus," that Paul Pasky, (Edwin Clarke,) the prospective husband of Lady Volumnia, (Miss Rose La Harte,) is abducted by a band of gypsies, escapes through the mazes of the forest to the side of his fiancée. This has now been changed. Pasky, bound to a tree by the gypsies, is rescued by his bride, and both flee. The escape is discovered by the band which pursues on horseback. The chase leads across a lake, the big tank of the Hippodrome being utilized for the purpose. The pursuers are urged on by a young girl, one of their tribe, and the most daring horsewoman among them. She is the leader. The lake reached, she does not pause, but plunges in, the others following. Pasky, however, escapes.

BROOKLYN AMUSEMENTS.

MIRIAM JOHNSON AND CAROLYN EBERTS IN "THE LION AND THE MOUSE" HUDSON

This Week's New Offerings.

at the New Amsterdam Theatre to-morrow evening.

BENJAMIN CHAPIN IN "LINCOLN,"
a drama by Mr. Chapin, at the Liberty Theatre to-morrow evening.

"DIE NACHT DER LIEBE,"
a comedy by Maurice Baumfeld, at the Irving Place Theatre to-morrow evening.

TO-MORROW night Richard Mansfield begins his second week at the New Amsterdam Theatre in a revival of "The Scarlet Letter," which is practically a novelty, although it was seen at Daly's about a decade ago. Mr. Mansfield in the dramatization appears, of course, as the Rev. Arthur Dimmesdale.

The following is a schedule for the remaining performances of the week: Tuesday, "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde"; Wednesday, "Don Carlos"; Thursday, "Beau Brummel"; Friday, "King Richard III."; Saturday matinée, "The Scarlet Letter," and Saturday evening, "Don Carlos."

⁂

Benjamin Chapin's new character drama, "Lincoln," will be the attraction at the Liberty Theatre to-morrow evening. For many years Mr. Chapin has been known to the lecture platform as a reader of Lincoln's works and a delineator of his personal characteristics, appearing in a lifelike make-up of the President, and five weeks ago made his appearance as an actor in the first presentation of his play, "Lincoln," at Hartford.

The story of the new piece deals with Abraham Lincoln in the White House. The historic character of Lincoln is introduced in a little love story which in-sentenced to death. One of the interesting features of the dramatic tale is said to be the cleverness with which Lincoln proves the innocence of the loyal soldier and restores him to his sweetheart and establishes the guilt of the Confederate.

The last act of the piece is a representation of Lincoln and his surroundings on the evening when peace has been declared and closes with his start from the White House for Ford's Theatre, where he met his death at the hands of John Wilkes Booth.

The cast in support of Mr. Chapin includes Francis McGinn, David R. Young, W. H. Pascoe, Maude Granger, and Daisy Lovering.

As a testimonial to Harry Walden, the leading man of Mr. Conried's forces of the Irving Place Theatre, a new comedy, "Die Nacht der Liebe," by Maurice Baumfeld, will be produced for the first time to-morrow evening.

Kneisel's musical farce comedy "Papageno," with Lina Abarbanell, will be given Wednesday evening, followed on Thursday evening by the première presentation of "Ein nasses Abenteuer," (A Wet Adventure,) a farce comedy with music in four acts by the successful authors Krenn and Lindau.

LOTTIE WILLIAMS IN "MY TOM BOY GIRL" NEW STAR THEATRE

PLAYS THAT HOLD.

This is the second week of "Charley's Aunt" at the Manhattan and "The Greater Love" at the Madison Square. "Gallops" has a month to remain at the Garrick. Louis Mann and Clara Lipman are nearing the termination of their run in "Julie Bon Bon" at the Fields. Raymond Hitchcock in "The Galloper" remains this week only at the Garden.

MUSICAL ATTRACTIONS.

This is the second week of "His Majesty" at the Majestic. "Mexicana" concludes its engagement at the Lyric in two weeks. De Wolf Hopper in "Happyland" is nearing the end of his engagement at the Casino, as is "Humpty Dumpty" at the New York.

AT OTHER THEATRES.

"Young Buffalo, King of the Wild West," makes his first appearance at the Fourteenth Street Theatre to-morrow night.

"Way Down East," with a new scenic production, will be the popular attraction at the West End.

"In New York Town" is announced by the management as the offering for the American.

"Chinatown Charlie" comes to the Metropolis to-morrow night for a week's engagement.

"My Tomboy Girl," with Lottie Williams, will be seen at the New Star for the week.

At the Murray Hill, "More to be Pitied than Scorned" is the week's announcement.

"Across the Pacific" will be performed at the Thalia. A number of sensational effects are promised.

Frank Daniels in "Sergeant Brue" returns to the city at the Grand Opera House to-morrow night.

will appear in "Rip Van Winkle" at the Yorkville.

"The Black Hand" is the melodrama announced for the week at the Third Avenue Theatre.

Bringing Temple Dances from the Orient to Broadway

Hindu Types and Ceremonies in a New Jersey Girl's Novel Exhibition.

SOCIETY has discovered something new under the limelight. Out of the jaws of vaudeville a group of New York women who still keep a weary eye out for up-to-date novelties, have snatched a turn which they hope to make more or less of an artistic sensation. A set of Hindu dances performed by a New Jersey girl with a rather convincingly clear notion of what she is doing, constitutes this latest find.

The fascination of the Orient is eternal. Women's clubs that have sipped tea over pretty much everything from Sun Worship to Mental Science generally fall back on Eastern lore for things to be enthusiastic about. The "Road to Mandalay" is ankle deep with the papers of progressive reading societies.

Though Radha as a goddess is some six thousand years older than any of us, Radha as a dance on a Broadway stage has a fair claim to novelty. Moreover, her high priestess and exponent, Ruth St. Denis, seems interesting enough to win a hearing.

Miss St. Denis is a slender, fair-haired young woman fully six feet tall, who dances in Hindu costume with graceful Hindu posturings amid the braziers, altars, and incense fumes of a Hindu temple. She has extraordinarily long, flexible hands, and a general look of lithe tirelessness. Her chief dance, in which she appears as Radha, is ingenious.

It appears that Radha, one of the wives of Krishna, the popular and much-married favorite of Hindu deities, had a rather graceful way of rewarding the devotion of her faithful priests. On occasions when these temple worshippers had fairly outdone themselves in salaams and ceremonies before her image, this mysterious and spiritual lady used to enter into the idol, step down from the dais, and edify the elect with a dance that invariably bore some weighty message or advice.

It is therefore as Radha that Miss St. Denis has chosen mainly to present herself. When the curtain rises she is seen in the familiar seated pose of an Indian idol. Around her are censers and screens and the elaborate bric-à-brac of an Oriental shrine. Two or three scantily clad priests and temple attendants, who by the way are real Hindus, perform a series of incense burnings and prostrations. When they have worked themselves up to the proper pitch of ecstasy, the lights soften, Radha enters into her idol, and, stepping out of the cloud of incense to the sound of the Lakmè ballet music, proceeds to deliver her terpsichorean message.

Her text in this case is the renunciation of the senses. Jewels, bells, garlands, and bowls, manipulated in various silent poses, symbolize the five senses. Then comes a suggestion of unrest, of striving to overcome these fleshly attractions, and the end of the dance aims to express the victory that follows release from the bondage of the senses and the peace of attainment and liberation. Finally Radha resumes her position on the dais, gradually withdraws in spirit from her image, and the curtain falls on the rigid idol alone in the dim twilight of the temple.

Besides this temple dance, Miss St. Denis has invented two others of a more colloquial kind. The first, which she calls the Spirit of Incense, takes place in a humble domestic interior, and might conceivably be executed by the daughter of the house as an amiable diversion during her daily task of feeding the censers. In a dim-lit space surrounded with dark Indian stuffs, the dancer, wrapped in gray, scarflike garments, seeks by slow, lithe movements of the arms and body and soft shuffling steps, to suggest the melting spirals of green and purple smoke that rise from the braziers. The way she contrives to send long, undulating ripples down her hand and arm as she drops incense into the jars, is certainly striking.

The other dance she calls the Cobra. She appears on the stage in the nondescript brown rags of a typical fakir. On either middle finger she wears a huge emerald, which gives her exceptionally long, pointed hand a sufficiently serpentlike look. In the crouching pose of the snake charmer she makes her arms glide and crawl about her neck and body in endless soft turnings and twistings, pausing to let them seem to drink from a bowl on the floor, and finally lifting her hands high above her head and darting her pointed fingers forward in a quick movement which fairly makes one's scalp lift.

This Cobra dance only needs an old house corner of stained yellow stucco, a dirty awning, the blazing sunlight of an Indian noon, and an earthen jar or two on the ground to be as realistic a dash of Oriental atmosphere as one could ask to see.

The girl who devised these dances has never seen India.

"I got my first idea of the thing from the Streets of Delhi, at Coney Island, two or three years ago," she explains. "But besides endless reading, I have had the help and advice of every Hindu that ever came within my reach. At first they were very cool about it. They said these Oriental scenes had been done in this country in comic opera Midway fashion that disgusted them; but when they found out just what I was really trying to do they gave me all the help I wanted—and that was a good deal.

"It's no easy thing to get information about the inside of a Hindu temple. Few Englishmen ever get in. The immortal Mulvaney, who whiled away a spare evening as the incarnation of Krishna, is the only case of daring that compares with mine," laughed Miss St. Denis, "and you know it was only by all his wits, combined with the luck of a man on a spree, that he got out of it alive."

It is probably quite true, as Miss St. Denis insists, that we have no idea in the Western world of how much dancing really means in the Orient. In India dancing as a phase of expression is infinitely more developed than singing. An Indian nabob, when he wishes to spread himself on an evening's drawing room entertainment, hires a Nautch dancing girl at several thousand rupees, just as a New York matron might engage Melba or Caruso at the cost of a check that would be sure to be quoted in the newspapers next morning.

Dancing girls in the East are often immensely wealthy and enjoy all the prestige of our theatrical stars and opera singers. Dancing is, of course, one of the chief features of Oriental religious ceremonials and the temple dancers are trained from generation to generation with the utmost care and finish.

There are also fundamental differences in the dancing itself. When we think of dancing we usually think of a more or less energetic exhibition of clever gymnastics, of movements that are mainly remarkable because they go to extremes. High kicks, complicated steps, and lightning changes are the commonest elements of our stage dancing.

Now your Oriental cares little for this kind of thing. His idea of dancing is a slow, rhythmic succession of graduated movements that never jerk to extremes, that melt into each other by easy transition, and that impress one with an almost listless ease rather than by any suggestion of effort. Every part of the body co-operates with every other part, and one posture dissolves into another almost imperceptibly.

Furthermore, for the Oriental, dancing has real interpretive meanings. An Eastern dance is so expressive to an Eastern audience that it is almost like a song with words. Its symbolism is simple and immediately recognized.

If one understands Miss St. Denis aright, this is the kind of motive that pervades her work.

"Delsarte, the much ridiculed," she stoutly maintains, "is, in spite of all the silliness and stupidity that has been committed in its name, the best foundation of all truly expressive dancing. When I first began to study I went the rounds—Bonfanti for toe dancing, Marwig for Spanish technique, and Bossi for ballet. I never retained anything I learned from any one of them except general points of technique. They all have a method. The moment you commit yourself to any one teacher you are pretty sure to bear his stamp for the rest of your life."

After several years' self-development in dancing along her own Delsartian lines, Miss St. Denis spent two or three years on the stage in straight drama, most of the time with Mr. Belasco.

"I wanted some practical stage experience," she said. "When I began I was a bundle of nerves, impossibly agitated and restless in manner. I remember the first thing Mr. Belasco tried me in was the part of Mme. Dufrene, in 'Zaza.' You remember at the opening of the third act, as she finishes writing a letter, she has to sit alone and perfectly quiet for some two minutes until the maid responds to the bell. Well, to save my life I couldn't do it without fidgeting. Mr. Belasco simply remarked that I should never do in the world in that state, and made me an understudy. Then I set to work in earnest. It took me two years to get the repose I needed. But I finally had the satisfaction of playing Mme. Dufrene to Mr. Belasco's approval, and the change amazed me almost as much as it did him."

* * *

Miss St. Denis probably caught her stage manager's instinct from Mr. Belasco. With the help of her mother she arranges all the detail of her performances, working out the lighting and scenic effects. To see her at rehearsal patiently going through her dance for the seventeenth time with an overheated plate of incense in her hand, calling minute directions to three calcium-light men and listening to advice from half a dozen friends in front, is an object lesson in feminine energy.

Her theories about dancing are simple and to the point.

"All the motions one needs to study for dancing," she claims, "can be found in nature. Furthermore, there is a natural climax in all nature movements. The motionless waiting, the quivering crouch, and the final spring of a cat or tiger make such a climax. Also trees in a storm. At first not a leaf moves. Then come the first rustlings and stirrings and finally furious swayings and lashings when the storm breaks. All these things contain perfect suggestions for human movement.

"Take the invisible motions of the clouds at sunset; one form melts into another, while one is almost unconscious of a change. It is just these imperceptible progressions of movement that I try to catch in suggesting the wreaths of ascending smoke or in the undulating of my arms in the cobra dance.

"Flexibility, combined with great strength, as you find them in the tiger, for example, should be the dancer's ideal. No motion should be sharply abrupt. There must be no angles. A cat lies down in a series of curves. The rhythmic motion of a dance should similarly include only lines that never turn sharp corners."

Twenty-six women united last Thursday afternoon in giving a matinée of Miss St. Denis's dances for the pleasure of their friends at the Hudson Theatre. Among the twenty-six were Mrs. Ben. Ali Haggin, Mrs. Richard Mansfield, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Mrs. George A. Meyer, Mrs. James M. Townsend, Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, Mrs. Eliot Norton, Mrs. Paul Leicester Ford, Mrs. Edwin H. Blashfield, and Mrs. Orlando Rouland, whose husband is painting a series of portraits of Miss St. Denis.

BITS OF STAGE GOSSIP

MRS. FISKE came over from Philadelphia to attend the rehearsal of "Charley's Aunt" last Sunday night, but returned for her performance of "Leah Kleschna" in the Quaker City Monday evening.

The revival of the piece has meant no little strain and anxiety for Etienne Girardot, upon whom has fallen much of the work of selecting and rehearsing the cast. "Yet I have been told that I am playing the part better than I did thirteen years ago," said Mr. Girardot the other night. "If it is so, I account for it by the fact that I am living the 'systematic life,' week in and week out. I breakfast, ride, dine, and sleep according to an easy but regular routine, and only the rarest engagements are allowed to break in. In the old days I took no such care of myself."

The extension of the Garrick Theatre stock company means that there will be two companies next season under the direction of Charles Richman and Victor Mapes, one of which will remain in New York, while the other will be constantly on tour. A balance of forces can thus be always maintained. According to present indications, the new company is likely to include J. H. Gilmour, who has been playing in "Mizpah"; James Neill, who is with Crane in "The Senator"; Charles Harbury, Stanley Dark, Charles Butler, Doré Davidson, Harry Harwood, Herbert Ayling, and Theodore Kramer; also there is a chance of securing Maude Knowlton, Maggie Holloway Fisher, and Daisy Greene.

* * *

Clara Driscoll, who wrote the book for "Mexicana," is at work on a new opera for Christie MacDonald to use next season. The piece will have much the same atmosphere as "Mexicana," but will be of a different period. The chief scene is to fall in a melodramatic second act, representing the taking of the Alamo.

* * *

Anna Laughlin, who is playing Dolly Dainty in "His Majesty" at the Majestic Theatre, has had a rather interesting career of child parts. Her first appearance was as Arthur May in "Rosedale." Then she did little Eva for several seasons, and later played Little Lord Fauntleroy and Editha in "Editha's Burglar." Three years in vaudeville, during which she gave imitations of Mrs. Leslie Carter, were followed by seasons in "The Belle of Bohemia" in London and America, in "The New Yorkers" with Dan Daly, in "The Wizard of Oz," where she played Dorothy, and more recently a return to vaudeville.

* * *

Olive Temple, who plays Lady Thyra in "Mr. Hopkinson," which is soon to move from the Savoy up to the Liberty, was the Lady Thyra of the London company that originally presented the piece, though she did not create the part. She has also played the rôle through the English provinces. This is Miss Temple's first visit to America.

Olive Temple.

Incipient dramatists may take heart at the announcement that Robert Edeson is planning to give next season a series of special matinées of one-act plays by unknown American playwrights. The actor will play Strongheart next season and possibly a new play by Charles Klein in 1907. But wherever "Strongheart" may be playing next season, Mr. Edeson says he intends to get into New York for a number of afternoon performances of promising embryo playlets.

* * *

A matinée is to be given April 2 at the Hudson Theatre for the benefit of the Vassar Students' Aid Society. Three one-act pieces are to be presented—"The Watteau Shepherdess," a one-act operetta of eighteenth-century atmosphere, the words of which are by Harold MacGrath, and the music by Fred W. Jackson; "The Mallett's Masterpiece," by Edward Peple, author of "The Prince Chap," dealing with an episode in the life of a Grecian sculptor, and, finally, "The Land of the Free," by W. C. De Mille.

THE OLD MAN REMEMBERS

And a New Mansfield Romance is Promptly Developed.

A PLEASANT-FACED little gentleman at one of the Mansfield performances last week entertained vastly some one in front of him as well as his companion with an intimate reminiscence revealed in snug unconsciousness of the unwitting interloper. Under the device of a general survey of the house a glance discovered him the refined, gentle soul his soft voice and kind manner had forecast. His hair was slightly silvered, and the habit of geniality had set creases rather than wrinkles in his face where smile had laid their lines. Who might he have been or have not been?

"My dear," he said to his companion, "it's a curious thing about Mansfield. Did you notice with what spontaneity he played that act, with what alternating abandon and tensity? I have not seen other actors concentrate themselves more on a first night. Yet I saw him play the roguish Baron Chevrial at the Union Square Theatre twenty-two years ago, and he has not varied his performance by a breath.

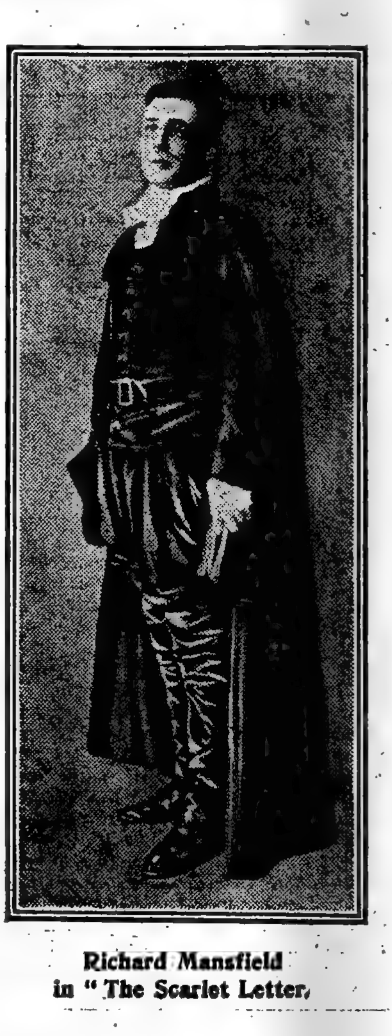
"He was a mere boy then. He used to come to our house often—we lived just off Washington Square. He professed to come and see me and admire our pictures, especially a Kneller which hung in the dining room, but he saw less of either of us, me or the Kneller, than he did of Fannie. I think the Winter we saw most of him was two years after his first great success. He was astonishing the town with a series of characterizations in a series of comic operatic failures.

"Well, great as were those parts of him which he gave the audiences, I always remember the Mansfield in our house as even more remarkable. Almost any afternoon between 3 and 4 he was apt to drop in and warm himself out of a frigid humor before the library fire. Fannie always had a cup of hot tea, and I had learned his favorite cigar. But the grand occasion was Sunday night. He was just a mite of an autocrat even then, and censored our dinner list as he now would a pile of applicants for his company. But great was the reward of the elect. He spent hours at the piano, improvising, running excerpts from half a dozen operas into fantastic conjunction, burlesquing Von Bulow, who was then the rage, or more softly accompanying his own voice in a Shubert song or an old English melody.

"I was reminded of it all when I heard Bispham the other afternoon. He used to be there. I think he and Richard studied together. I used to sit off across the room, but Fannie sat where she could see his face, and many a time while he sang I've searched her face for the meaning of the fixed, wistful gaze. And the whole happy coterie came to grief in such an absurdly ridiculous fashion.

"One afternoon I came home rather late and found Fannie, I rather suspected, in tears. She said Richard had been there. I said something sharp, but she would not allow one word of criticism. He did not come again.

"When Fannie married next Spring it broke up the household. I went to Paris. I doubt if he would even remember the name now. There's the curtain. Sh!"



Richard Mansfield in "The Scarlet Letter.

GETTING HER CHANCE

How One Young Actress's First Opportunity Came.

PAULA GLOY, the golden-haired, Teutonic-looking maiden who plays Sophie Weber in "The Greater Love," had a queer experience with Otis Skinner, when she first went on the stage. While Mr. Skinner was playing in Chicago some four years ago Miss Gloy, fresh from a dramatic school in that city, presented herself as a candidate for his company.

"No, no," said Mr. Skinner, kindly but firmly; "you are too small—altogether too small." And he almost patted her on the head. Miss Gloy, who had worked hard at the school, went home with a lump in her throat.

A week later came a telegram from Mr. Skinner. The girl who played Minna, the German peasant maid in "Prince Otto," had been suddenly taken ill and there was no one to fill her place. Miss Gloy went through the part the first evening in her own home dress in which she had hurried to the theatre. Next morning Mr. Skinner asked her to finish the week, and then he engaged her for the rest of that year and the following season. "You're rather good, you know, as far as you go," he said, when she reminded him of his first scorn of her height.

A good deal of stage experience can be packed into four years. When Miss Gloy appeared as the little Vienna maiden in the Mozart play last Monday night many people recalled vaguely having seen her before, without being able to say where. She played three seasons with Mr. Skinner in "Francesca," "Prince Otto," and "The Harvester," besides being for a time with Rose Coghlan in "The Greatest Thing in the World." She even had a season in light opera with Frank Daniels in "Miss Simplicity."

"I don't sing much," said Miss Gloy, in speaking of this venture; "but I found it doesn't matter in comic opera. I never liked the work, though." Later Miss Gloy played the little Irish girl, Kitty, in "The Serio-Comic Governess," with Cissy Loftus.

"A German girl this year, an Irish girl last year, and a French girl before that, I started out as a Chicago girl," explains Miss Gloy. "My first engagement was with some fellow-students as extra people in 'The White Horse Tavern,' while it was playing in Chicago. They engaged us at $6 a week. I didn't know then that big companies have a way of engaging a lot of extra people the first week, to make an impression, and then dismissing them if the piece seems to be a success. When, at the end of the first week, they paid me my six dollars and told me I shouldn't be needed again I was aghast. I was living at home, and for a whole week after my dismissal I used to go down town and spend every evening with a girl friend, so that my people shouldn't know I had lost my first stage position in seven days."

Paula Gloy.

This actress of four years' standing is to be married in six weeks to Sidney Irving, who is now playing with John Drew in "De Lancey." Both, however, expect to return to the stage next season.

A STAGE MANAGER'S MISTAKE.

PUSHING the right button at the wrong moment produced an instant of unexpected amusement for the audience at "Gallops", one evening last week. It was during the interval between the second and third acts. The orchestra was playing away at the entr'acte music, the house lights were up and the footlights were down.

All at once, without the slightest warning the curtain rose, revealing three young men in their shirt sleeves arranging stage whisky and glasses on the back of the tally ho coach, while a broad-backed man with his hat on seemed to be urging them to hurry. Before the trio had time to do more than turn an amazed look at the equally astonished audience the curtain quietly descended again.

PETER PAN'S CLOTHES

RECENTLY arrived London illustrated weeklies bring out the interesting fact that in the English production of "Peter Pan" Barrie's boy is garbed in an entirely different costume from that worn by Miss Adams at the Empire. Sketch pictures Miss Loftus with folded arms and jaunty air, looking straight out of a background of woods and costumed in leather jerkin, top boots, and tights of a Rosalind who might have just cried to a Phoebe "down on your knees and thank God fastingly for the love of a good man."

Over here what the boy Peter should be and look like was thought out by her whom it most concerned. In the result it is hard to separate, in thought, Peter Pan from his costume. It is easier to think of it as a natural part of the boy's being than as something put on. Its conception sprang from two ideas; that whatever its texture, the suit should be inseparable in thought from the youth itself, and that its color should reflect the out-of-door environment and be a part of the life in the woods. Miss Adams knew that in the Provence of France there grows an oak leaf that long retains its color and flexibility. A quantity of these was sent for with the idea of weaving them into an entire suit for Barrie's boy Pan, but it was soon discovered that, anywhere except in France, the leaf soon turns sere and brittle. Still the idea was clung to. John W. Alexander, the artist and mural decorator, was given the leaves and the material for the suit, and then allowed to set to work with his oils in the theatre and with the scenery before him. He ended by blending the raw material given him into a color suited to its environment.

Miss Adams was also unwilling that an ordinary calcium light, with its rays shining conspicuously from the stage wings, should express Tinker Bell—whom everybody now thinks of as human.

She had vague theories of possible effects by a certain manipulation of stage lights. The problem of Tinker Bell brought them to bear fruit. After days of experimenting with the electricians of the Empire Theatre there was devised a unique spot light effect, striking upon a wall or ceiling in a ball of light, without betraying its source, and representing—as perhaps nothing else could better do—the elusive fairy.

Musicians as Victims of the Dramatist

Mozart the Latest Sufferer---History Distorted and Invented to Make a Theatrical Holiday.

THE unscrupulous tribe of novelists and dramatists have never hesitated to play fast and loose with historical personages whenever it came in their way to do so. From Shakespeare down historical plays have been plays first and very doubtful history secondly; and actual personages who have figured in the drama have had their lineaments so twisted and their surroundings so shifted about that they would never have recognized themselves if they could come back and see their dramatic counterfeits. Musicians have always been severe sufferers from the novelists, who delight to help themselves from the mush of sentimental legends in which composers and performers seem destined to stew more than other men. The dramatists have dipped their ladle into it. Beethoven was a subject a few years ago in a play called "Adelaide"; now Mozart is the victim, as the hero of "The Greater Love," which is at present to be seen at the Madison Square Theatre.

One Heribert Rau concocted certain romantic tales much read in Germany a generation or two ago, in which Mozart and Beethoven appear as the heroes respectively, enmeshed in a web of sentimentality that would have aroused the ire of either of them. He called his stories "cultural-historical romances"; and of his Mozart tale Jahn, the biographer, observes that it has as little to do with culture as with history, and that his picture of Mozart's stay in Prague is a calumny upon Mozart's moral and artistic nature such as his worst enemy never undertook to rival. Mr. Rau is partly responsible for the queer situations that pop up about Mozart in "The Greater Love," it appears. The rest the dramatist devised; but apparently the facts as they are known and extant in the accounts of Mozart's life have very little part in this Mozart play.

The queerest of all the things in it is the one on which the whole play turns—the exhibition of Herr Schikaneder as the unscrupulous enemy of Mozart, and as entering into a nefarious scheme to make the first performance of "Don Giovanni" in Prague a failure, putting men into the gallery to create a disturbance and contriving that at the last moment the prima donna shall fail to appear.

This is strange history indeed. For Emmanuel Schikaneder, so far from being an enemy of Mozart and endeavoring to destroy the success of his operas, was his admirer and friend. It was he who, when threatened with bankruptcy in Vienna by the failure of his theatre, came to Mozart imploring him to save the situation by writing him the music for a fairy extravaganza of the kind that was popular for the moment in Vienna. He had known the Mozart family for years and was a fellow-Mason; so the good-natured composer, to help Schikaneder, took the absurd and almost unintelligible libretto that he gave him and transformed it by his genius into an immortal masterpiece, "The Magic Flute." And Schikaneder naturally did everything in his power to make it a success.

As for the production of "Don Giovanni" in Prague, Schikaneder had nothing whatever to do with it, and, so far as is recorded, was nowhere near upon that historic occasion. There were no hoots, no groans, and the opera was an unquestioned success there from the beginning of the overture on the first night. Mozart conducted it—hence he did not, from his study adjoining the theatre, hear the overture gradually triumph over the disturbance in the gallery. He was in fact extremely popular in Prague, and when he appeared in the orchestra was most enthusiastically greeted.

Schikaneder cuts no very dignified or alluring figure in the story of his relations with Mozart. He was more or less of a good-for-nothing, a "fakir" as a theatrical manager, a promoter of low comedy, a purveyor of hack librettos. But his shade may well make a protest against his being set up as a deep-dyed villain intriguing against the composer to whom he was so deeply indebted and whose success could have been his only interest.

* * *

The "famous Roman singer" Mandini plays a prominent and affecting part in this drama. But this personage, to whom Mozart is supposed to have been so passionately attached, never existed. No mysterious Roman singer rushed in at the last moment to save the performance of "Don Giovanni" in Prague by her perfect knowledge of the music when the prima donna failed to appear. None of the prima donnas failed to appear, and the cast, as it was originally distributed, gave the performance. No Roman singer could have had a perfect knowledge, or any knowledge, of the music before the performance, because there were only the manuscript copies of the parts in the hands of the artists concerned in it.

The Weber family did indeed exist as it exists in the play—Aloysia, Constanze, and Sophie; and there was an elder sister, Josepha, a bravura singer for whom Mozart wrote Astrifiammente's aria in "The Magic Flute," to the great trial of all subsequent representatives of that part. And it is true that Aloysia also had a voice—Mozart wrote for her, too, the part of Constanze in "Die Entführung aus dem Serail"; but that she was a tool in Schikaneder's persecution of the composer, as she appears in the play, is not true, even if her disposition was so selfish as to make her willing to be; for there was no persecution by Schikaneder. Aloysia, in fact, was Mozart's first love. The third sister, Constanze, he married.

As there was no Mandini, her departure from Mozart's life could not have been the mysterious suggestion of the Requiem; but the Requiem is another and a really romantic story.

People are so anxious to be told touching and sentimental things concerning great musicians that it is hard enough at best to keep the records straight about them; and such a play as "The Greater Love" helps to put them awry. Might not a playwright be in better business than hanging upon the coat tails of a great and beloved personality to be carried to success?

The offer of a contribution of $1,000 to the Philharmonic contained in the letter to THE TIMES last Sunday is a swift confirmation of a suggestion in this column two weeks ago. It was said then that a subscription to enable the members of the orchestra to spend the requisite amount of time on rehearsals for their concerts would be quite as useful as one to pay a conductor a very large salary for conducting. The gentleman who signs himself "C Sharp" wants the best quality of goods the Philharmonic can deliver, and he knows that this cannot be obtained with the present attitude of these gentlemen toward rehearsing. It is no doubt with many or most of them a question of giving up sources of income in the way of teaching or playing other engagements. He has acted on the assumption that it is as proper for music lovers to supply the Philharmonic Society with means to do this, in the interest of better performance, as it is to supply it with the means to engage a conductor whose salary cannot be met by the receipts from the sale of tickets. "C Sharp" has backed this belief to the extent of $1,000, which is a very substantial token of interest. There is nothing sensational or spectacular about the finishing of orchestral performances through rehearsals; but many will hope that the advent of the new conductor will be signalized by something that all the procession of great conductors has never quite been able to accomplish.

RICHARD ALDRICH.

THE KNEISEL QUARTET.

The fifth concert of the Kneisel Quartet will be given on Tuesday evening, March 27, at Mendelssohn Hall with the following programme:

Allegro molto moderato, from quartet in C, Op. 161	Schubert
Leicht und Lebhaft, from quartet in G minor, Op. 6	Frederick A. Stock
Quartet, B flat, Op. 130	Beethoven
Quintet, E flat, Op. 44, for strings and piano	Schumann

The assisting pianist in Schumann's quintet will be Alfred Reisenauer.

Frederick A. Stock, the composer of the second movement on the programme, is the conductor of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra of Chicago, a post to which he was appointed on Mr. Thomas's death in January, 1905. He had previously been assistant conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Stock, though a young man, now in his 34th year, has attracted some attention by his compositions. Two of his symphonic works have been played by the Chicago Orchestra; and this quartet, when it was played in Chicago recently by the Kneisel Quartet, to whom it is dedicated, was so enthusiastically received that after many recalls, to which the composer also responded, Mr. Kneisel repeated it. It is in the nature of a scherzo, with a contrasting calmer episode, and it is said to be "ingeniously fantastic and immediately effective." Mr. Stock was born in Prussia and studied at the Cologne Conservatory, where one of his teachers was Engelbert Humperdinck, and another Heinrich Zoellner. He accepted a position as first violinist in the Cologne Orchestra. When Theodore Thomas visited Europe, in 1895, he engaged Stock for a similar position in the Chicago Orchestra. In 1899, at Mr. Thomas's request, he began to conduct the accompaniments of soloists, and from that time on was more and more frequently called upon to relieve Mr. Thomas when occasion demanded. He was appointed conductor temporarily on Mr. Thomas's death, and the appointment was made regular this season for three years.

Beethoven's B flat quartet, which now stands second in the set of the last five great works of its class, was composed third in order, in 1825, after those in E flat and A minor, and was first played in March, 1826. It originally ended with a fugue "of immense length and still greater obscurity." Beethoven's judgment coincided with that of his publisher, Artaria, at whose request he composed a new finale for the quartet, and this finale was Beethoven's last completed composition. The fugue was published as a separate piece. The present finale was written in illness and misery, but it fully shows the life and exuberance that appear in the rest of the quartet, which was composed after his recovery from a serious illness, (celebrated in the "Song of Thanksgiving" of the A minor quartet.) The commentators have found in the B flat quartet the sense of rejuvenation of new strength and joy in life. Its six movements are full of outbursts of Beethoven's most capricious and boisterous spirit. More than any of the other quartets, it has quality of musical humor. There are rough and sudden changes of mood, the union of diverse and apparently incompatible musical elements, and an inexhaustible imagination plays through it all. Even the andante is marked "poco scherzoso," and only in the short but eloquent cavatina is the exuberance of spirit interrupted by sustained and fervent melody.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

Owing to the serious illness of Mr. Pochon of the Flonzaley Quartet, it has been necessary to arrange a different programme from that previously announced for its concert at Mendelssohn Hall on Wednesday, March 28, for the benefit of Auxiliaries No. 16 and No. 10 of Stony Wold Sanatorium. Mr. Arthur Whiting has kindly consented to coöperate with the three other members of the quartet in the following programme: Reger, Trio, Op. 77, in A minor, for violin, viola, and 'cello; Boccherini, Sonata, in A major, for violoncello; Beethoven, Trio, Op. 70, in D major, for piano, violin, and 'cello. Special interest attaches to the Reger trio, which has not been heard before in New York. It is the companion trio of the one played by the Boston Quartet at a recent concert.

The sixth and last symphony concert for young people for this season, under the direction of Mr. Frank Damrosch, will be given in Carnegie Hall on next Saturday afternoon, March 31, at 2:30 o'clock. The programme will be devoted entirely to Wagner. These concerts have had a successful season. Saturday's programme will be made up of selections from "Der Fliegende Hollander," "Der Ring des Nibelungen" and "Parsifal."

* * *

Mme. Etelka de Vida, a Hungarian soprano, will give a concert in the Waldorf-Astoria on Wednesday evening, with the assistance of Mme. Kiraly, pianist. She will sing airs from "Der Freischütz," "Oberon," "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin," "The Flying Dutchman," and "The Cry of the Valkyrie," from "Die Walküre." The second part of the concert will be devoted to selections, some for voice, some for piano, from Erkel's Hungarian opera "Hunyady Lászio."

* * *

At the fifth concert, on Tuesday afternoon, at the Hotel Majestic, the Mendelssohn Trio Club will play Beethoven's trio, Op. 1, No. 3, and Arensky's trio, Op. 32. Mr. Saslavsky will play the adagio from Mlynarsky's violin concerto, and Miss Elise Stevens, soprano, will sing.

* * *

At the Hippodrome to-night Victor Herbert and his orchestra will offer a popular programme. Miss Julia Allen of New York will make a reappearance after an absence of three years in "Ah, fors e lui," from "La Traviata," and "Variations de Concert," by Proch. Mr. Herbert's selection includes Litolff's "Robespierre" overture, the Rakoczy March from Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," Elgar's new "Chanson de Nuit," and a group from his own writings.

MUSIC AT BERKELEY.

Dr. Wolle's Symphony Concerts in the Open Air Greek Theatre.

Special to The New York Times.

BERKELEY, Cal., March 24.—Symphony concerts under the open sky, though in midwinter, and given in a Greek theatre by a university orchestra of seventy musicians, before audiences of four or five thousand people—such is the new thing which the University of California has devised.

Last September Dr. J. Fred Wolle, formerly of Bethlehem, Penn., was called by the University of California to fill its newly established chair of music. Prof. Wolle at once organized a university chorus of three hundred student singers and set to work on a year's preparation for Händel's "Messiah." He organized a student orchestra, and he offered courses in harmony and composition. The next undertaking was the establishment of a university orchestra of professional musicians. As concertmeister, Giulio Minetti of San Francisco was appointed.

For the opening concert of the series, at the Greek Theatre on Feb. 15, more people came from San Francisco to Berkeley than had ever listened to a symphony concert in San Francisco. For the second symphony concert.

This first series will consist of six concerts. There are four rehearsals each week, that is, eight rehearsals for each of the symphony concerts. On March 1 three times as many persons gathered in the Greek Theatre as had ever heard a symphony concert in California. The orchestra is ranged upon the immense stage of the Greek Theatre; for a background is a stately Doric-columned temple front; overhead the blue sky of California midwinter, and all about a great forest of eucalyptus and cypress trees, with a glimpse between the branches of the green Berkeley hills, rising steeply behind the theatre. There is nothing to intrude on the music, no sound but murmurs now and again from the high treetops, or the call of a bird as it wings its way above the theatre.

CONDUCTING AT THE OPERA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to convey to you my appreciation of your excellent article in to-day's TIMES on the past opera season. Your defense of Mr. Hertz against the disparaging remarks of Mr. Conried gave me particular pleasure. Mr. Hertz's work during the past season, especially in the last Nibelungen cycle, deserves the recognition of all lovers of Wagner opera. If Mr. Conried wishes to make any changes let him start with Mr. Franko, whose conducting, particularly at some of the Sunday night concerts which I was unfortunate enough to attend, was simply execrable.

Your remarks about the poor stage management and the occasional ridiculous blunders in scenic effects were also very much to the point. A MUSIC LOVER.

JAN KUBELIK'S DEVOTION.

His Wife His Chief Interest—She Will Travel with Him.

Jan Kubelik will be one of the happiest men in America when in a few days the Countess Ckazy-Czell, his wife, will join him at Los Angeles, to accompany him until he returns to Bohemia in May. Those who know the violinist tell of his great love for his wife and constant fretting in recent months because he could not be with her. Her haste to go to him as soon as she could, even though she had to leave her twins and the newest baby far away in Bohemia, shows how his devotion to her is reciprocated.

It is told of Kubelik that when he found that it would be impossible for his wife to accompany him to this country he wanted to make arrangements to put off his visit for another year, and to spend this season in Europe; where he could be near her. When he left her in London he became downcast, and since has been in a constant state of depression that resisted all attempts of Americans to entertain him.

When Christmas time came around, Kubelik seemed particularly lonely. Efforts were made to cheer him up, and several entertainments were arranged for him. He refused to go to them. He said that his wife was thinking of him in Bohemia, and that she was probably lonely and ill, and he could not take pleasure while this thought was upon him. So while others were enjoying themselves he spent his evenings alone in a New York hotel, with only his fiddle for his companion, playing sometimes into the morning.

On the road his first anxiety when he would arrive in a city was to see if any letters or cablegrams had arrived, giving news of his wife and family. When he finally received word that the stork had visited his castle and that his wife and baby were doing well he was a very happy man for a time. Then he became lost in profounder gloom than ever, and nothing would do but that his big secretary, Carl Junkerman, should go posthaste to Bohemia to persuade his wife to come to him as quickly as possible.

The Countess left New York soon after her arrival to make her long journey to Los Angeles, the first place at which she could catch her husband. It had been intended that she should bring her children and that the whole family should go to Australia at the end of the American tour, but that plan was abandoned and the couple will go back to Bohemia in May and wait until next September before setting out for the South Seas. It is a good wager that Kubelik will not go then without his wife.

The Oratorio Society has engaged Gwilym Miles as bass soloist in Saint-Saën's "Samson and Delilah," to be sung Tuesday evening, April 3, at Carnegie Hall, under Frank Damrosch's direction. He will replace M. Borde, previously announced, and will sing the music of Abimelech, the Philistine, and of the High Priest of Dagon.

The reappearance of Ben Davies, the English tenor, is expected to insure a vigorous and dramatic interpretation of the music allotted to Samson. Miss Janet Spencer, the contralto soloist, will sing Delilah's enticing and passionate music, which, besides the familiar aria, "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix," contains several other striking numbers.

* * *

Georg Henschel, composer, conductor, and teacher, who has been a member of the Faculty of the Institute of Musical Art, New York City, this year, will sail March 31 for his home in Scotland. Mr. Henschel will be at the school again next year, commencing his duties in October, when the school reopens, and remaining until some time in March.

Campanari and Bonci

Something About Hammerstein's Conductor and Tenor.

THE passionate personal press agent is already at work on behalf of the people who are engaged, or are said to be engaged, for Mr. Hammerstein's opera projected for next season. Leandro Campanari, who will be one of the conductors, and Alessandro Bonci, the tenor, are the immediate subjects of attention. Leandro Campanari is a brother of Giuseppe Campanari, the Italian baritone at the Metropolitan Opera House, and he belongs to "one of the oldest patrician families of Venice," and was born in Rovigo, Oct. 20, 1859. He is by profession a violinist, and in his boyhood days was a prodigy. At the age of 12 he played in London under Julius Benedict, and later he was associated with Franco Faccio, the conductor, who the Italians are fond of saying was driven to insanity and an early death by his devotion to Wagner's music. Campanari came to America in 1882, and joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra as one of the first violins; his brother Giuseppe, who was a 'cellist before he found that he had a voice and a talent for acting, also had a place in the Boston Orchestra. Like many of the leading violinists of that organization, Leandro was occasionally invited to play solos with the orchestra. He then became head of the violin department of the New England Conservatory of Music, and conducted some minor performances. In 1886 he went back to Europe, but returned in 1890 to accept the place of violin teacher and orchestral director of the Cincinnati College of Music. Since 1896 he has been living in Europe, and, it is said, has divided his time between Milan, Paris, and London. He has conducted symphony concerts in Milan, in which he gave the first performances in Italy of a number of orchestral works, such as Dvorak's "New World" symphony, Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherezade," Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic" symphony, and Wagner's "Faust" overture. Latterly he has conducted the Milanese Orchestra at the Imperial Institute in London. He has not been without experience as an operatic conductor, and has fulfilled that function in Milan, Venice, and Genoa.

Alessandro Bonci is the one of whom Lilli Lehmann in her book on singing, published in 1902, spoke thus:

"Recently the little Italian tenor Bonci has won my hearty admiration for his splendidly equalized voice, his perfect art, and his knowledge of his resources; and notwithstanding the almost ludicrous figure that he cut in serious parts, he elicited hearty applause."

He is at present one of the most famous tenors in Europe, winning renown first outside of his native country about five years ago, when Mme. Sembrich engaged him to sing with her in her Italian opera season in Berlin. Like so many others of his kind, he came from humble circumstances. His father was a laborer with a large family, and the boy sang in church to earn something toward their support. When he was 18 years old he went to the conservatory founded by Rossini. Twelve years ago he made his first appearance in opera in the small part of Fenton in Verdi's "Falstaff." This was in the Teatro Reale in Parma. He was engaged then for La Scala in Milan and was successful there as Faust. He has since then sung in St. Petersburg and in London, as well as in other capitals, and has continually added to his fame as one of the most excellent of Italian tenors and a singer of the older perfection of method now possessed by few.

Last Autumn Bonci attracted attention to himself outside of musical circles by eloping with the daughter of a friend in Florence, although he had a wife and four children.

The Executive Committee of the Philadelphia Orchestra Association has re-engaged Fritz Scheel as conductor for a period of three years. In the Spring of 1900 the Philadelphia Orchestra was organized with Mr. Scheel as conductor, which position he has held without interruption. For the last two seasons he has been engaged on an annual contract, so his present long-term engagement will be regarded as evidence of Philadelphia's appreciation of his work.

Earned Spurs in America

Rudolph Ganz, Though a European Pianist, Never Had a Career Abroad---Handicapped Here by Ignorance of English.

AN artistic temperament that refused to obey parental authority and after years of struggle came out, is possessed by Rudolph Ganz, the pianist from Chicago, who gave his first recital in New York last week. Mr. Ganz is known as a Swiss, but so far as his interests and his career go, he is an American. He never had a career in Europe, for within a month after he had made his début in Berlin he had been engaged to go to Chicago, and since then he has traveled throughout the West, until he has made a reputation that is purely American. He is married to an American, a sister of Arthur Forrest, the actor.

His fate would have been far different had his father ruled his career. It was not intended that Mr. Ganz was to be a pianist. To the practical sense of his father, a business man of Zurich, in Switzerland, where the pianist was born twenty-seven years ago, music was good for pastime and idle hours, but it was not to be considered among the serious things of life. And so the boy, who at two years of age had kept time to music with feet and hands, and at twelve, despite discouragements, had begun to compose, was kept grinding at a desk in school, learning the things that were to fit him for a business life—and that were drugs to his mind.

Mr. Ganz told something of himself while in New York. He has no feeling except of love and respect for his father, who, he knows, acted for the best. He is inclined to laugh when he looks back now and to take the parental opposition philosophically, as something that was necessary to bring out his best efforts.

"From the time I can remember anything I always loved music," said Mr. Ganz. "My mother tells me that when I was two years old, if I heard a band or a piano or anything playing, my hands and feet would be set going in time with the music. My mother liked it, but my father never encouraged me to think that music was good for me. He was a business man, and he wanted me to go into business.

"Still when I was six years old I was permitted to have some lessons on the piano and also on the 'cello. In fact, the 'cello was the first instrument I played, and now I play the organ and 'cello in addition to the piano. I was happy in getting the lessons, because that satisfied a great longing.

"I was 16 before I had a chance to study seriously. Up to that time my father had allowed me to spend only an hour a day upon it. The rest of the time I would have to study in the school and prepare myself for a business life. My father told me that when the time came I should be sent to France, and there enter into trade. But I did not care anything about that, and I did care for the music, and so at last my father saw he could do nothing and told me that he would give me one chance.

"'I'll let you study music for a year,' he said, 'If at the end of that time you cannot do something in it, then you must settle down and go into business.'

"So he sent me away to study with my uncle, who was in the conservatory at Lausanne. I did not have a good time there. I was anxious to do much in a year and worked hard, but my uncle did not think much of me. Out in the class sometimes, before the other pupils, he would say scornfully:

"'That wants to be a pianist!'

"Sometimes he would make me cry with his sharp remarks because I would feel that after all I would not be able to succeed and that the tradesman's life was the one I would have to lead. But when the end of the year came around and I had my chance I showed the result of my work, and I was able to make enough of a success to convince my father. So I was allowed to go on studying. I was sent to Berlin, and for the first time I had an opportunity to study composition. I had a good master in Urban, under whom Paderewski and Hofmann studied.

"At last, five years ago, at 22, I made my début in Berlin with the Philharmonic Orchestra. I had the honor not only of being the piano soloist, but the orchestra played my symphony. But it was not all so smooth sailing for that night. Almost at the last moment Mr. Busoni refused to conduct my symphony. He said I must conduct it myself if it was to be played. He thought it was too modern."

"It was from that one concert that I got my chance to come to America. Dr. Ziegfeld was there at the time and was looking especially for a piano instructor for the Musical College in Chicago. He opened negotiations with me and within a month I had made a contract with him to come to America and take charge of the piano instruction at the institution. When he made the agreement he did not know how old I was. When I told him I was only 22 he was amazed and wanted to modify the contract. He said it would never do to put one so young in charge of such important work, no matter how competent I might be. But I insisted that I would be able to give satisfaction, and so I had a trial.

"It was a very difficult thing to do to come here and teach, without having any knowledge of English. When I first arrived in Chicago I did not even know how Americans described the keys of a piano. I was compelled to ask my pupils if they understood French or German, and I found that few of them did. However, I worked hard, and at the end of three months I had sufficient command of English to make myself understood. After that I had no dificulty."

Mr. Ganz paused a moment, and then said:

"I had a great deal of help from an American. I met Mrs. Ganz in Berlin, where she was studying singing. She it was who made me write my symphony, and she helped me greatly in my duties in America."

Mr. Ganz, while at the Chicago institution, played at concerts and recitals, and made several tours of the West, in which he became well known. His travels took him as far West as San Francisco. He ended his connection with the college last Spring, and this season started on a three years' concert tour. One of the conditions made for the appearance of Mr. Weingartner as conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra in Chicago was that Mr. Ganz should be the soloist at a concert in New York, and so he got his introduction to this city.

VIEWS OF THE OPERA SEASON.

What the New York Critics Say of the Musical and Artistic Results.

From The Tribune.

MR. CONRIED certainly made an excellent effort to carry out these ideals at the outset. His good intentions in respect to the management of the stage were shown by the engagement of Messrs. Fuchs and Lautenschläger, but they failed for several reasons, chief of which are those that now seem to him "inevitable." There was no time for rehearsals. But why was there—why is there—no time for rehearsals? Because no money is to be made by rehearsals, whereas rehearsals cost money. Ultimately the better performances which might result from adequate rehearsals would bring in their reward at the box office, but the receipts are practically as large as they can be, even with almost nightly disregard of the obvious provisions of the law concerning the freedom of the aisles in theatres; so, Cui bono? Then performances outside of New York during the season were to be abandoned, but now Mr. Conried says it is only the eighth performance each week which enables him to make money. Why sacrifice $90,000 or $100,000 each season to give better opera to a public which is pleased to give $750,000 for the opera as it is? To those whose opinion Mr. Conried has asked this might seem a commercial proposition simply. Smaller profits and better art would naturally be their suggestion; and this would be no more than an expression of confidence in his honesty when he proclaimed that he was not as other managers are—mercenary wretches who would present any kind of a representation which would put money in their purses. Yet we have had "Die Fledermaus" and "Der Zigeunerbaron," and for the latter "Don Giovanni" was slaughtered.

From The Sun.

Is it any wonder that in the hands of Heinrich Conried, who has over and over again demonstrated that he is utterly and hopelessly incapable of perceiving anything but the dollar part of it, the opera has become more expensive and less artistic than it ever was before?

Dollars, dollars, dollars! Has any one ever heard the present manager of the opera talk about anything else? His report to his Directors was made public a few days ago, and the sum and substance of it was a boast that Mr. Conried had found out how to make opera cost $10,000 a week more than it ever did under Mr. Grau. That is indeed something to be proud of, is it not?

But what does the public get in return? It gets exactly what it wishes. Let there be no self-deception on this point. Mr. Conried gives the public Caruso, and this is all the public desires. * * *

Mr. Conried points with pride to the vast sums expended on the betterments of the stage. But again what does the public get? It sees things going at sixes and sevens, just as they did under Grau. The stage management, which was to be admirable, has been execrable.

From The World.

If the artistic results of the opera season just concluded had been as gratifying as the financial outcome the opera-going public would join vociferously in the chorus of praise that has been sung about Herr Conried's ears by his board of profit-sharing Directors. But there have been a great many complaints lodged against the season of opera just closing, and against the men who have steered its course. As Mr. Conried assumes personal charge of the direction of artistic affairs at the Metropolitan these charges are laid at his door. As a whole, the opera season is hardly one to gloat over, viewed solely from the side of artistic merit. It is hoped that the coming one will be better. Financially the past one was brilliant, but after all, art has another side than that of the box office.

From The Staats Zeitung.

If the whole is considered with that objective view that can be gained only in a retrospect, a long series of excellent representations must be credited to the management. Against them stand not a few that were unsatisfactory and could have been better. * * * Mr. Conried must not neglect to consider how remediable deficiencies shall be avoided in the next season. Before all else, the personnel of the women singers must be strengthened and this strengthening must not be merely in numbers. When rôles were filled in a wholly unsatisfactory way, it was almost always a woman's rôle. While promising débutantes need not be excluded entirely, incompetent applicants ought not to be taken as an excuse for ruining a part. It would be better to ascertain their incompetency before the performance. That ought to be possible! And it must be said that in regard to the filling of minor women's rôles the opera school, which has now been in existence three years, has practically furnished no recruits at all.

That the unsatisfactory filling of many important women rôles is attributable to an improper parsimony on the part of the management, is a reproach not substantiated by the report to the Board of Directors. * * * Almost without exception have the expenses of the season of 1904-5 been greater than in the previous ones.

From The Evening Post.

While Mr. Caruso has played a very large part in the opera season, it would be a huge mistake to suppose that he alone drew crowded houses. * * * Caruso did not sing in any of the Wagner operas. Yet some of the largest audiences of the season were drawn by some of the Wagner operas, notably "Tristan," "Meistersinger," and "Parsifal." * * *

Gwylim Miles, Baritone. Ben Davies, Tenor.
Who Will Appear with the New York Oratorio Society in Carnegie Hall, April 3d.

Mr. Conried gives the public what it wants. How about Mr. Hammerstein's giving only Italian and French operas? Will he give the public what it wants?

From The Evening Mail.

If the Metropolitan Opera House Directors were personally more interested in the artistic side of the season and less in the social features, they would make better conditions both possible and compulsory. That they do not do this is simply a sign of New York's immaturity and provincialism in art. If Mr. Hammerstein's promised operatic venture were likely to put spurs to either these gentlemen or Mr. Conried in this regard, it would be welcomed with more enthusiasm.

Granting these unfortunate conditions, however, it must be said appreciatively that Mr. Conried's results have been on the whole astonishingly good. It takes a manager of force and versatility to accomplish what he has done.

IN THE ORGAN LOFT.

THERE are to be two new singers this year at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. The soprano joined the choir on Sunday, the 11th. He is Edwin Archer, from Brooklyn, and the congregation is greatly pleased with his singing. The young soprano gave for his first solo "O for the Wings of a Dove." A special appropriation for soloists was made at the church this year.

Harry L. Reed, one of the first tenors of the Musical Art Society, is to be the new tenor of the church, and the choice was made only after trying many voices. Mr. Reed is prominent in oratorio and concert work and came originally from Springfield, Mass.

J. Christopher Marks, organist of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, is preparing special programmes for the coming church festivals. On Palm Sunday, April 8, "From Olivet to Calvary," by J. H. Maunder, will be given, and there will be a programme for Easter which it is promised will be one of the best the church has ever had. Clarence De Veau Royer, violinist, and Harold Hill Bemis, 'cellist, will play. One of the recent new features of the church musical service is a threefold "Amen," following the benediction. This is Mr. Marks's composition. It begins with a full volume of sound, gradually growing softer until the final "Amen" is not more than a breath given with the echo organ.

⁂

Miss Kate Chittenden, for many years organist of the Calvary Baptist Church, one of the few women in New York to hold such a position in a large church, has resigned, and E. M. Bowman of the Baptist Temple, Third Avenue, Brooklyn, is to take her place. Miss Chittenden has been highly esteemed at Calvary Church, and not long ago was presented with a tangible evidence of its members' appreciation. Miss Bessie Bowman, daughter of the new organist, is to be the contralto soloist of the church.

⁂

The Church of the Incarnation (Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street) holds one of its fine monthly musical services this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The church is always crowded for these services and the large gathering comes early to be in time for the prelude. W. R. Hedden, organist and musical director of the parish, has arranged to give to-day Sir Arthur S. Sullivan's oratorio of "The Prodigal Son." Violins will assist the organ, H. Conrad being the first violinist. The instrumental postlude will be the introduction to "The Passion," Haydn. A cordial invitation to the general public is extended for these services.

⁂

The fifth of the series of organ recitals at the Church of the Divine Paternity (Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street) will take place on Thursday at 4 o'clock. Mr. Andrews will give three of the numbers on the organ and the others will be by Miss Jennie Hebert. Miss Florence La Selle Fiske, contralto, and Gwylim Miles, baritone, will assist. Following is the programme:

Second organ concerto....................Handel
Mr. Andrews.
Baritone solo.
Mr. Miles.
Organ—
Second Trio Sonata....................J. S. Bach
Andantino in D flat....................Lemare
Chromatische Fantasie....................Thiele
Miss Hebert.
Contralto solo.
Miss Fiske.
Organ—
Fiat Lux....................T. Dubois
In Paradisum....................T. Dubois
Mr. Andrews.
Contralto solo.
Miss Fiske.
Bass solo.
Mr. Miles.
Organ—Grand Choeur, Op. 84.....A. Guilmant

The second and last service of the season of the American Guild of Organists will be held at the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, (corner Lafayette Avenue and South Oxford Streets,) Brooklyn, on Tuesday evening of this week, March 27, at 8 o'clock. It will be under the direction of John Hyatt Brewer, organist of the Church and Warden of the guild. Warren R. Hedden, Sub-Warden of the guild and one of its Fellows, and Gerrit Smith, Associate of the guild, will give the voluntaries. The choir of the church, a quartet and chorus of forty voices, will sing. The soloists are Miss Edna Burton, soprano; Mrs. Tirzah Mamlen-Chapman, contralto; Barklay Dunham, tenor, and Hugh Williams, baritone. The "Finale" of Mendelssohn's Organ Sonata V. will be the postlude by Mr. Hedden. The first service of the guild this season was held at the Church of the Incarnation, New York. A new chapter of the American Guild of Organists is being formed in Boston, and there is already a flourishing one in Philadelphia.

At the organ recital of St. Bartholomew's Church on Wednesday evening at 8:30 the solos will be by the new baritone of the church, Frederick Wheeler, "Gounod's "There Is a Green Hill Far Away" and Rossini's "Lord Preserve Me Uncomplaining."

⁂

At the regular morning service at St. Bartholomew's to-day the anthem will be "Judge Me, O God," written by Mendelssohn for the Berlin Cathedral. It will be sung in eight parts by the chorus unaccompanied. Mr. Stokovski's prelude will be "Allegretto," from the ninth pianoforte sonata of Beethoven. Confirmation is to be administered at the 4 o'clock service, which will to some extent alter the usual musical programme. The organ prelude will be the prelude to "Le Deluge," Saint-Saëns, and the postlude "Toccata," Widor.

⁂

"The Canticles of the Monks" will be the musical address by the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield at the 4:30 vesper service at the Old First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue, Eleventh and Twelfth Streets.

One of the New York suburban churches which is ambitious to have good music and is getting excellent results from a large volunteer choir with special soloists for special services is St. James's Church, (Episcopal,) Fordham. The Rev. Dr. De Witt L. Pelton is rector of the church, and Daniel R. Philippi the new organist and choir master. There is a vested choir of men and women of about thirty voices, and in addition to this two auxiliary choirs, one of boys and the other of girls. The latter is a new feature, organized about Christmas, and is doing excellent work. It has not yet been vested, but it is expected to be by Easter. There has been much study given to the matter of the vestments for the St. Cecilia choir, as that of the girls is known, and they will probably eventually be robed in red or in blue. Whether this will be accomplished at first is not certain. The girls range in age from 11 to 15. There are fifteen of them, and the same number in the boys' choir. All the choirs are working hard on a programme of elaborate Easter music.

St. James's holds its regular monthly musical service this evening, when it will be assisted by Master William Craven, the soprano soloist of St. Thomas's Church, Fifth Avenue, and by Miss Clara S. Beach, violinist. Handel's "Angels Ever Bright and Fair" and Ambrose's "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" will be two of the soprano solos for the evening, with chorus, violin, and organ. "Ave Maria," Bach-Gounod, will be the solo, with violin and organ, for the offertory. Mr. Philippi will give King Hall's "Melody," assisted by the violin for the prelude, and the postlude will be Richter's Fugue, A minor.

The Madison Square Presbyterian Church hoped to get into its handsome new building across the street by the latter part of the Winter, and then hoped to be in by Easter. It is now practically certain that the building will not be ready for occupancy before Fall, and the new chorus will then be in fine working order. This is the programme Prof. Parkhurst has arranged for it to-day:

MORNING.
Organ Prelude....................Barnby
Sing the Praises....................Haydn
Thine Forever, (Vesper hymn,) "O Most Merciful"....................Elliott
8 P. M.
Organ Prelude....................Rheinberger
When God of Old....................Hall
The Shadows of the Evening Hour.......Smart
One Hundred and Third Psalm, Antiphonal..
Parkhurst
This is not my place of resting...Mendelssohn
Closing Response.

⁂

Louis R. Dressler, organist of All Souls' Unitarian Church, has out for new Easter music "Christ Is Risen," (with violin,) published by the Oliver Ditson Company.

⁂

Stainer's "Crucifixion" is to be given at Calvary Church, (Episcopal,) Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, this evening. Next Sunday evening Gaul's "Passion" is on the programme, arranged by Lacey Baker, organist and choir director.

⁂

At All Saints' Church, Madison Avenue and 129th Street, Dr. F. S. Palmer, organist and choir director, has arranged the following programme for this evening's organ recital. He will be assisted by Mrs. Constance King, contralto:

Sonata Pascale....................Lemmens
Organ Symphony No. 5. Allegro..........Widor
Aria....................Bach
Contralto Solo, "Repentir"..........Gounod
Andante Cantabile....................Widor
Paques Fleuris....................Mailly
Offertory on "O Filii"..........Batiste
Contralto solo, "O salutaris."
Grand Antiphonal Chorus..........Gigout

⁂

Gothic Suite....................Leon Boellmann
1. Introduction—Choral. 2. Minuet Gothique.
3. Priere a Notre-Dame. 4. Toccata.
Pastorale, in A major; Canzona, in A minor....................Alex. Guilmant
The Ninety-fourth Psalm, Sonata.
Julius Reubke
"O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongeth: show thyself."

⁂

On Thursday of this week Mr. and Mrs. J. Christopher Marks give their sixth recital of the season at 154 East Forty-sixth Street, at 8 o'clock. There will be vocal and violin solos and a ladies' string quartet.

⁂

The recently formed Boys' Choir Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest is flourishing and after Easter is to give an open meeting, when the boys' friends will be invited to be spectators at the business session and then to see the progress the boys have made in their gymnastics. The club has received several small gifts recently. One was immediately after its formation, when a member of the congregation, reading an account of it in THE NEW YORK TIMES, inclosed the clipping with a check for $25 to the Rev. Herbert Shipman, who is one of the officers of the club. A promise that this would be duplicated when the boys themselves had raised $15 was made by another friend, who remains unknown, and $5 is a contribution more recently made to the club treasury. The last Tuesday in every month is the club's festival meeting. Then ice cream is bought with funds from the club treasury, and each month three boys take turns in bringing a cake from home to add to the feast. There are frequently visitors on these days and they are always warmly received.

Alfred Reisenauer, Pianist, with the Kneisel Quartet.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Henri Marteau, the violinist, will give a recital in Mendelssohn Hall on April 9, assisted by August Gollner, the French pianist. Much interest will attach to this event because Mr. Marteau will include in his programme some works of Mav Reger. Mr. Marteau is a friend of the young German composer, and has been one of his particular champions in the controversy that has raged in Germany since he came into notice. On several occasions when the violinist has played works of Reger abroad he has caused demonstrations by the opponents of Reger. He is anxious that the works of Reger shall have a good hearing in America, as he believes that they will appeal with great force to American lovers of music.

⁂

Herbert Witherspoon has returned from a long tour he made throughout the West and South in recent months and will soon go out on another that will take him through New England and into Canada. He has made arrangements for a concert in London on June 11, and will fill several other engagements in England. After that he will probably go into Scotland and visit the home of his ancestors before coming back to America for next season.

⁂

Albert von Doenhoff, one of the instructors in the National Conservatory of Music, has arranged to give a piano recital in Mendelssohn Hall on the evening of April 4.

⁂

The New Music Society of America will present the following programme at its second concert Monday evening, April 2, at Carnegie Hall, with Maud Powell, violin, as soloist: "Melpomene," dramatic overture, George W. Chadwick; concerto for violin in D minor, Henry Holden Huss, (first time;) two contrasted pieces, "Il Penseroso," "L'Allegro," (first time in New York,) David Stanley Smith; "The Mystic Trumpeter," orchestral fantasy, Frederick S. Converse, (first time in New York.)

⁂

At its final concerts of the season on Saturday evening, April 7, and Sunday afternoon, April 8, at Carnegie Hall, the Russian Symphony Orchestra will play Rubinstein's humoresque character sketch, "Don Quixote"; Act III. of Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera-ballet, "Mlada"; a number for a soloist, to be announced and Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slave." The Rubinstein "Don Quixote" was announced for the concerts of Feb. 24 and 25, but deferred until now, owing to a rearrangement of the programme caused by the non-arrival of orchestral parts from Russia. It has not been played here for many years.

⁂

The oratorio "St. Ursula" will be given by the Catholic Dramatic Oratorio Society, founded by Mme. Selma Kronold, at Madison Square Garden Concert Hall, on Tuesday evening, April 24, with a chorus of one hundred voices and an orchestra of sixty. The solo parts will be taken by Mme. Kronold, soprano; Margaret Keyes, contralto; Edward Barrow, tenor, and Mr. Keith, bass.

⁂

The last concert in this season's series of the Olive Mead Quartet will take place on Tuesday evening, April 3, in Mendelssohn Hall. Miss Susan Metcalfe will assist.

⁂

Paul Dufault, tenor, will give a French song recital on April 5, in Knabe Hall.

MANAGEMENT THOMPSON & DUNDY

What Is the Greatest Show on the Earth?

"'A Society Circus,' with Court of the Golden Fountains, at the Hippodrome, a magnificent spectacle, savage in its gorgeousness as well as refined in taste. Everybody in America should go to the Hippodrome. THOMPSON & DUNDY HAVE MADE BARNUM & BAILEY'S CLAIM TO THE 'GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH' ABSOLUTELY COMIC IN ITS ABSURDITY. The Hippodrome would have put the Roman Coliseum out of business and have caused the gladiatorial contests to be given to empty benches."—Channing Pollock in Ainslee's Magazine.

"The like of which was not dreamed by the creator of the Arabian Nights."—N. Y. PRESS.

EACH CIRCUS FEATURE

The greatest of its kind, imported exclusively for the New York Hippodrome. The Show that is too large to travel. Not depending upon a 2-minute sensation, but providing 180 minutes of the world's marvels.

The Hippodrome Circus Tournament comprises the highest salaried artists in the world. Each a European headliner never before seen in America.

Unanimous Eulogy of the Press.

"'A Society Circus' is what P. T. Barnum used to print 'The Greatest Show on Earth.'"—Evening Mail.

"'A Society Circus,' the best spectacular show in America, one of the best musical comedies ever seen in New York, most entertaining vaudeville found in town, and the finest ballet in years."—N. Y. Globe.

"Paris and London have seen gorgeous ballets and magnificent spectacles, but they pale to insignificance in comparison with 'A Society Circus.'"—N. Y. Herald.

"It beggars description. No words can do justice either to its magnitude or magnificence."—Eve. Sun.

"Hippodromic is something you find only at the Hippodrome."—N. Y. American.

THE REGULAR CIRCUS AND HIPPODROME SEASON OPENED AND INAUGURATED IN A VERITABLE BLAZE OF SPLENDOR.

THE BARNUM AND BAILEY

GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH

NOW OPEN AND FULFILLING THE SHORT ENGAGEMENT IN NEW YORK CITY.
Only Real Circus and Only Real Hippodrome Ever Exhibiting in the City.
NOW GIVING TWO GRAND EXHIBITIONS EVERY DAY AT 2 AND 8 P. M.

Doors open an hour earlier for a visit to the menageries, museum, elephants, herd of giraffes, smallest horse, witness the picturesque performance of the Gitanas, Scandinavian Troupe, Giantess, Giant, Dwarfs, Freaks, Prodigies and in time for the concert.

"No such magnificent show ever seen anywhere."
"Dwarfing all the exhibitions of ancient and modern times."
"After all, there is nothing to equal the real circus and hippodrome."
"There may be other shows, but surely none to compare with this."
"It is a complete, composite combination of all the shows of the year."
"A superb exhibition that filled the vast space with startling acts."
"The sensational exploits were delightfully terrifying."

Its gigantic size, stupendous proportions, colossal exhibits, startling surprises, gorgeous pageants, superb performances, wonderful trained animals, splendid horses, wise elephants, moving tableaux, picturesque features and grand magnificence.

The Sole Topic of Talk Among All Classes of People

Some thrilling or beautiful act constantly before the eyes of visitors. Not a minute's wait, but a stupendous continuous performance of marvelous exploits.

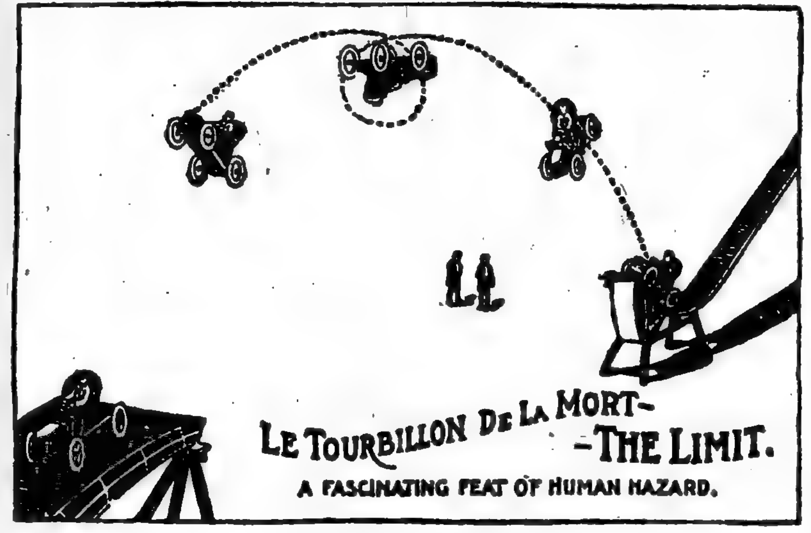
In three rings, upon two big stages, in an immense aerial enclave, on the ground, in the air, on the backs of speeding animals, with mechanical apparatus, and in every available part of the amphitheatre there are to be seen some mind-distracting, breath-bating, soul-stirring or picturesque exploit.

Language is too poor to even faintly describe a tithe of the wonderful attractions.

Introducing a score of astounding French novelties. The highest priced attractions ever known; secured expressly for Barnum & Bailey, only possible of presentation with their show and far and beyond the reach of others to obtain.



LE TOURBILLON DE LA MORT—
—THE LIMIT.
A FASCINATING FEAT OF HUMAN HAZARD.

THE LIMIT.

LE TOURBILLON DE LA MORT.

Where chuckling and expectant Death meets disappoinement and chagrin. Another awful, appalling, appulsive, aerial somersault automobile act. An amazing descent, ascent, flight, somersault, impact and ride by a young and fearless French lady.

A turning, twisting, twirling, tossing, tilting transposition; the thrilling, terrifying, tremendous, tantalizing triumph of all time. Absolutely the extreme limit to Human Daring and Intrepidity. The highest priced sensational exploit ever presented.

THE TWO TWIRLS OF TERROR.

Duplex, double, dual, desperate, death-defying deeds, deftly done by two nervy artists; strangely fascinating, skillfully executed semi-aerial exploits, absolutely new and never before seen in this country.

THE DIP OF DEATH.

A LADY LOOPING THE GAP IN AUTOMOBILE.

The intrepid young American chauffeuse receiving a Grand Opera Prima Donna's salary for a reckless ride and topsy turvy somersault in an automobile. Nearly $5,000 cash for 45 seconds' head over heels spin. Think of it, $100 every clock tick while in midair.

THE AERIAL TREMPLIN.

Still another absorbingly interesting and remarkable aerial somersaulting exhibition by a troupe of seven male and female artists of high renown.

PEACE—AMERICA'S IMMORTAL TRIUMPH.

A transcendentally beautiful and picturesque allegory, symbolizing the conclusion of peace between Russia and Japan, incidently introducing living representatives of all the nations on earth, together with superb floats, gorgeous costumes, triumphal cars, elephants, camels, men, women and children, and, in addition, all the glories and wonders of the Greatest Show on Earth.

50 CLOWNS IN 100 MAD-CAP FROLICS.

Leaping and tumbling tournaments, assaults at arms, high and long-distance jumping horses, desperate races on foot, on horseback and in chariots. Whole troupes of acrobats, gymnasts, athletes, riders, equestrians, and actors; in very truth,

ALL THE MERITORIOUS ATTRACTIONS OF THE GLOBE.

Two performances daily, at 2 and 8 P. M. Doors open at 1 and 7. Admission to all, including seat, 25c. and 50c. (26th and 27th St. entrances). Reserved seats, 75c., $1 and $1.50, according to location (Madison Av. entrance only). Private boxes, six seats, $12 and $15. Single box seats, $2 and $2.50. Children half price to all reserved seats but 75c. seats, and they are 50c. Box office open daily from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. for sale of advance seats from $1.00 up. No seats reserved by telephone, but may be secured by letter with cash. 25c., 50c. or 75c. seats not sold in advance. Beware of speculators and bogus tickets. Buy at Box Office only.

IS YOUR FAVORITE COLOR BROWN?

If so, what kind of brown? Surely not a brown taste the morning after. A great many people express a decided leaning toward in which Henry Woodruff is delighting large audiences at the Princess Theatre, Broadway and 29th St. The telephone number is 2848-Madison. Best seats are $1.00 at Tuesday and Thursday matinees, but the regular scale of prices prevails Saturday afternoons.

SHE SELLS SEA SHELLS!

Find this pretty hard to iterate? Well, there's one thing you can say much more easily and with positive truth. That is that offers the most enjoyable comic opera entertainment to be seen in New York. The music is rich in melody, the book is extremely funny, and tiny Marguerite Clark appears to great advantage with tall Mr. Hopper. Only two weeks remain of "Happyland." The Casino is at Broadway and 39th St. Telephone number is 1646-Bryant. $1.00 matinees Thursdays and Saturdays. No men admitted next Thursday afternoon.

P. S.—Did you notice what a hit "The Social Whirl" made in New Haven? Watch and see how they like the piece in Boston. It comes next.

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD.

They are Christie MacDonald, Thomas Q. Seabrooke, Joseph Herbert, Edmund Stanley, Edward Martindell, Caro Roma, and Florence Martin, the delightful septette of comediennes and comedians appearing at the Lyric Theatre in

"MEXICANA."

This opera, by Clara Driscoll, Robert Smith, and Raymond Hubbell, is enjoying all the popularity of its twin sister, "Fantana." The Lyric is on 42d Street, west of Broadway. The telephone number is 1646-Bryant. $1.00 matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Lenten ☘ Wedding ☘ Gowns

WEDDINGS in Lent are rather a novelty, and are almost always celebrated at the home of the bride instead of in a church, a concession to the spirit of Lent in the avoidance of all pomp and ceremony. This, however, does not mean that the wedding gowns are not quite as rich and beautiful as though they were to be paraded up and down the aisle of a fashionable church to delight the eyes of hundreds of casual acquaintances as well as intimate friends.

On Tuesday last there was the wedding of Miss Evelyn Schley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant B. Schley of Morristown and New York, to Max Howell Behr, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Behr. It took place in the Fifth Avenue town house of the Schleys, and the gowns, among the most beautiful and artistic of their kind, were white and yellow, the bride, of course, and her maid of honor being in white and the bridesmaids in golden yellow.

The bride, who is slight and petite, was in an Empire robe of white tulle, covered partially with a flight of butterflies, over a tight-fitting slip of white liberty satin.

The stock and yoke were of point applique, and clasping the bust, forming the Empire girdle in both the front and the back, was a shaped band of white satin embroidered in silver, with a silver butterfly in the centre. The elbow length sleeves of point applique were formed of flounces of the lace, the outer edges of which were brought together at the outside of the arms and gathered to form a double ruffle effect from shoulders to elbows. Between the ruffled edges, which were turned back for the purpose, were perched several white butterflies.

The robe was bordered about the bottom and also around the round train with an eight-inch flounce of lace showing tiny bow knots at the edge. The robe, which fell in scant folds from the empire girdle, was so filmy as to show the outlines of the figure in the close-fitting satin underslip. The tulle of fine, plain Brussels net as it really was, had at intervals of every eight or nine inches white chiffon butterflies embroidered at their edges in white silk, appliqued on to the tulle. The long tulle veil also had a single large white lace butterfly poised half way down its length.

The butterfly motif, emblematic of Easter, was not used because of this. The bride has a penchant for butterflies, and they are embroidered or appliqued on almost everything she wears.

Butterflies appeared—great, transparent ones in gold—on the golden yellow hats that topped the long Empire robes of yellow chiffon over yellow satin. These robes had little yellow moiré boleros, with bands underneath, simulating waistcoats, of yellow velvet. The maid of honor, Miss Margaret Hall Behr, wore a similar costume to those of the bridesmaids, but it was in white chiffon and moiré.

The bridesmaids were Miss Olive Schley, a cousin of the bride; Miss Aileen Lawson, Miss Katharine Lefens, Miss Lloyd Thomas, and Miss Edith Rossiter.

In detail the frocks were as follows: The Empire girdles were narrow-shaped bands of moiré, and around the bottoms of the skirts were two simple bias ruffles of moiré an inch apart, the lower being perhaps six inches wide and the upper an inch narrower. The material was chiffon cloth, and the moiré used matched it exactly in shade. The short sleeves and yokes were of yellowish lace, and the little boleros with sleeves ending just above the elbows had turned-back cuffs, deeper at the outside of the arms than at the inside seams, being three inches wide at the deepest; they had pipings of yellow velvet set in under the edges and projecting as folds. All around each tiny coat was a fold of the velvet let in underneath, and giving at the front—where they were a little wider—a waistcoat effect. Twists of the material ended each side of the centre back in single butterfly tabs, caught with rhinestone cabochons at both top and bottom.

The hats were great large picture shapes, with low, round crowns, brims of equal width all the way around, and narrow bandeaus covered with yellow tulle. The entire hats were of the yellow moiré, including the facing of the brims, where knots of yellow at one side near the back formed the underneath trimming. Bands of yellow went around the crown and at the left centre of each band a great butterfly in gold lace was poised with outstretched wings as if it were about to take flight; from under the crown trimming at the right two very wide and long yellow ostrich plumes swept out and over the brims. The wide brims were of equal width all the way, bent in slightly sweeping curves.

The bride's going-away gown was in one of the new shades of fine gray cloth, with a perfectly plain circular skirt of walking length, an underblouse of gray chiffon, with a little body of the cloth forming a deep girdle and baby waist effect, with wide shoulder straps over the underblouse or guimpe of chiffon, the fourth section being an Empire Eton, with touches of blue-embroidered blue linen forming part of the collar and part of the vest effect down the front, while from each side of the military collar of gray cloth, satin, and blue linen descended a Windsor tie end of the gray satin.

That section of the costume completing the bodice, and which doubtless has some technical name unknown to the lay writer, had a belt of the cloth, with two bias folds of the satin at its top. It—the body section—was shirred around the top and finished by folds of the cloth and of the satin, the ends of the satin folds being pulled out in butterfly or flyaway tab ends, caught with large cabochons in rhinestones and silver.

The gown worn by Mrs. Grant B. Schley at her daughter's wedding was a superb Empire coat and trailing skirt of real point de Venise, the coat being entirely of this lace, and the chiffon skirt having a wide band of it let in around the bottom, just above the bottom ruffle. This skirt was most simply made, being shirred at the top and trailing only slightly. The Empire coat was very long, reaching about to the ten-inch band of the point lace in the skirt. It was loose, of course, from the Empire top. Its back was all in one piece, but fitted smoothly across the top, and where the fullness began, just above the centre of the back, a shaped band perhaps two inches wide by eight inches long of gold gauze and lace was set on at this point. From this band the coat fell in loose folds, starting at the bands in modified godet or organ plait effect. At the sides, of course, the coat was held in at the under-arm seams, so that the outlines of the figure were preserved despite the Empire fashioning.

The coat was also caught in a little in front of the under-arm seams. The edges of the coat just touched in the centre from a little below the bust line to the bottom. The top of the coat had immense ripple revers of the pointed Venise that fell back in plaits and also touched the sleeves. The inner points of these revers met at the bust line, and on each side were two large cabochons made of beautifully painted miniature buttons with dark centres and figures in delicate colors, each with a rim of rhinestones. Above this point and forming a deep pointed yoke was point applique lace forming the stock and guimpe, crossed by two narrow bands of golden gauze. Just at the bust line Mrs. Schley wore her famous brooch of pearls forming a chrysanthemum.

The elbow-length sleeves were scant puffs of the point lace, with turned-back cuffs.

The chapeau topping this gown was of cream-colored moiré, with a band of the golden gauze around the crown and trimmed with long, cream-colored ostrich plumes.

A simple out-of-doors costume in the trousseau of one of the April brides is a blue serge, the oldtime but ever popular material so universally becoming and serviceable. The skirt escapes the ground by two inches, and has a deep hem. It is fitted smoothly at the top, and is made of numerous gores so shaped as to give the maximum of flare at the bottom, without plaits, and the tightest of tops. Two seams on each side are lapped over from the front to the back, and eight inches from the waist line these are notched once, and the rest of that edge of the gore extends out an inch further than the eight-inch section above. This notched section and, indeed, the whole overlapping edges are stitched with blue silk three times, the stitchings being an eighth of an inch apart. The belt consists of three bias bands of the serge, each turned in at the top and stitched three times, these being supplemented by a straight band of dark-blue velvet ribbon inserted under the top band and showing an inch or more. This belt hooks in the front, but the joining is concealed by a large open oval buckle in dull silver, the outer rim of the buckle covering the hooked line. This belt is straight around, four inches wide, with its entire breadth above the waist line.

The Eton coat is very loose at the bottom, and is stiffened so that it stands far out from the body, and it comes just below the top of the wide belt. Down each side the centre back are four half-inch plaits each stitched three times from top to bottom. An inch-wide band of plain blue silk braid goes around the jacket edge, and turning up on each front outlines a picket-pointed opening, and there is also one on each side of the back, while in the centre back two rows of the braid, half an inch apart, run up between the plaits to the top.

Three bands of half-inch silk braid go around the neck of the jacket a little below the collar, each a half inch from the next one. These braids meet at each side of the top and from there diverge, going down the jacket fronts almost to the bottom, and each is then turned under, leaving a half-inch bow-end that is caught with a little dull silver button. The wide braid going around the jacket is so arranged at and above the bust line that it forms on each side two groups of two tabs or loops, each group being caught at the top by a large silver button. In order to do this the braid is laid in two loops and then again fastened down.

The sleeves are quite large and are laid in loose plaits at the armhole seams, the bottoms being laid in box plaits that terminate just far enough below the elbow to give room under cuffs that have a three-quarter-inch fold of the serge at their top, this fold coming up over and concealing the ends of the sleeve plaits. Just below this serge fold is seen a band of blue velvet, and then come the white linen canvas section cuffs, with a fold of blue velvet peeping from under their lower edges, from which fall narrow white lace ruffles. At the outside seam of each white linen cuff is a short tab an inch wide of blue velvet fastened at the top with a silver button. The turned-over collar is also of white linen, showing a fold of blue velvet at the edge, and having extension ends of blue velvet braided in blue soutache braid. These linen accessories are so attached that they may be removed and laundered and others attached.

To wear with this there is a simple blouse of heavy but fine white linen with a plain back and elbow sleeves ending in inch wide embroidered bands and two inch ruffles of valenciennes lace. The stock is composed of alternate bands of lace and embroidery with a lace ruffle at the top, and the blouse closes down the centre front under an inch wide band of embroidered linen, from which a two-inch ruffle of the valenciennes lace forms a cascade jabot from top to bottom. Each of the side fronts of this blouse is laid in quarter-inch hand tucks slanting downward from the side seams and armholes.

An Empire robe, recently received from Paris by a well-known woman, looks, as she herself avers, more like some sort of a long coat or a house gown than one intended for carriage and reception uses.

It is a pastel-colored chiffon broadcloth, with a high stock and removable vest of Irish lace. Then comes the bolero effect, plain at the top, save for a collar of Irish lace, with square epaulets projecting out over the tops of the sleeves. This bolero is outlined where it overlaps the lace and pointed guimpe, and also down the front, where it closes with a fold of velvet of a darker shade, overlaid with openwork braid in dull, very fine gold thread. The bolero top is loose and forms at the bottom a line of three scallops, one at each side and one in the centre, the latter formed, of course, by the meeting centres. Under this bolero is a flat ruffle of white lace perhaps two inches deep. The sleeves are large, loose puffs of the cloth to just above the elbows, where a fold of velvet, covered with gold thread, is banded around it, and from under this there sets out a circular section of ruffle of the cloth. This is formed by cutting around in a perfect circle so that at the top the piece is without gathers or other fullness where it joins the sleeves, while the lower part flares out in a full circle. The cloth is left with a smooth cut edge. From under this a puff of chiffon cloth of the same shade extends over the elbow and is banded just below it with another of the velvet and gold bands. A two-inch frill of white lace falls from this.

The top of the gown, set on to a yoke section under the bolero, and quite concealed by the latter, falls in scant folds to the floor, where it rests an inch or two in the front and trails out in the back. From just below the hip line this skirt is formed of overlapping, bias, and perfectly flat sections of the cloth, ranging from about three inches wide at the top to ten inches at the bottom. These bands are all wider at the back, and grow narrower toward the front. Each is stitched on at the top to the silk foundation slip, and each overlaps the next. The top one of all is stitched on perhaps a quarter of an inch from its top, and the lower edge is turned up under and stitched to match. None of the upper edges of the succeeding sections show, but the lower edges are just turned under once and stitched once with silk of the same shade.

To wear with this there is a large hat of crinoline, a brilliant black, trimmed with quantities of pale pink roses of all sizes and shades, both around the crown and under the brim, while puffs of pale yellow tulle are used around the bandeau and a knot of black liberty satin ribbon shows on the brim.

A simple robe, the idea of which may be easily reproduced by any clever dressmaker, is an almost plain costume for Spring wear of dark blue voile. The skirt is fitted around the hips by tucks in the front and over the hips, and in the back it is laid in two double underlying box-plaits. The skirt clears the ground perhaps an inch, has a three-inch hem, and above two one-inch tucks an inch apart.

The coat bodice has a moderately wide belt of folds of blue satin, having at the lower edge an inch-wide silver braid. In the back and also in the front are hollow oval buckles of dull silver, matching the braid. One end of the belt is thrust through the buckle at the front, ending in a slanting point. Above this belt the voile is gathered three time a half inch apart over a tight silk lining, and the voile is drawn taut to above the point where the bolero top effect comes down over it. There is a stock and removable vest of guimpe of Irish crochet, the latter describing a point in the back as well as in the front. Over this laps the edge of the bodice proper. An inch-wide band of white and silver braid is set under the edge of the bodice to form a finish, and then two straight pieces of blue satin three or four inches wide are laid over the shoulders. The ends are square and where they meet at the top in both the centre front and the centre back is a large dull silver cabochon. From these cabochons going across the ends of the satin and then up the outside edges is dull silver braid like that on the belt. These satin sections form the only top to the bodice over the shoulders, their outer edges extending just over the shoulder seams, where the sleeves are sewed to the body. From under these satin sections the voile extends out to form the bolero proper. The voile is laid in three flat down-turning plaits under the ends of the satin in the back, the fullness being pressed and tacked down to the foundation to fit smoothly as far as the under-arm seams, and from this point the plaits fall to go over the bust to the centre of the front. Unlike the ends at the back, the front sections of voile are allowed to droop a little in the centre front, and a jabot of white lace and chou of satin ribbon is caught below the cabochon. Below this and between the girdle and the bolero a four-inch insertion of Irish crochet shows up the centre, with a row of small silver buttons on each side.

These sleeves are quite full puffs at the top, but are so cut as to shape into the arms above the elbows. Three-inch cuffs of blue satin are set on at the elbows, having at the back of each a hollow, oval silver buckle, and across the top a line of dull silver braid. All the satin accessories, by the way, have pin tucks an eighth of an inch apart running the long way of the accessory.

To wear with this there is a small hat of blue chip with a white tulle bandeau. It is trimmed with black ostrich tips, and there are large amber shell pins to fasten it to the coiffure.

Speaking of hats, one just arrived from Paris should prove a desirable driving or automobile hat. It is tan chip, bent down in both the back and the front, trimmed with a scarf of corn-colored silk crêpe, forming loose folds around the crown and a wide soft bow at the front. Under the right brim is a big, conventional bow of brown tulle with a cluster of brown and corn-colored roses under the left side. From these flowers a scarf effect in folds of brown tulle goes loosely around and ends at the right in one shirred end. This has a hook in the shirring, and there is a loop under the separate tulle bow, the idea being to bring the tulle scarf down from the left under the coiffure at the back and up at the right side, fastening it to the loop by the hook, and thus securing the hat to the head. There are also a set of two tortoise shell pins going with it. It is an odd sort of chapeau, but with more of novelty than beauty.

Among the decorations of Empire robes are folds of silk or ribbon arranged in short bands, with the ends drawn through buckles. One such robe has its sleeves ending at the elbows, decorated with three bands of liberty satin ribbon. The ribbons are an inch and a quarter wide and an inch apart, the lowest coming at the edge of the sleeve. The ends coming from the inside are each drawn through a small buckle that gathers them a bit, and the ends stick pertly out toward the back of the arm. In the front of the bodice, largely of lace, two nine-inch straps of the ribbon form a letter X. The ends are pulled through buckles and produce the same effect as those on the sleeves. In the back there is a double X. The body of the robe, of crêpe de chine, is perfectly plain.

Another Empire robe is cut very low, and the part that clasps the bust comes down in a point in the centre front almost to the waist line. The material used is chiffon cloth, and the skirt is plain, only for three-inch wide tucks above the four-inch hem. The sleeves, like the bust girdle, also form deep points almost to the elbows. Both sleeves and the top of the robe are formed of lace motifs in deep scallops set on to a thin silk foundation, and overlap each other here and there. The scallops are of different sizes, and several sorts of lace are used. Outlining the lower edge of each scallop and also the top line of the bodice are artificial pearls, or rather a good quality of pearl beads. These are first strung, and then the string between the beads is caught to the edges of the scallops, the effect being much better than the application of the beads one by one direct to the lace. Of course other than pearl beads can be used, but this robe is a white crêpe de chine. With a good dressmaker at one's house many of these simple robes may be copied and variations to suit one's individual style adopted. It takes taste and skill, though, and some time and thought should be given to the lines of the garments; the foundation slip in particular should be perfect in hang and sweep, then the clinging materials of the robe cannot well hang wrong.

Miss Elizabeth Cutting, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting, at the Opera with Miss Trevor, who was in pale blue satin, wore a charming frock of bright, yet soft, red chiffon. The bodice was one of the old-time effects, straight across the top just above the bust, with sleeves covering the shoulder curves and extending in short, close puffs to the elbows, where flounces of the chiffon finished them. The centre front of the pointed bodice was cut in the stomacher effect, the centre narrowing to a point at the waist line and giving a vest effect in lighter tones, probably from the use of silver under the chiffon or of tulle over the white silk underslip. It is most difficult to distinguish exactly colors and materials across the immense Metropolitan. Velvets often look like satin and vice versa, when the velvet is panne, and tulle and chiffon are not unlike in effect. The use, too, of silver and gold gauzes, draped with tulle or chiffon over them, produces artistic effects that cannot be analyzed save at short range.

The bodice, of course, had no girdle, but extended in a point in the front and also over the sides and back of the skirt at the waist line. The skirt, long and full, gathered at the waist line and, like the bodice, over white, was trimmed with wide ruchings or narrow ruffles going across the back and sides of the skirt and curving up the side fronts toward the waist, adding further to the old-time effect.

Mrs. Stanford White at a Wagnerian performance appeared robed in filmy lavender with a huge bunch of violets on her corsage, and her hair, as usual, done very low at the back in a huge knot, and parted and combed down at the sides. This is a fashion Mrs. White adheres to, and there is also almost always a spray of white flowers caught at one side of the knot.

The sleeves of the lavender gown were two sagging puffs to the elbows finished with graduated flounces of white lace. The corsage was not very low and was draped across, the skirt fell in especially full folds and graceful lines.

Mrs. John J. Wysong also at the opera, wore a wonderful Empire robe of dark currant red velvet with a curious sort of embroidery in garnet beads all over the top, outlining and clasping the bust, and this was used profusely on the very short, high puffed sleeves. The gown was most suggestive of one seen in the old pictures of the Empress Josephine, Napoleon's first wife.

MARIE WELDON.

Personal and Otherwise.

MISS BEATRICE KINNEY, whose picture may be seen in the supplement, is the daughter of Francis S. Kinney of West Fifty-fourth Street. Her marriage to Henry La Montagne, son of Mr. and Mrs. René L. La Montagne, is set for April 30 in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Miss Kinney is very musical, and has entertained with informal musicales at her home. She made her début several years ago. Her mother died some years ago, and Miss Palmieri has been with her. Miss Kinney spends her Summers at Narragansett Pier. She is tall and large, with a Juno-like figure, brown hair, and blue eyes.

⁂

Miss Katharine Delafield Hall is a daughter of Mrs. John M. Hall and a niece of Richard Delafield. Her sister, Miss Susie T. Hall, married in November last Bryce Metcalf. Miss Hall was one of the attendants. She is tall, slight, and a pronounced brunette, and was a notable figure at the opera on several occasions, gowned entirely in black, and having a deep red rose fastened at one side of her black coiffure and another on her bodice. When Prince Alexander was here in November he escorted Miss Hall, who was with a little party, from the Horse Show, where he had been the guest of Mrs. Drexel, to tea at the Strollers Club. Others in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell and the Viscountess Maitland. The Strollers Club is only a few rods from Madison Square Garden, and the party walked. The Prince's blonde plumpness—if one may apply that term to a young man—was a striking contrast to Miss Hall's vivid brunette coloring and slight figure.

⁂

Mrs. Joseph Harriman, whose picture may also be seen in the Pictorial Section, was Miss Eugenia McLane. The Harrimans have a Summer home, Bellevue Court, at Newport, where they usually spend the Summers.

Miss Gladys Gittings of Baltimore, who is to be one of Miss Nannie Wright Brown's attendants when she marries Harold Richmond Talbot in April, is a cousin of Miss Isabel May and a niece of Col. Henry May and Lady Bagot. Miss Gittings has spent much time in New York, notably two Winters ago, when she made her début.

IT cannot be expected that it would be otherwise than dull in Lent. It must be remembered that the season was one of the most brilliant New York has had in years, and that now the penitential term is in progress the contrast must be felt. Many fashionable people are away. They are either abroad or at Aiken or at one of the Southern resorts. Those who stay behind remain to pray and to play bridge and to indulge in other little Lenten diversions. However, there are dinners, maigre and otherwise, and concerts and charitable entertainments, and last week, with the tableaus and a few mid-Lenten entertainments, including theatricals, there was certainly much going on. There will be what is called an Easter season. It will not be what it was once, but the set which delights in pastimes and sports in the open will make it gay, and there will be a great many weddings. Dances, of course, will be few. Even the Saturday Evening will give up its post-Lenten meeting. There are rumors also that the famous organization of the Southern set, once known as the Wednesday Cotillion, is to be dispensed with next season. This will leave the number of dancing classes few. The principal ones will be the Junior Cotillion, the Senior Cotillion, the two sets of dinner dances, the dances for the future débutantes, the Neighborhood Cotillion, and a few others of lesser importance.

Some social historian should win laurels in narrating the decline and fall of the dancing class, once the pride and glory of New York society. History repeats itself. In the forties and fifties and up to the sixties the best element of New York society seldom danced in public. The most exclusive entertainments given were private dances topped by abundant and lavish suppers, in which cooked oysters and other dainties beloved of our ancestors were served. The "Potiphar Papers" give a true and amusing picture of the soirée dansant of that day. Only in the sixties, when Delmonico's moved to Fourteenth Street, were the old assemblies established, and the ball for the Prince of Wales was one of the first of the great public crushes. The City Assemblies were semi-public balls in the forties and fifties, but they had not the cachet of private entertainments.

The general rush abroad has about ceased. Yet there are the Ogden Millses and a few others to go in April and in May. But already some of the travelers are returning. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and their young daughter sailed last Thursday from Cherbourg for America. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., are to leave Havre on April 3. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont are also expected in the near future, and by early Summer Mrs. Ladenburg and the hunting set, who have been enjoying the sport in the shires and in Ireland, will have come home. Already there have been a few meets at Meadow Brook, but the best of the colony is still at Aiken, where it will remain until the Easter holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt spend their time half in New York and half in Newport. Commodore and Mrs. Gerry and the Misses Gerry are here, and on St. Patrick's Day had a number of children of their friends to view the parade from their windows, while their conservatory was one mass of green foliage in honor of the day. The wanderings of Zizi, the Townsend Burden dog, keep the young ladies and the public prints and the police busy. At all the entertainments of the week there were large assemblages of well-known people, and the dinners and luncheons followed by bridge are many and growing in popularity. Those who have been in the West Indies and Florida are returning, lingering in Washington, at Hot Springs, and at Old Point, and advancing slowly north with the first violets, the swallows, and the coming Spring. From all indications, Newport will be brilliant. The rentals of cottages and villas have been numerous.

There is much interest just now in the Astor-Shaw wedding, and there are afloat many contradictory reports. Cliveden is to be the home of the young couple, according to one of the latest announcements. Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brooks sailed last Saturday for London, where the wedding is rumored to take place at St. Margaret's. But later reports seem to place this in doubt, as stated in THE TIMES last Sunday. Divorced couples have been married in London, Americans especially, and also in the provinces. But no large wedding of that kind has taken place. The marriage of William K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Rutherfurd was very quiet, and even then there was some adverse criticism. The Church of St. Margaret is one of the most fashionable in London. It is a stronghold of the ritualists, who are violently opposed to the remarrying of divorced persons, so it hardly seems possible that such a ceremony could take place there, and with as much pomp and publicity as announced. One of the last weddings in London to which one of the parties was a divorced person was that of Ernest Cunard and Mrs. Padelford. This was in a non-ritualistic church. The present Bishop does not sanction marriages of this kind.

William Waldorf Astor has nearly completed the repairs and improvements at Hevar, the former home of Anne Boleyn, which he intends to be his home. His eldest son will take upon himself the responsibilities of the management of the American estate, and will probably make his home eventually in this country. John Jacob Astor, the second son, having joined an English regiment, will remain in the land of his father's adoption.

Naturally Aiken is gay. There are many house parties, and the afternoons are filled with teas at the Palmetto Club, and other similar functions. The life is simple, however, and mostly in the open. Center Hitchcock has come up from the South in order to arrange for the different race meetings and the beginning of the sporting season in the North. Mrs. John Jacob Astor has been the guest of Mrs. Lewis Thompson, who was Miss Geraldine Morgan. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney have a party at their place, and the Iselins, Mrs. William H. Sands, Mrs. Robert Stevens, Mrs. Joseph Harriman, Mrs. Frederick Beach, and Mrs. Osgood Pell are among the hostesses who have been entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney are paying a visit to Col. Oliver Payne at Thomasville. Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones and Miss Jones have returned from Florida and are at their North Carolina plantation, where this week they are entertaining Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Lehr. Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt have gone yachting for a few weeks in Southern waters, and the official announcements give the plans of the Cuban visit of Mrs. Roosevelt and her children in the Mayflower.

Nearly all the sojourners at Palm Beach have come northward. Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Redmond have been among the last. Dr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb arrived a fortnight ago, and Mrs. Ralph Pulitzer and her mother were at the tableaus at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Frederick Kernochan and her daughter, Miss Kernochan; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Edey, August Belmont, and Mr. and Mrs. John J. Emery have returned from the South.

Sydney Paget has been a most popular man at Aiken and in the Meadow Brook colony. For years he was associated with the late William C. Whitney, whose daughter married Almeric Paget, a brother of Sydney. He was supposed to be an incorrigible bachelor. He and his bride returned from England on Wednesday. The maiden name of the lady who is Mrs. Paget has not been given. Mr. Paget retired from the Whitney turf interests, where he was succeeded by Craig Wadsworth, now a Secretary of Embassy at the Court of St. James's, and went with James B. Haggin. He is now associated with E. R. Thomas. He comes from a family of many children. One brother, Gen. Arthur Paget, is the husband of Miss Minnie Stevens, daughter of the late Mrs. Paran Stevens. He has several brothers and sisters, nearly all of whom have visited this country. His father was Gen. Lord A. B. Paget. The family are cousins to the Marquess of Anglesey. Mr. and Mrs. Almeric Paget have a house in London this season. Almeric Paget went into politics, but was not successful at the recent elections.

Mrs. Ogden Goelet sails shortly on her annual trip abroad. She announces that she will return in time for the end of the Newport season. Mrs. Goelet will go to the Continent, and will be established in Paris during May, after a visit to her daughter, the Duchess of Roxburghe, who evidently does not care much for society, and has done little entertaining since her marriage, some two years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet will be at Newport all Summer.

Many a maid and many a matron is busy planning for the famous Easter Assembly ball, to be held at the Astor House. Years ago Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt gave New York something similar to talk about during the forty days. Their famous fancy dress ball of the eighties was given after Easter. At the Crinoline ball many of the dancing classes will go en masse. Although the men are not required to be in fancy dress, not a few are going to make the experiment. The long pointed waistcoats of the forties are being revived for Spring wear. [illegible] these will be utilized. Several dressing in the garments of grandfathers and great-uncles. The costume of the period, especially in America, was not overpicturesque, but there is enough to lend a quaintness to the attire. Barrett's "Famous Merchants of New York" has been read and reread, and the libraries and old bookshops have been rummaged. The first John Jacob Astor and William B., his son; Washington Irving, N. P. Willis, the tragedian Forrest, Sam Ward, Philip Hone, Daniel D. Tompkins, Martin Van Buren and his son, once known as the "Prince"; Daniel Webster, and Henry Clay, and the Quakers of East Broadway will be among those represented in this April masque. The artist set is particularly busy, and there is no doubt that Horace Greeley, Peter Cooper, Commodore Vanderbilt and his black dress coat, as well as Gen. Scott, Zachary Taylor, and Gen. Harrison will also appear, while the women will have no difficulty in finding, from Godey's and other magazines of the time, some beautiful creations. Mrs. Blaishfield, Mrs. Carroll Beckwith, Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. C. De Rham, Jr., Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, Miss Frelinghuysen, and others are among those who are taking an interest in this original idea.

There should have been early openings of country houses for the Spring, which has technically arrived. The delayed sleighing, so much wished for, came last week to Tuxedo. Kincraig has been, as all Winter, the scene of a large house party, and there is another one there to-day. James Henry Smith has, with the exception of a musicale and some small dinners, confined his entertaining to Tuxedo and the week end. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frelinghuysen are to open their villa at the Park in a fortnight. They returned last week for a short visit to Tuxedo. The Summer plans of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer have not been perfected, but as usual they, with Miss Mortimer, will go abroad. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mortimer always reverse this situation, passing the Winters on the Continent and their Spring and Summer in this country. They return from Rome about Easter. Miss Pauline French, who has been abroad, visiting her aunt, Lady Chylesmore, at Cannes, is due here in a fortnight. She will join her parents, who are still at Tuxedo. Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart are also to return from abroad and to open their villa for April. The Misses Harriman have been visiting in the South. Arden will be opened in April, and they will remain there until late in the Summer.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs was at Coronado last week with a party of San Francisco people, in which were Mr. and Mrs. M. H. De Young and Miss De Young and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ma[illegible]. Mrs. Oelrichs is due in New York in April. Miss Crocker is at Santa Barbara. She is in deep mourning for her sister, Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison. Mr. Harrison has just returned from California.

At the old Lefferts homestead, Flatbush Avenue and Lincoln Road, on April 17, Miss Louise A. Lefferts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lefferts of Flatbush, will be married to Ira B. Downs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel B. Downs. Mrs. C. Montague Cooke, Jr., of Honolulu, a sister of the bride, will be matron of honor. The Misses Gertrude Sullivan, Coralie Mead, Florence Foster, and Miss MacKinney are to be the bridesmaids. Herbert Downs will be best man.

The wedding of Miss Beatrice Kinney, only daughter of Francis Sherwood Kinney, and Henry La Montagne will take place at St. Patrick's Cathedral on April 30. Contrary to rumor, it will be a simple affair. Miss Kinney will have no bridesmaids, and Edward La Montagne, Jr., will be best man. Miss Kinney passes her Summers at Narragansett.

The two town weddings on Easter Monday will be those of Miss Ella de Ruyter and Augustus D. Porter, and of Miss Marie Louise Bingham and Paul Plunkett. The first will take place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell. It will be a quiet event, to which only relatives and intimate friends will be asked. Mrs. Louis Taylor Bingham will give a dinner on Saturday, April 14, at 70 West Fifty-fifth Street, for the bridal party who are to assist in the nuptials of her daughter and Mr. Plunkett. The ceremony will take place at St. Thomas's on Monday afternoon following Easter Sunday. There will be two matrons of honor, Mrs. W. S. Gartner and Mrs. O. B. Knapp; a maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Bingham, a cousin of the bride; and two bridesmaids, Miss Emily P. Dale and Miss Nathalie Greene. George Gehrung will be best man, and the ushers are to be De Will Roberts, James W. Riley, William Gage Austin, Chester Dale, and Fernando Baltes, Jr. Mr. Plunkett is from Memphis.

Miss Evelyn Willis Hunter of Tennessee, who is to be married to Keith Donaldson April 25 at St. Thomas's Church, has had many dinners and luncheons given in her honor. Bishop Gaylor of Tennessee is to officiate at the wedding, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires. There will be a full choral service, and the church ceremony will be followed by a reception at the St. Regis. On Saturday, April 21, Miss Hunter will give a bridesmaids' luncheon at the St. Regis, and on the same date Mr. Donaldson will have his bachelor dinner at Delmonico's. Mrs. John A. Payne of Cincinnati will be matron of honor. She is an aunt of the bride. The bridesmaids will be the Misses Margaret Baxter of Knoxville, Dorothy Taylor, the granddaughter of Gov. Flower; Marion Dennison, Mary Morris Blair, Virginia Iredell, cousin of Representative Nicholas Longworth, and Louise Long of Grand Rapids, Mich. Mr. Francis Donaldson will be best man, and the ushers will be Le Grand Cannon Griswold, Percy Rivington Pyne, second; Frederick W. Stelle and R. Lawrence Benson of this city; W. F. Wicks of Chicago, Carroll S. Tyson, Jr., Edwin W. Benson, Jr., and Frederick Rosengarten of Philadelphia; Harold F. Walton of Orange, N. J., and Dr. F. C. Goldsborough of Baltimore.

Another wedding of Easter week will be that of Miss Martha Prentice Strong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theron G. Strong, and Harold M. Turner. It will take place on April 17 at the Brick Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, and will be followed by a reception for relatives and intimate friends only at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Kate de Forest Prentice, a cousin of the bride-elect and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. P. Prentice, will be the maid of honor. Among the bridesmaids are Miss Martha Pitkin of Boston, Miss Hildred Harbeck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Harbeck; Miss Ruth Hubbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bulkley Hubbell, and Miss Rhoda Sargent of New Haven. Mr. Turner, who is a grandson of the late Alfred S. Barnes, will have his brother, Spencer Turner, as his best man. His ushers will be Theron S. Strong, a brother of the bride; Clarence Young, Robert Tilney, Murray Sargent, Edmund Rogers, and G. Buel Hollister.

* * *

But all the weddings are not to be at Eastertide. Miss May Valentine Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Johnson of Spuyten Duyvil, and Wyatt Warner Taylor are to be married on April 5 at the Marble Collegiate Church. This will be an evening wedding, which is something of a novelty nowadays, when the general hour for nuptial events is about 4 in the afternoon. The ceremony is for 8:30. A reception will follow at the Waldorf-Astoria. On the evening of March 30 a dinner will be given at the Café des Beaux Arts for the bridal party. Among these will be Miss Bessie Taylor, who is to be maid of honor; Mrs. Henry J. Hildebrandt, who will be matron of honor; and the Misses Ilona Mighietta, Ethel Lockwood, Frances Jenkins, Katherine Daniell, Therese Matthews, and Elizabeth Pearsall, bridesmaids, and Everett B. Meeks, best man, and Reginald Johnson, Emory Johnson, Harry Wilde, Henry Hildebrandt, George Jenkins, H. Elmer Crall, Hiram Taylor, and Adrianno Mighietta, ushers.

* * *

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Easter Monday Miss Ruth A. Badgley, daughter of Capt. Howard G. Badgley, and Mrs. Badgley, who was Miss Adelaide Lyon, will be married to Dr. William K. Shepard. Miss Daisy Stedman will be the maid of honor. There will be no bridesmaids. Dr. Newell Ferry of Memphis, Tenn., will be the best man, and the ushers are to be chosen from the members of the bridegroom-elect's class at Yale. Dr. Shepard is a member of the Faculty of the Sheffield Scientific School.

In All Angels' Church, on April 17, Miss Maude Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Robinson, will be married to Arthur Corlies, who gives his bachelor dinner at Delmonico's on April 16. Howard Corlies will be best man, and the ushers Hamilton Fish Benjamin, Richard L. Morris, J. R. Goetchius, C. Arthur Comstock, Henry Sampson, Jr., Craig Colgate, Reune Martin, David Stuart, E. Hubert Litchfield, and James T. Terry. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock and will be followed by a reception at the Robinson home, 340 West Eighty-ninth Street.

* * *

On Wednesday afternoon, April 25, in the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Miss Florence T. Southerland, daughter of Mrs. A. F. Southerland, will be married to Eugene Gray Foster. There will be many invitations both to the church and the reception which is to follow at the bride's home, 145 West Fifty-eighth Street. Miss Annie Purdy Southerland will be her sister's maid of honor and J. Reginald Foster will be his brother's best man. The ushers are to be Howard C. Foster, Joseph S. Stout, cousin of the bride; William Peake, Robert S. Talmage, A. Fillmore Hyde, D. Walter Gibson, Daniel C. Adams, and Glen Wright.

* * *

Among the contemplated departures for Europe are Mr. and Mrs. Jules A. Montant, who sail early in April and who will remain abroad all Summer, taking a long automobile trip. Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Amsinck will sail after Easter. At Cannes, there are no new arrivals of consequence. Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel has been there for some weeks. Her husband with a party is cruising in the Margerita. Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane and Mr. and Mrs. McK. Twombly were in Rome last week. The cables keep society constantly on the qui vive as to the whereabouts of J. Pierpont Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Hollins. Venice was one of the last places visited. Mrs. Astor's apartment on the Avenue des Champs Elysées has been made ready for her. Mrs. Astor will have Mrs. Haig with her, and later will visit one of the German spas.

Easter week will see the wedding of Miss Lurline Spreckels and Spencer Eddy at St. George's, Hanover Square, London. After a short trip they will go to St. Petersburg, where Mr. Eddy is attached to the embassy. By the time of the wedding there will be quite a gathering of Chicago people in London. Mrs. Potter Palmer, Honore Palmer, Mrs. Marshall Field, and others will be in the English metropolis for the event. Mrs. Frank Mackey, who has been visiting in this country, will also return to England, after going to Chicago for a few weeks.

Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth will make New York a visit on the occasion of the wedding of Miss Mignon Critten, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. De Frees Critten of Staten Island, to Representative Swagar Sherley of Louisville, Ky., which event will take place on April 21. Miss Critten and her fiancé were members of the Taft Philippine party. Their engagement was announced shortly after that of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth. The wedding will not be elaborate, and at the reception there will only be the relatives and intimate friends and some members as well of the Taft party.

Around New York the country resorts are comfortably filled. Lakewood has had an excellent season. Mrs. George Gould and her family remain in town for some little time. Mrs. Kingdon, Mrs. Gould's mother, has been at Georgian Court. Mrs. George Kingsland and her daughter, Mrs. Newbold Morris, are at the Laurel-in-the-Pines, and E. H. Harriman and J. Borden Harriman have been at the Lakewood Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman are to open their house near White Plains in April. There is always great interest evinced in the Rockefeller family, and the advent of a son to Mr. and Mrs. John Rockefeller, Jr., was the occasion of many congratulations to the baby's grandparents. There has been riding to hounds at Lakewood, but the place is at its best at the week end. Further down in the pines, Chatsworth has had relay after relay of well-known people for over Sunday.

For the last weeks in March there are several interesting charitable performances to be given. One of these is the children's sale, which will take place at the home of Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, 4 West Fifty-eighth Street, on the afternoon of March 31, for the benefit of the Country Home for Convalescing Babies, which is at Sea Cliff, L. I. The sale will be undertaken by a number of the débutantes of the past Winter, assisted by those who are to be introduced next year and the Winter after next, and also by many of the youths and boys who are contemporary with these young ladies. Among those taking part in the sale will be the Misses Harriet Alexander, Janette Alexander, Civilse Alexander, Helen Alexander, Olivia Cutting, Alice Blaine Damrosch, Margaret Knower, Marion Kennedy, Maud Kennedy, Edith Mortimer, Mary Eleanor Mortimer, Olga Roosevelt, Jean Roosevelt, Rosina Hoyt Otis, Anna Dillon Ripley, Margaret Schieffelin, Joan Tuckerman, and others, and also the Masters Bronson Cutting, Hall Roosevelt, John Jay Schieffelin, Jr., John Jay Schieffelin, Louis Lee Stanton, Lansing McVickar, Roland Harriman, Sidney Dillon Ripley, Jr., Alfred Loomis, and Richard Mortimer, Jr. The proceeds will be for the establishment of the children's beds.

The necrology of the week has not been heavy. The death of Edward La Montagne throws a large family connection into mourning. Among his children are Ernest La Montagne and Miss Marie La Montagne, who are unmarried; Rene La Montagne, who married Miss Laura Morgan, a great-granddaughter of the Mr. Morgan who owned the celebrated peachblow vase; Edward, who married Miss Alice Weir, and Maurice, whose wife was Miss Emily Frith. Albert Gallup left only one surviving daughter, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Mottet of the Church of the Holy Communion. His sons, Albert and Howard, were both well-known clubmen. The eldest of these was at one time a Park Commissioner.

THE SOCIAL WHIRL.

MR. and Mrs. Ralph Samuel Townsend, 640 West End Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Olga Townsend, to George Pratt Cutter, son of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Cutter, well known residents of Orange, N. J. Miss Townsend is an enthusiastic horsewoman, and one of the season's débutantes. The wedding will take place on Monday, June 4, in the Dutch Collegiate Church, in West End Avenue, and will be followed by a reception for the relatives of the two families in Delmonico's. The couple will sail on the Campania, the following day, and after spending three months in Switzerland, will take in the fête in Paris, returning in September. They will receive their friends after Nov. 1 in Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Frederick D. Underwood, 2 West Seventy-second Street, wife of F. D. Underwood, President of the Erie Railroad, is stopping with a party in Los Angeles. She had planned to come home next week, but has changed her itinerary, and will not return until the middle of April.

There was a reception and tea for the Elmira College Club of New York City, in the residence of Mrs. Emil Köhler, 258 West Ninety-first Street, yesterday afternoon. The rooms were decorated with the college colors, purple and yellow, and the college flowers, pansies. Those who received with Mrs. Köhler were Mrs. Samuel Seaman Campbell, Chairman of entertainment committee; Mrs. Hiram H. Bice, Mrs. Lyman Crandall, and Miss Anna K. Hardy. Mrs. Bice and Mrs. Diefenthaler poured tea. The especial interest of the club at present is raising a fund of $50,000 for the college, to be known as the Cowles Memorial Fund, in honor of Dr. Augustus W. Cowles, who has been connected with the college for over fifty years, and is now President Emeritus. Arrangements are being made for the annual Easter luncheon, which will be given on the last Saturday in April in the Manhattan Hotel. The committee in charge will be Mrs. Frederick Hamlin Mills, Chairman; Mrs. S. S. Campbell, and Mrs. Albert Bogert. The toast mistress on that day will be Mrs. Clarence Lautand Bleakley.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Runyan Pyatt will give a large bridge party in the palm room of the Hotel Regent.

Cards are out for a bridge on Saturday. The hostess will be Mrs. Rastus Seneca Ransom, 338 West Seventy-seventh Street.

Mrs. Daniel A. Matthews and Miss Frances Aymar Matthews gave an at-home on Thursday in their apartments in the Kenesaw, 202 West 103d Street. They were assisted in entertaining by Ernestine Vallean Miller, who did a pretty little fan dance; Miss May Kinting, Miss Emily Gladys Lindes, Miss Mary Ener, Nathan Gans, Remington Fairlamb, and Bervalen Houfe. Miss Matthews and C. Russell Sage appeared in a delicious bit of acting — "The Charming Conversationalist." There were about a hundred guests present at this reception, which was the last Mrs. Matthews will give until after Easter.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Hilliard are expected to return this week to their home in the Spencer Arms, Broadway and Sixty-ninth Street, after some months spent traveling in the West.

The Riverside Day Nursery is giving a series of three bridge and hearts afternoons. The first one was on Tuesday, in the residence of Mrs. David Oliphant Haynes, 11 West Ninety-fourth Street. The members of the committee in charge are Mesdames Percy K. Klock, 220 Riverside Drive, Chairman; Morrison Gilmore, Charles Gregory, Ernest Pfarrius, D. O. Haynes, Annie Battin, John M. Mossman, John C. Noble, Eugene Hoffman Porter, Charles F. Terhune, and Miss Grace Thomson. The date for the second party is Tuesday, April 3. It will be given in the Hotel Regent, Broadway and Seventy-first Street. The third will take place on Wednesday, April 25, in the home of Mrs. Ernest Pfarrius, 57 West Seventieth Street.

On Tuesday, April 3, Mrs. Houston McIntosh Saddler, 321 West Seventy-eighth Street, will entertain the eight members of a luncheon club to which she belongs. The ladies are Mesdames Clarence E. Chapman, James H. Hutchins, William E. Bemis, William A. Morrison, Frederick Hamlin Mills, Charles B. Eaton, and William Augustus Barnum.

On Thursday, Mrs. John Beaver, 14 West 121st Street, entertained the card club of which she is a member. Others in the club are Mesdames B. F. Reese, President; L. W. Beckley, Henry Barbour, J. E. Elmendorf, J. B. Johnson, A. M. Joyce, E. T. Kilbourn, L. C. Outcault, E. D. Steaves, F. Van Slyke, T. S. Schlauch, and J. N. Williams.

Mrs. Clarence Lawson gave a rather small and altogether informal luncheon yesterday to a few of her friends, in her apartment in the Kenesaw, West 103d Street. The table decorations were Spring flowers.

The thirty-eighth annual breakfast of Sorosis on Monday was one of the daintiet affairs given by that club this season. The menus were prettily bound in parchment and embossed with a silver pineapple on a shield. The pineapple is the club emblem, and when a member has belonged to this "Mother of Clubs" for twenty-five years, she is presented with a tiny one of gold to attach to the club pin. One of the guests of honor was Mrs. John Miller Horton of Buffalo, N. Y. She is President of the City Federation there, and is the candidate of most of the New York clubs for the presidency of the State Federation. The constitution limits the term of presidency to two years for any one person, and Mrs. Philip Carpenter, who is now President, goes out of office in the Fall. Some of the two minute speakers at the breakfast were Mrs. Charlotte Wilbour, President of Sorosis; Mrs. D. T. S. Denison, Honorary President General Federation; Mrs. Fanny Hallock Carpenter, President of State Federation; Mrs. Fannie I. Helmuth, Honorary President, State Federation; Mrs. William Gerry Slade, President National Society, United States Daughters, 1812; Mrs. Belle de Rivera, President City Federation; Mrs. Evangeline W. Blashfield, Mrs. Cynthia Weston Alden, Mrs. Esther Herrman, Mrs. Harry Wallerstein, Mrs. Mary E. Trautman, Mrs. Mary MacNutt, Mrs. Clarence Burns, Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, Mrs. Clarence Beebe, Mrs. Miriam Mason Greeley, Miss Elizabeth Reid, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. The breakfast was followed by the installation of officers and a programme of music.

The Washington Heights Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will hold a bridge and euchre in the east room of the Waldorf on Friday. The Regent is Mrs. Kramer, 238 West 139th Street. The details are in charge of Mrs. Walter Geer, 246 West Seventy-second Street.

Yesterday Harry M. Newington of the class of '81, Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., gave a dinner to the members of the Alumni living in or near New York at present at his home, 323 106th Street. After the dinner a number of good stories were told and college songs sung. Some of the guests were A. F. D'Oench, '72; Dr. F. E. D'Oench, '74; Dr. E. A. Engler, '76; G. H. Pelgram, '77; N. W. Perkins, '81; E. L. Herndon, '82; C. W. Bryan, '84; M. H. Ittner, '92; C. Gordan Reel, '93; George I. Bouton, '94, and F. C. Woerman, '99.

Mrs. Charles O. Maas has returned from a visit of some weeks in Atlantic City to her apartments in La Rochelle.

There was a meeting on Monday afternoon of the Ideals Club, Mrs. Harry Newington, President, at the home of Mrs. William Terhune, the Vice President, 32 West Eighty-second Street. Some of those present were Mesdames Thomas King, Edward O. Brien, Frank Jordan, W. Jordan, Clarence Postley Gardner, William Murray Crombie, and Miss Florence Smith and Miss Orr. In spite of the inclemency of the weather there was a large attendance, nearly all of the forty members being present. The membership is limited, and the club has a long waiting list. There was a lecture at this meeting on Enoch Arden by Mrs. Clark, with music to illustrate, and some vocal solos by Mrs. Lippincott. The next social meeting of the club will take the form of a luncheon, and will be given on Monday, April 16, in the Waldorf.

A pretty luncheon was that given by the Manhattan Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, on Wednesday, in the Hotel Astor. The affair was given in honor of Mrs. William Cummings Story, Regent of the Chapter and candidate for the office of Vice State Regent. The table decorations were dainty marguerites and ferns. Some of the guests of honor were Mesdames John Miller Horton, James Cunningham Hazen, William Lindsay, William Todd Helmuth, H. Du Bois Hudler, James J. Kramer, William Gerry Slade, and Miss Mary J. Seymour. The toastmistress was Mrs. James Griswold Wentz. She was also one of the committee in charge, which included Mrs. Frank Fillmore Davis, Mrs. Frank Stuart Osborn, Mrs. John Fowler Trow, and Mrs. Doré Lyon, Chairman.

The Neighborhood Bridge Club, of which Mrs. Richard Esterbrook is President, will meet to-morrow, with Mrs. Leonard Hill, in her home in the Ansonia.

Two weddings of the Easter season will be those of Miss Mabel Louise Storm, 2[illegible] West Eighty-first Street, to Joseph E. Simmons, and Miss Evelyn Willis Hunter, 1 West Sixty-eighth Street, to Keith Donaldson.

On Tuesday the members of Euterpe will meet for a game of euchre in the East Room of the Waldorf. Those in charge are Mrs. Alcinous B. Jamison, President; Mrs. W. W. Miller, Mrs. R. H. Reed, and Mrs. J. G. Foster.

On Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Charles Albert Whittier will give a large reception in their apartments in the Ansonia, from 4 until 7. Mrs. Charles E. Sprague will assist in receiving.

The next meeting of the Thursday Evening Card Club will be held at the home of the Brooklyn member, Mrs. William Augustus Barnum, 118 St. Mark's Avenue. In the club are Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Miguel E. de Aguero, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Henry Goff, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hamlin Mills, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hutchins, Mr. and Mrs. William Hopping Barron, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brunswick Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Eaton, Mrs. E. L. Lathrop, and Parker Prince Simmons. The last meeting was held with Mrs. Lathrop, and the prizes were dainty little bits of painted china, the handiwork of the hostess.

Mrs. William C. Boone, 327 Central Park West, is giving a series of card parties. A large one was held on St. Patrick's Day, and the decorations and favors were all in green—shamrocks, tiny pipes, and green carnations. Another was given on Monday, and was smaller and more informal.

Col. and Mrs. Charles E. Sprague, 116 West Seventy-fifth Street, have recently returned from a trip to Atlantic City. They gave a dance to about thirty of the younger set, for their niece, Miss Bertha Sprague, on Thursday evening. The Auxiliary No. 1 of the Little Mothers' Aid will meet on Tuesday with Mrs. Sprague for one of the series of Lenten bridge parties. She is Chairman of the Auxiliary, and has resumed her duties in this and in the sewing class, which meets under her direction on Mondays.

The patronesses for the series of Oriental dances given in the Hudson Theatre on Thursday by "Rahda" were Mesdames William Allen, Karl Bitter, Paul Leicester Ford, Richard Mansfield, Richard Watson Gilder, Edwin Blashfield, Arthur Davies, Harry Harkness Flagler, F. H. Bosworth, Ben Ali Haggin, Henry W. Hardon, Otto H. Kahn, George A. Meyer, Eliot Norton, J. Allen Weir, Howard Tayler, George Nichols, Allen Tucker, Philip Conway Sawyer, Adrian H. Joline, and Charles C. Worthington. Tea was served after the dance.

An interesting programme was prepared for dramatic day of the Daughters of Indiana in New York City, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, President. It was held in the Hotel Astor on Monday. Mrs. William C. Breed was Chairman of Entertainment.

There was a reception and musicale yesterday afternoon in the residence of Mrs. Seth Low, 30 East Sixty-fourth Street, for the Ladies' Advisory Committee, Christian Association, Columbia University. THE WORLD OF ART AND ARTISTS

Unpatriotic Sculpture

HOW often must it occur to citizens of a retiring temperament to render thanks for the existence of vigilant and bold spirits who espy dangers to the State, and without taking thought, without hesitating one moment, fly to the rescue of an imperiled community? Too often we look on without a protest.

"When I see one of them slobs beatin' a horse," remarked one gentlewoman on a car to the other in a staccato voice, "I sometimes almost forgets I'm a lady."

It has always hung over us like a nightmare that some day a statue should be erected in the State of New York to a King. The beginning has been made in Washington, where Unser Fritz, a bad man who had a low opinion of republics and didn't really send George Washington that sword at all, may be seen in all the glory of bronze—the portrait of a King, and the gift of an Emperor! But so far New York State has escaped.

The anguish that such a statue ought to inflict on every properly constituted citizen of the Empire State, if such were to be raised, has been felt with prophetic throb by one of our legislators at Albany. He has introduced a bill forbidding the erection of any statue to any foreign Emperor, King, Prince, sovereign, potentate, monarch, or spy. When that bill receives the Governor's signature a great sigh of relief will rise from 8,000,000 hearts, such a sigh as comes from an unsuspected peril suddenly realized and passed.

It may be that sculptors will chafe at this curtailment of their privilege as artists to carve whom and what they please. It may be that the people of St. Louis will scoff and ask the originator of that bill if he dare to come down there and say anything against the private and public character of King Louis the Saint! The citizens of Kingston and the bold boroughers of Queens may threaten him with tar and feathers; but a grand, pure patriot like him must be as dauntless as he is wise. A person capable of evolving out of his inner consciouslessness such a pearl of legislation is like Habakuk; he is capable of anything.

Think of having lived so long without reflecting on this ghastly danger! To wake some morning and through the blameless trees on the Mall in Central Park discover a colossal seated effigy of her Majesty Tsi Ann of China, or, while turning one's virtuous republican footsteps down Fifth Avenue have all the Americanism in one squashed flat by the sight of a portrait of his Holiness Pius X. on the façade of St. Patrick's Cathedral! Think of our blindness! Of course, if a statue of Edward VII. should once find a place on our soil the country would go to the dogs. And as for his Majesty Wilhelm II.—well, that would be the end of all things; we might just as well be done with it and invite Prince Henry over here to take the Presidency.

The only trouble with this bill is that it does not go far enough. To be sure, it means the removal of the Nathan Hale from City Hall Park, for Hale was a spy, and the bill includes spies in the taboo. The famous pathbreaker at Albany must not quibble about foreign spies and home spies. Spies are spies. There's Ben Franklin on Printing House Square; he did quite a neat little job in that line when in England. Out he goes, too!

But our legislative patriot is not drastic enough. "Empire" State. Whew! That will never pass. It belongs with Emperors. Tammany must drop its tiger, which is notoriously Royal, and likewise Bengal. The Holland Society must not dream of erecting that statue of William the Silent, lest it affect the minds of our youth and sap their sturdy democracy like a vampire. The ladies at the opera who wear tiaras must be arrested; they are horribly suggestive; and policemen should at once seize any man in a Prince Albert coat; no patriot should be seen in such a garb.

The consequences must be faced if we are not to be reckoned curs, poltroons, weak-minded, monarchical zeros. Bridge whist poisons the minds of millions daily by the constant contemplation of Kings and Queens. Card playing should be stopped by law until these germs of royalism, worse than the bacteria of yellow fever, are stamped out of every pack. Collectors of postage stamps are in even greater danger, for the pictures of all the royalties on earth may be found on them. There they lurk, infecting the souls of our blessed republican innocents, who little know what deadly things are entering their minds. Of course one State cannot dictate to the country at large, but through our Senators in Congress, always so eagle-eyed, always searching for some way to be useful to us, we might place before the Union the necessity of notifying foreign Governments that on and after a certain date the American mails would no longer be open to letters carrying stamps which bear the effigy of "Emperor, King, Prince, sovereign, potentate, monarch, or spy."

No statues to bloated, effete monarchs, but a big one of brass—and lay it long in pickle—to that giant intellect at Albany who has saved us from dangers undreamed of by any other man.

CURRENT ART NEWS

AN exhibition of oils by American painters has been opened in Watertown, N. Y., at the Silas L. George Gallery with thirty-five pictures, the "first competitive" ever made in that city by the lake. Figure pieces include "The Sun Screen," by F. Luis Mora; "Red Kimono," by Frederic Baker; "Ideal Head," by J. Redding Kelley; "Holland Dame," by Robert D. Gauley; "Industrious Family," by J. G. Brown; "My Country Cousin," by Howard L. Hildebrandt, and "Spirit of Spring," by F. V. Du Mond. Among the waterscapes are "Moonlight," by Paul Dougherty, "North River," by G. Myles Collier; "Swimming Pool," by Jules Turcas; "Outward Bound," by Henry B. Snell, and "Under Drifting Clouds," by E. W. de Haven. Childe Hassam shows his sparkling "Summer Forenoon, Isles of Shoals," and William H. Drake his animal struggle, "End of the Duel." Harry Fenn, F. K. M. Rehn, A. L. Groll, Frank de Haven, William Merritt Post, Allen B. Talcott, and Irving Couse are also represented. Mr. Charles Frederick Naegele gave a talk to the Municipal Improvement League last week in which he outlined a plan by which the league could raise the funds to buy every year a picture for the picture gallery in the Roswell Flower Memorial Library, lately opened in Watertown.

An exhibition of fine impressionistic photographs by Mr. Edward J. Steichen will be visible in the little galleries of the Photo-Secession, 291 Fifth Avenue, near Thirtieth Street, until April 5.

⁂

De Fornaro is a chartered libertine among the artists; he scruples not to take advantage of a half hour in the studio of a fellow artist to make a thumb-nail sketch of him at work or play and serve the sketch up in a few lines of caricature. To-day we catch Mr. Carroll Beckwith doing things to an innocent canvas which cannot talk back, but sometimes may go back on a heedless painter. Mr. de Fornaro is a cosmopolite from Bengal who finds himself an American, but is equally at home in India, France, or Italy He is about to take a trip to Paris for a twelvemonth stay.

⁂

In preparation for the exhibition and sale at the American Art Association of the art collection of Joseph Jefferson, for which an elaborate catalogue will be issued, the pictures in the late actor's residence on Buzzard's Bay are being photographed. Mr. Jefferson owned some very remarkable Anton Mauves and notable examples of old Dutch art. The sale will be a conspicuous event in the present art season.

⁂

At the current exhibition of the Society of American Artists, (the last,) 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, there have been bought for the Shaw Fund of 1906 "La France Roses," by John F. Weir; "Flying Kites," by C. C. Curran, reproduced in the pictorial supplement of THE TIMES last Sunday; and "In Cloud Regions," an Alpine landscape by Edward H. Potthast.

What the Artists Are Doing

E. IRVING COUSE is at work at present on a large water color for the American Water Color Society's annual exhibition, which he calls "The Enchanted Wood." It shows an Indian boy crouched down behind a group of quaking aspen trees watching some turkeys in an opening in the grove. Mr. Couse is going West in June to his studio in New Mexico to get material for several commissions for Indian pictures.

⁂

Vincenzo Alfano has just completed a life-sized group of three female figures, which, since it is intended to ornament the façade of a new hotel at Coney Island, will serve to set a standard for such decorations at that resort. One of these figures, the central one, is standing with her arms lifted above her head, where her hands clasp the base of what is to be an electrolier. The other two figures are kneeling on either side, and they are also holding staffs that, when the group is in place, will be the bases of electroliers, thus making a group of three brilliant lights, supported by an uncommonly artistic base.

Emil Carlsen is at work on a large canvas, which he calls "Moonlight." The composition shows a full moon just showing over one of two trees that stand solitary in a wide expanse of meadow land. He has also recently completed a marine that is much in the vein of his big Academy picture. The waves are dashing against a low rock, while the sun is breaking through the clouds, casting a streak of light on the ocean in the background.

⁂

Paul Nocquet finished last week a group called "The Bacchanal" and a single figure entitled "The Guilty Woman." He is also at work on a portrait group of a mother and child.

⁂

Portrait commissions are keeping Helen Watson Phelps close to her easel at present. She is painting a half-length seated figure of Marcus Mayer, which is to find a place in the house of the Lambs' Club, and also one of Mrs. Charles Phelps. Miss Phelps who has a reputation for "discovering" new models, has one at present whose red hair is particularly attractive, and from whom she has painted a head in which the hair is brought out in even more striking contrast by the pink evening gown the young woman wears and the pink chrysanthemums introduced as accessories.

⁂

Agnes McCahill has just completed a small, full-length figure of Christ, that is a remarkably dignified and individual piece of modeling. She is working on a figure of Victory, and has just completed two small figures of Commodore Barry and of Paul Jones. In the latter, the great seaman carries a telescope in his left hand, while over his right shoulder is draped an American flag.

⁂

For a short time every Winter Karl Anderson indulges himself at a turn at painting instead of his usual work of illustrating. Having had the canvas he has been at work on accepted for the Society show, he has returned to doing some illustrations for the Saturday Evening Post.

⁂

William Ritschel has two of his Holland scenes under way at present, one being a little corner of a Dutch landscape with a group of black and white cows resting under the shade of a few trees that stand by the side of one of the ever-present canals of that land. In strong contrast to this sunny bit of nature is a moonlight scene, which he calls "Folding the Sheep." This shows an angle of a farmyard, with the white wall of the house gleaming in the moonlight and the flock of sheep slowly making their way to the fold that shows in the rear of a haystack, over the top of which the moon is breaking through a characteristic Dutch sky.

TALK OF THE STUDIOS

C. de Fornaro.

WELL-KNOWN NEW YORK ARTISTS AS SEEN BY A CARICATURIST.
I.—CARROLL BECKWITH.

Mr. Woodbury is represented by a group of water colors at the present International Exhibition, now open in London. He is one of three or four American artists who were invited to contribute. He has another group on view at the Art Club in Boston, which he expects to transfer to San Francisco. Sales have depleted the collection to such an extent that he is now busy trying to fill out the vacant places. He is also represented by an exhibition of oils, including some of his well-known wave pictures, at the Rhode Island School of Design, in Providence. Mr. Woodbury will not exhibit in New York this season. He plans, however, to show a collection of his pictures here next year. He received a silver medal at St. Louis in 1904. He is President of the Boston Water Club, a member of the St. Botolph Club of that city, and also of the New York Water Club and the Society of American Artists.

⁂

H. M. Walcott of Rutherford, N. J., is busy as usual painting compositions of children and subjects in which motion permits of the greatest variety in form and color. Speaking of titles, Mr. Walcott says: "The title of a picture I consider of secondary importance. I never like to say what a title will be until the canvas is finished, as the picture is subject to many changes."

⁂

E. Irving Couse of the Sherwood Studios has sold "The Mountain Hunter" to a collector from Portland, Ore. The picture represents a Pueblo Indian hunting wild geese, bow and arrow in hand; he is tramping over a spur of the Rocky Mountains and through a grove of quaking aspen. "The Ambush," an Indian in a crouching attitude midst a thick growth of cottonwood trees, has been purchased by a member of the Vanderbilt family for private collection. Mr. Couse has just received a commission to paint a lunette for the music room in the house of a Western connoisseur, the subject to be Indian in character. He is also preparing several pictures for the forthcoming annual exhibition of the American Water Color Society. Notable among these is an "Indian Shepherd Boy," with gray effects, portraying a young Indian seated near a campfire guarding a flock of sheep. "Roasting Corn," which was shown at the American Water Color Show in London, has been acquired by a collector from Erie, Penn., who saw the painting on view at the recent exhibition of the Erie Art Club. At the present society exhibition Mr. Couse is represented by a characteristic Indian study entitled "Medicine Fires."

⁂

Carl Blenner of the Sherwood artist colony has just received a bronze medal from the International Jury of Awards at the St. Louis Exposition for his ideal figurepiece, entitled, "Youth." Mr. Blenner is engaged in painting a group of four ideal heads in pastel, comprising distinct types of a blonde, a Titian-haired girl, and beauties of the South and Spain. He has also started to paint a portrait of Mrs. David Flake and daughter, and has several other portrait commissions under way. Mr. Blenner built a studio at Morris Cove last season, a picturesque place on Long Island Sound, not far from New Haven, where he frequently goes for short outings, and where he plans to spend the Summer.

⁂

"A Breezy Day on Highland Beach," by Albert L. Groll, has been added to the collection of American paintings at the Lotos Club. The scene is a Summer day on the Jersey coast, with figures of little children playing on the sand, and permitting a variety of colors. In the foreground a child, accompanied by its mother, is flying a red balloon. Mr. Groll at present is engaged in painting a rainstorm on the Arizona plains, with colorful rainbow effect. His large picture entitled "California Redwoods," which is a portrayal of the giant red trees of Mendocino County on the Pacific slope, is now on view in the Fifth Avenue art gallery of William Schaus. Mr. Groll made the first sketch of the California redwoods during his tour of the West last Summer. He completed the painting in his studio recently.

⁂

William De Leftwich Dodge has recently taken up portraiture between some of his commissions for mural decorations. He has just finished a bust portrait of Lucian Mérignac, the Parisian fencer, who is depicted foil in hand. He has also completed a bust portrait of Sadakichi Hartmann, a littérateur and contributor to current magazines. Another portrait in his studio is that of Roger Pryor, Jr., a three-quarter length standing likeness. Of a decorative character is a recently completed portrait in oval form, a three-quarter figure of Mrs. Joseph Knapp. Mr. Dodge has finished his commission for the decoration of the Hotel Algonquin, the scene being the blue waters of the Bay of Naples. Two mural decorations by his brush for the residence of Webb Horton of Middletown, N. Y., include a painting of "Music" for the music room and "Venus Arranging Her Toilet" for the reception room in the same house. An interesting conceit by Mr. Dodge is the painting of a Japanese girl with fan in hand.

⁂

J. J. Shannon, the portraitist, is holding an exhibition of his recent portraits in Boston. His portrait group of Mrs. Herbert M. Sears and daughter will be sent to England shortly. He has a number of portrait commissions to fulfill in Boston which will keep him busy into April. His New York studio is in the Bryant Park Building.

⁂

Mural decorations for a new Episcopal cathedral at Portland, Me., are being executed by John La Farge, Edmund C. Tarbell, and Philip Hale. Mr. La Farge is engaged upon the altar piece. Mr. Tarbell is working upon a commission for twelve of the panels; the six panels assigned to Mr. Hale are about completed.

⁂

George M. Reevs of 47 West Twenty-second Street has recently completed several portrait commissions, including a three-quarter length figure of Mrs. B. L. Sinsheimer of this city, and also a bust portrait of the late Halcyon Skinner, formerly of Yonkers, N. Y.

⁂

Charles Albert Lopez, sculptor, who has a studio in the Broadway Arcade, has recently returned from Paris, where he has been engaged upon a statue of the late President William McKinley, of heroic size Mr. Lopez gave a reception to a number of well-known artists in his studio on Thursday night. Among those present were Everett Shinn, Isidor Conti, and Carl von Rydingsvärd. He has exhibited at the Salon, Paris, and received a gold medal at the St. Louis Exposition. He has several important sculpture commissions under way.

⁂

C. P. Grafe, who completed a large mural decoration for a hotel in San Francisco not long ago, has also painted several portraits recently, including a bust likeness of Alois Burgstaller, the German tenor, and a member of Herr Conried's Metropolitan Opera Company. A recent figure piece from his brush is entitled "The Troubadour."

⁂

Charles Vezin, whose landscape, "The Last of the Palisades," was shown at the Lewis and Clark Exposition in Portland, Ore., and later at the National Academy, is represented at the Society show by a large landscape with sunset effect. He has also recently completed a three-quarter length life-size portrait of Vernon Ledoux, the poet.

⁂

The sixteenth annual exhibition of the Society of Washington Artists was opened in the Corcoran Gallery at the Capital on March 19. The exhibition, which includes the pictures of many well-known Washington artists, will continue until April 7.

⁂

Paul Nauen, a portrait painter, who came from Munich to this city last Fall, has just returned to New York from Lenox, where he has been fulfilling a number of commissions in portraiture, including several members of the Colgate family.

⁂

The thirty-ninth annual business meeting of the American Water Color Society was held in the Sherwood Studio building on Wednesday night. Officers for the ensuing year were elected, and plans were discussed in regard to the forthcoming exhibition of the society, which opens to the public in the American Fine Arts Galleries on May 3. Carlton T. Chapman, the marine artist, is Secretary of the water colorists.

⁂

Henry Golden Dearth, who has a studio in Carnegie Hall, gave a reception recently, when he showed several recent landscapes, sketched in France. Mr. Dearth was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Dearth. He will go abroad late in April and will spend the Summer at Montreuil, France.

⁂

Jonas Lie of Plainfield, N. J., is represented at the New Gallery by a score or more of his landscapes, studies of windswept fields in Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter. A recent landscape from his brush has been hung in a private gallery at Plainfield. His paintings will be on view until April 1.

⁂

Arthur Schneider, who spent several years in Morocco, is exhibiting a collection of water colors, painted during his six years' sojourn abroad, at the galleries of William Clausen on Fifth Avenue. His water colors may be seen there until March 31.

LOST DAUGHTER.

TWO women were having luncheon at the Holland yesterday. One of them told this story:

"At the time of the Pan-American I was taking my daughter to a boarding school. We were to get a Boston car at Buffalo, and when we arrived there the station was the scene of the greatest confusion imaginable.

"It was the day President McKinley's body was being taken to Washington, and naturally the ordinary exposition crowd was tremendously increased. There was a large military guard and numerous police, aside from the station officials, endeavoring to preserve some sort of order and system.

"I was entirely unfamiliar with the station and, even if I had not been, the conditions which existed then would have been bewildering. My daughter was only fifteen and quite inexperienced, never having traveled an hour's distance alone.

"We had about twenty minutes in which to get our train. I knew it came in in two sections, and I looked helplessly around to find some one to tell me which one my seats were in. Finally I discovered the ticket offices were up stairs. There were several temporary stairways leading to the offices, and near the foot of one of them was an amiable-looking man in uniform.

"We had been so pushed and shoved by the hurrying crowd and there were so many people mounting these stairs that I despaired of taking all our bags and bundles with me, so I asked this man if my small girl might be allowed to stand where we were until I returned. She had the usual accompaniment of a departure for boarding school—an armful of flowers, candy, and books, in addition to our bags and umbrellas. 'Now, Margaret,' I said, 'if you move from this place it will be perfectly impossible for me to find you again. Don't you stir till I come, even if some one says I've sent for you. I'll be back just as soon as I find out about our train.'

"After some delay and trouble I discovered that we belonged on the second section, due to leave in fifteen minutes. I hurried to the foot of the stairs. Margaret had disappeared! There was absolutely not a trace of our baggage—not an umbrella—not even a flower! I never was so frightened in my life.

"By this time the crowd seemed to have doubled. Lines of soldiers were keeping the people back and the funeral party was getting ready to leave. I spoke to a man I could have sworn was the one whose permission I had asked to have Margaret wait at the stairs. He declared he had been standing there half an hour and hadn't noticed any little girl. I was in despair. I rushed back and forth asking every one I encountered if he had seen her. I was losing my self-control; I realized afterward the spectacle I must have made. No one had any assistance to offer. To add to my distress I was conscious of the attentive gaze of an old man, who had evidently heard my first inquiries. The minute I observed his interest I felt certain he knew something about her; of course he said he didn't. But the way he followed me around after that was positively terrifying.

"You'll never guess what I did. I don't know how it occurred to me, but just then I heard the man with the megaphone calling trains. I ran up stairs again, followed, if you please, by that old man (by this time I was morally convinced there was something significant in his interest) and implored the assistance of the megaphone. I can't tell you how people stopped and stared when that big thing roared forth: 'Is Margaret Gilchrist in the station?' Three times the man called and absolutely no response from any quarter. Can you blame me for feeling nearly wild?

"Suddenly somebody touched my arm. 'There's a young girl standing on the opposite side of the station, I told her I thought her mother was looking for her, but she refused to move.' Well! It was Margaret of course. In my excitement and perplexity I had come down the wrong stairs.

"We had just time to get the train. As the last bag was handed on, some one called me, I turned—there was that old man again! I shall never forgive myself for misjudging him, or forget the earnest way he said: 'Have you found your daughter?'

"'Yes,' I told him.

"'Thank God!' he exclaimed, I lost my girl years ago in Berlin, and have never seen her since.'"

Mr. Funk on Portraiture

Technique Least of Difficulties—Once the Character Is Seized the Battle Is More Than Half Won.

PORTRAITS have always been the chief breadwinners for the artist-painter, but during recent years it has become so rich a mine, favored artists have amassed such wealth by the making of likenesses, that the popular idea of the esthetical knight of the brush who lives in a garret and rarely pays his bills, the idea of the artist who wears his hair long because barbers cost something, and borrows an evening coat to appear in society has become as dim a memory as the days of chivalry. Nowadays the portrait painter once started on his road to a million owns an automobile and gives champagne and champignons for supper. He has a yacht and will presently invest in a flying machine. Financiers regard him with respect as soon as they discover the size of the check they have to sign when they pay for the portraits of wife and daughters.

New York has seen portraitists of nearly every race and nation, not excluding Armenians, Japanese, and Turks, rushing hither to the market for their wares. The big voices and the crack performers on instruments are no longer the artists who alone find this city the home of El Dorado. Norwegian, Dutch, German, Belgian, French, British, Swiss, Austrian, Hungarian, and Italian painters swarm hither and for the most part discover sitters with purses most hospitable, especially glad to turn those purses inside out if the painter has already portrayed some emperor or empress, king or queen, nobleman or lady of high-sounding name, or else persons of mark on the stage or in diplomacy. It is a posing and a brushing, an exhibiting, and an emulation, both of sitters and craftsmen, which is worthy of Vanity Fair.

Apropos of the portraits of fair ladies reproduced in the tinted supplement to-day the remarks of Mr. Wilhelm Funk, a successful portrait painter now for many years acclimated in Yankeeland, may be of interest.

"Standards of portrait painting," remarked Mr. Funk the other day, as he set aside a canvas regretfully while the light in the big studio in Forty-second Street waned, "are higher in this city than in any other I know of. Whether it is because of the extraordinary competition, which is the result of an apparently unlimited demand and the answer of native and foreign workmen, or owing to the keenness of the American women, who furnish nine-tenths of that demand, I cannot say. But the fact remains that neither in Berlin nor Vienna, Paris nor London, are such exactions made on the painting power of artists as here. The demand for portraits is enormous and seems to increase rather than diminish.

"Sargent has work for three years in advance, Shannon has more than he can attend to, Irving R. Wiles, William M. Chase, Frank Fowler, John Alexander, B. C. Porter, Jongers—and I might add a dozen names of resident painters, are as busy as bees. And then come transient foreigners, like Koppay and Fuchs, Leempoels and Melchers, who descend on New York for a season, and not without success."

On a big easel stands the triple portrait of Mrs. W. Willoughby Sharp and her children which may be seen reproduced in the Pictorial Supplement. It is a large square canvas designed to crown a certain fireplace in Mr. Sharp's house in an interior distinctively colonial. The mother wears a gown of 1830, and a hat of that period such as recent fashions have brought back. The undergown is dark old rose, the overgown a flowered gold brocade. The little girl who cuddles against her mother wears a blue silk dress which is shown only in part, owing to the piece of old reddish brocade that goes partly round her and her mother. The little boy is in black. All these colors form a rich and agreeable combination, while the composition makes a pyramid. One thinks of the rich palette of Sir Joshua and of Gainsborough, but the brushwork is less suave. It is the largest and most important as well as the most successful woman's portrait Mr. Funk has executed.

"What is your idea as to portrait painting?"

"Hard to say—at least—well, I can tell what I do not think it ought to be, and that is it should not be 'just go ahead and paint.' I have heard men express it that way, but it seems to me either a method of turning the question aside or a flatly false idea."

"You mean that painter craft alone is not enough?"

"Something like that. I mean that in portraiture technical cleverness is the least of the difficulties."

"The character, then?"

"The main thing to answer is, 'What is the Person before me!' How can I get at the individuality of the sitter? For if I can once decide upon that—it may be seized, and once seized, more than half the battle is won."

"Do you find it easier to paint men or women?"

"That depends. I must say that it is very, very difficult to paint young women. Not only because their faces are smooth and unwrinkled, not yet decided as to character, or rather with their characters concealed under the color and bloom of youth and therefore difficult to detect, but also because they instinctively withdraw themselves from observation. If not shy and awkward, they are still accustomed to parry inquiring eyes by an air of indifference. Much younger people are easier, because unconscious; old people best, because life has set its seal on them and character shows."

"How about men?"

"They are most difficult from an entirely different reason—because so hard to get to sit at all."

"Less vanity, eh?"

"I don't say that. For one thing they seem to be ashamed to sit for their portraits, as if it were effeminate. They have to be driven to it by the women of the family. And when they do come they grudge the hours as if they were made of gold."

"Ah, yes," sighed Mr. Funk, "I know the national adage, 'Time is gold.'"

"But perhaps your greatest successes have been in portraits of men?"

"There is Gen. Horace Porter," he continued, pointing to a full-length standing likeness in a fur overcoat. "It was objected to, on the part of some one, that it is not stiff, upright, in uniform; it does not represent the soldier. True enough. But consider the number of pictures of the General in uniform. I wanted to depict him in another phase. I want to show Porter the Diplomat—just as true to life and not hackneyed."

"Have you noticed in the one-man shows made by popular portraitists how often the same notes seem repeated?"

"Yes—the same droop of the head, the same way of painting hair and eyes, the same dress—generally white. But that comes about so. A lady is painted and the result is voted a success. Then her friends come and ask to be pictured in the same attitude and the same kind of gown. What is the artist to do?"

"Why, refuse to be dictated to."

"Ah, that is easily said. But when one of these charmers has set it in her little head to be painted in just this way, in just this gown, a man's advice goes for nothing."

"So you have your troubles with your sitters?"

"Oh, I try to hold my own. You see, she needn't take the picture if it doesn't suit her. No, I can't say I've had much trouble that way. I go over the matter very thoroughly beforehand, discussing gowns—all the gowns—and if nothing is right, why, then, a gown is made that meets the requirements."

"But you haven't said whether you prefer to paint men or women—"

"Oh, that," said Mr. Funk, pensively and somewhat diplomatically, "that depends."

TROPICAL OYSTERS.

AUSTIN, Texas, March 21.—The fact is not generally known, even in Texas, that the tropical oyster, which is entirely different in appearance and habits from the oysters found in the markets of this country, is successfully raised along the extreme Southern Gulf Coast of this State. F. W. Seabury, Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, who has made a study of oysters for several years, says in regard to this tropical breed of oysters:

"The oyster which is grown in the vicinity of Point Isabel and along the Gulf coast as far as a short distance below Corpus Christi is a tropical bivalve and of wholly different species from the oysters along other portions of the Texas coast and Atlantic seaboard. The Point Isabel oyster is eaten during the Summer season, commencing about the 1st of May, the season lasting till about the 1st of September. This tropical oyster begins to spawn in September, which is just at the time the oysters north of here become fit for eating. The Point Isabel oyster spawns in Fall and Winter, and the Northern oyster, even those at Corpus Christi and Port Lavaca, spawn in Summer. The Point Isabel oyster can be eaten in any of the months not containing the letter 'r.' The reverse is true of the other oysters.

"The fact that the Point Isabel oyster has a season entirely different from that of other oysters should make it in demand, and I look for a great industry to be built up in cultivating and shipping these bivalves. The Laguna Madre, where the Point Isabel oyster is grown, affords a splendid place for oyster beds. The lagoon is four or five miles wide, and the water is highly impregnated with salt, which insures the growth of good oysters. With direct railroad connection with the outside world there is no reason why an immense oyster shipping business should not be built up at Point Isabel.

"Of course the people would have to be educated into eating oysters during the hot months of Summer, but I believe that could be easily done. I know of my own knowledge that these oysters form a most palatable dish on the hottest days of Summer. I have eaten them many times. In Brownsville these oysters are the principal food for many people all Summer long. There is a fine opportunity awaiting some enterprising person to plant oyster beds in the Laguna Madre, in the Point Isabel region. It will bring a big fortune to whoever undertakes it. These tropical oysters are far better than the other Texas oysters. They are smaller than the Corpus Christi, Port Lavaca, or Galveston oysters, and more resemble the famous Blue Points. Oyster roasts have been a popular form of entertainment for a long time during the Summer months at Point Isabel."

The fish and oyster laws contain a provision exempting oysters from a certain point below Corpus Christi from the operation of that provision which prohibits their shipment and sale during the months which do not contain the letter "r." This exemption was placed on the bill through the effort of Mr. Seabury. There is, therefore, nothing in the way of the Point Isabel oysters being shipped during the Summer months if a market can be made for them.

REALTY MARKET'S BREADTH ITS FOREMOST FEATURE

Dealings Cover Remarkable Range—Transportation the Prime Factor—City's Expansion and Its Relation to Values.

To those who marveled at the earlier stages of the present remarkable activity in metropolitan real estate, which had its beginnings about two years ago, there are just two facts which stand out as the important features in the situation to-day—namely, the wonderful breadth of the market and the remarkably large and apparently increasing number of people who are turning their attention to real estate as a field for speculation and investment.

Time was when the Manhattan real estate man—broker, operator, or investor—was a power unto himself, watching keenly for favorable opportunities in the supposedly magic area included by the North, East, and Harlem Rivers, but lured with difficulty to the Bronx, and disposed to sneer at any mention of the other three boroughs now part of the greater city. How conditions have changed within a year or a year and a half! Builders and operators who prior to that time could not have been induced to leave Manhattan are to-day developing new neighborhoods beyond the Harlem. No small proportion of the business of the last six months in Queens has had as active participants those who eighteen months ago were scouring Washington Heights and the Bronx in search of opportunities for profitable buying. Brooklyn, moreover, is displaying fully as great staying quanties in its real estate activity as are the older boroughs, with its 8,500 conveyances of property last week, as against 6,500 for the corresponding week last year; with new construction being projected at the rate of $750,000 a week, and with the total number of plans filed since Jan. 1 nearly 200 in excess of the number for the same period last year.

The one underlying condition upon which all of this activity is based is improved transit, coupled with a belief that the city is entering upon an era of growth in business and population that will make its wonderful past records in these particulars appear insignificant. The Subway has only added to the demonstrations afforded by the elevated roads in showing how New York can grow northward, but the great fact is that the city is soon to have at its disposal transportation facilities that will enable it to expand in all directions. Five years hence the man whose place of business is either downtown or in the rapidly growing mercantile district north of Twenty-third Street will not find himself limited to taking a surface car or train running northward in order to reach his home in reasonable time and without discomfort. He will be able to go east to Queens, west to New Jersey, or south to Brooklyn just as easily as he can go north, and it will be interesting to note, when these conditions have been established, how long the tradition will be preserved that the only Simon Pure New Yorker is the one who lives on Manhattan Island.

This will be the problem the answer to which must govern the real estate speculation of the immediate future—whether the same ratio of increase in value can be developed over the vast territory to be reached by the city's enlarged transit system as was maintained when New York's growth was limited to one direction. For years the city grew rapidly in population with practically no very large extensions of its transportation facilities. Since the beginning of the new century these conditions have been reversed, in that, while the population has continued to increase at a phenomenal rate, there have been projected even more remarkable transit improvements.

That the radius of the metropolitan circle is to be doubled means that its area is to be increased fourfold—that there is four times as much land within twenty miles of the City Hall as there is within a ten-mile circle. With this fact in view, even admitting an increase in population more rapid than at present, it is evident that a greater degree of discernment will be necessary in property buying than in the days when the city's growth was so much more confined.

There is no reason to believe that Manhattan will suffer by reason of this expansion. The larger the region tributary to it the greater will be the demand for its properties and the higher its values. It is the realization of this fact that has led to the vast dealings of the last few months in downtown properties. Large operators and investors have recognized that tunnels to Brooklyn and New Jersey will increase the value of lower Broadway property just as surely as it will the vacant property at the other end of these routes. Old buildings south of Fulton Street that have been on the market for years, with prospective buyers objecting to the high asking prices, have been taken over by corporations and individuals with the certain knowledge that these properties at the centre of a twenty or thirty mile city are going to be more valuable than they were as the centre of a ten-mile city.

Similaly at the great uptown centres has there been a disposition to anticipate the city's inevitable expansion. The establishment of great terminals at and near Broadway and Thirty-third Street have made it all but a certainty that the retail dry goods district will eventually absorb all of the Sixth Avenue territory from Twenty-third to Thirty-fourth Street. In fact, the entire area between Fourteenth and Fifty-ninth Streets is reflecting in its advancing realty values the probability than it is about to become the hotel, amusement and shopping centre of the greatest city in the world.

LOT SPECULATION AND TENEMENT BUILDING

Note of Warning in Views of Prominent Operator.

PRESENT SITUATION STRONG

But Existing Conditions May Not Hold Indefinitely—Memory a Bad Asset for Speculator.

History has never recorded a more marvelous growth in wealth and in population in any city in an equal space of time than we have witnessed in Greater New York in the last decade. Surely it will not be expected of me to attempt at this time to trace or to analyze the causes which have brought about this remarkable result.

Among the many recent record-breaking figures of enormous development in various avenues of business and speculation probably none would prove more astounding than an array of statistics showing the increased value of real estate in our greater city, and especially in Manhattan Borough, based, not upon the Tax Assessor's valuations, but upon actual market prices. The much-heralded Western booms are mere child's play and pale into insignificance when compared with the gigantic upward strides of our own real estate market, in which the speculative price of yesterday becomes the staid, conservative investment standard of to-morrow. A good memory is the very worst asset an active and successful real estate operator in such a market can possess. What he needs is a good "forgettery." "He must rise upon stepping stones of his dead self to higher"—prices.

The latest census shows that Greater New York is increasing in population at the rate of about 200,000 per annum; in other words, that we absorb annually a city of about the size of Newark. To the builder and the real estate operator is assigned the duty and is given the opportunity of providing homes and business quarters for this annual increase. Since fully 90 per cent. of this added population must be housed in tenements and the cheaper grade of flats, (which, for the sake of convenience, I shall include under the generic name of tenement,) it will readily be seen that the tenement house buildr, speculator, and investor have had a golden opportunity, which, indeed, they have not been slow to embrace. The field has been very fertile, it has been and is being very diligently and carefully tilled, and it is yielding a rich harvest, which an ever-increasing number is ready and anxious to reap. No corner or part of this field is being neglected or allowed any longer to lie fallow.

We marveled at the building up, during the period from 1885 till 1893, of a small-sized city on the west side, north of Fifty-ninth Street. Now we scarcely stop to note that whole settlements of far larger proportions are springing up in the Bronx, on Washington Heights, in Brooklyn, and in Long Island City, in addition to the reclaiming and the upbuilding of the neglected districts of Harlem and of the extreme east side of Yorkville, a name hardly familiar to the newer set of operators. The tenement houses of Harlem, which had long been a source of revenue only to the inexorable tax collector, are to-day an excellent investment at prices that the boldest plunger in real estate would not have dared prophesy.

The new tenement house law accomplished results which its framers neither dreamed of nor desired, and which its opponents neither expected nor hoped for. It made more valuable every existing tenement house, and thereby created a new industry—that of overhauling the old-fashioned neglected tenement by removing the toilets from the yard into the halls and otherwise improving the building. I am inclined to question whether the perpetuation of these old, unventilated, unlit tenements by thus establishing them upon a paying investment basis is an unmixed benefit to the community. To-day every kind of tenement, old or new, shows a gratifying return. They are all well rented and the tenant is most reasonable in his demands. Dispossession for non-payment is rare, and, on the whole, the tenement house owner's lot is a happy one.

Concerning the future, unlike my namesake of old, I am no interpreter of dreams. I have no magic power to draw aside the curtain that hides the future from our gaze. I may say, however, that the stability of tenement house values will largely depend upon whether or not we accept and act upon ancient Joseph's advice, and, in these fat years, have an eye to and prepare for the lean years that may follow.

In the first place, we cannot expect that our population will forever continue to grow at the rate of 200,000 per annum. Our builders, however, are proceeding on the theory that the flow of immigration to these shores will always remain at high tide and, not content with providing for such an unprecedented increase, as we have witnessed, they are erecting, in this and the adjoining boroughs, tenements which will house that increase and more besides. When all the building of this character now under way shall have been completed there will be a slight surplus of supply over demand. If it continues on the same stupendous scale during the coming year, we will have, in the Bronx and on the Heights, conditions somewhat similar to those which existed on the east and west side of Harlem until the year 1901. At present there is no trouble ahead, but a continuation on this scale spells danger.

And now just another note of warning and of advice. We are building in most prosperous times, when labor and the products of labor are receiving their very highest reward. Of all the new-law tenement houses, fully 90 per cent. contain only four, five, six, and even seven room apartments, renting at $5 a room and upward. In my humble judgment it would be well not to overstock the market with this standard of apartment. If anything is needed it is more two and three room dwellings, which, even in these prosperous times, are eagerly sought for by those who will not or cannot pay for the larger accommodations and which, if times change even slightly for the worse, will be required in increasing numbers by those who, in the heyday of their prosperity, have forgotten the advice to lay by for the lean years that may possibly await them.

In conclusion I would merely add that he who invests in well-located tenement property in the heart of Manhattan, or near the main avenues of the other boroughs, and who owns a substantial equity in what he buys, may feel assured that he has about as safe an investment as he can expect to find anywhere in this high market—a market which, so far as real estate is concerned, shows at the present time no signs of weakness.

THIRTY-STORY CITY INVESTING BUILDING.

New Structure at Broadway and Cortlandt Street Will Involve Outlay of $10,000,000—Its Many Unique Features.

The new City Investing Building, to be erected at Broadway, Cortlandt, and Church Street, will be in several particulars the foremost of the city's skyscrapers.

In its central portion it will rise to a height of thirty stories, and the roof over this thirtieth story will be 418 feet above the curb.

The caisson foundations which will support it will be carried down to bedrock, about eighty feet below the curb, so that the entire structure, above and below ground, will be very nearly 500 feet high. The basements and sub-basements will be excavated to a depth of forty feet below the curb.

The total investment involved in the operation will be about $10,000,000, making it in this respect the largest single building project ever undertaken by private capital in this city, and probably in the world.

The building will contain 15,000 tons of structural steel—almost enough to furnish the framework for three Flatiron Buildings.

The rentable space in the new skyscraper will be 500,000 square feet—or, if it were spread out on a single floor, an area equivalent to about six blocks the size of the Madison Square Garden. The building will inclose 11,000,000 cubic feet of space—considerably more than the Broad-Exchange Building.

The Broadway front will be twenty-six stories high, and the central portion of the building thirty stories. Yet so skillfully has Architect Francis H. Kimball succeeded in carrying out his ideas that one scarcely realizes the structure's great height.

No less than twenty-one very large plunger elevators will be installed to provide the structure's great transportation system. These will be arranged along the southerly side of the arcade, which will extend clear through the building from Broadway to Church Street.

This arcade will in itself be one of the building's most striking features. The Broadway entrance will cover the whole of the frontage on that thoroughfare, 37½ feet, and the arcade will maintain this width throughout. It will be 315 feet long and 40 feet high, rising through two entire stories.

The primary reason for the undertaking of so large a project, according to President Robert E. Dowling of the City Investing Company, is that there is a steadily growing demand for large office space on one floor. Even in some of the more recently built downtown structures, large corporations are finding it difficult to get accommodations without taking in parts of two or more floors, and it is for such tenants that the City Investing Building has been planned.

HARD TO AVOID REAL ESTATE PROFITS IN MANHATTAN, SAYS PHILADELPHIAN

"You Can Be Seventy-five Per Cent. Wrong and Still Make Money"—Criticism of New York's Real Estate Methods—"One Hundred Different Cities On Manhattan Island."

First, I believe you can be 75 per cent. wrong and only 25 per cent. right in Manhattan Island realty and still make considerable money. This condition is not to be found anywhere else in the United States.

The moment is almost upon us when a higher if not the highest order of intelligence will be enlisted in the realty markets of America, and most particularly in New York City. There have been very few, in proportion to the large number of truly great men in the financial and business world, that have gone into the realty markets, but it looks very much now as if there will be a universal demand for high-class realty by the majority, instead of the minority, of the best brains the country possesses—men who will not disregard the obvious until holders of realty have raised their prices from 100 to 300 per cent., as is often the case in the New York realty field.

The knowledge of the general practice of the art and science of realty dealing in New York City is, I regret, very much below the standard of other large cities. There is an utter lack of system and harmony between brokers, speculators, buyers, and sellers. It is very rarely that an investor has a chance to purchase a cheap piece of realty, as it must generally travel through a broker and also a speculator before reaching him, and always at increasing prices.

Should the investor desire to sell his property, the general practice appears to be to inform any broker about the property; the broker spreads the information that the property is on the market; the owner is deluged with notes from brokers to the effect that they have immediate purchasers and to send them particulars post-haste. Thereafter they devote all their time toward keeping one another from making a sale, for just so sure as more than one man has a chance of selling a property the price will surely be cut. Many good parcels have often been removed from the market because the sale of the property at a proper figure has been ruined by such procedure. If every broker would insist upon a signed contract placing a property exclusively in his hands for sale, the owner would be protected as well as the broker, and order will reign. This is the universal practice in Philadelphia.

If a department store or other mercantile enterprise should be conducted in a manner similar to the title companies of Greater New York it would be many years behind the times.

There appears to be no such thing with the title companies as a fixed charge.

Why should a title company pay a lawyer or broker, or both, part of the money paid by the investor for title insurance?

Why should the title companies of Greater New York charge so much more for the insurance of titles than those in many other large cities?

Why should their policies contain so very many stringent clauses?

When the time arrives that the title companies will take the greatest pains to clear a title, charging for their services a figure from which no one will receive any "graft," allowing a return premium for cancelation, or for the bringing down of a title, the realty market of Greater New York will have received its greatest benefit.

The lawyers and realty brokers have their opportunity of participating in the profits of the title companies—let them become stockholders, and if they cannot become stockholders in the large companies, let them form new companies.

Don't make the purchasers of properties pay large sums for title insurance. It stops action and prohibits trading.

Now something about New York City realty. There is no such thing as New York City from a real estate standpoint. There are one hundred different cities on Manhattan Island.

New Yorkers do not appear to understand just how great their city is, and just how much greater it will become. If they would study realty conditions in other countries they would understand how much cheaper much of their realty is as compared with other cities in other countries, and in many of the cities of the United States. They see properties increasing, ever increasing. They see enterprises, conducted from a starting price at which they predicted failure, prove tremendous successes. They see section after section developing and left to speculators for appreciation, never realising that the most wonderful opportunities are before them to participate in the tremendous increase Manhattan Island realty must have. They never study the lesson of it. No one seems to understand any of the basic reasons underlying actual conditions. The only arguments one ever hears regarding the desirability of a purchase on Manhattan Island are statements such as "the coming of the Pennsylvania Railroad," "the new department stores," "extensions or building of subways," or "tips from inside information of new boulevards, parks, &c."

What is destined to become the greatest city of all time and in a much smaller area than any other large city is situated at the entrance to the New World, and is known as Manhattan Island. The superior merchant that establishes himself on Manhattan Island radiates his worth throughout the United States, and to some extent throughout the world. In no other city in America does this condition exist.

The tendency for many years has been to do away with the middleman. Cigars are being retailed directly from the growers of tobacco, and the time is not far distant when every large producer will retail his merchandise. One by one the choice spots are being taken out of the market. The manufacturer is beginning to realize that he holds an impregnable strategic position when he owns the parcels of real estate in which he can retail the products of his own factory, and a general appreciation and broadening of this fact will surely bring much higher prices for realty throughout every large city of the United States, and particularly in New York City, by reason of its manifold advantages over all other cities of this country.

FORTY MILLIONS FOR DOWNTOWN SKYSCRAPERS

Fifteen New Structures Under Way or Projected South of Fulton Street—The Increased Demand for Offices and Its Meaning.

The most remarkable movement in the construction of office buildings which has ever occurred in the history of the world, in point of both magnitude and character, is about to take place on the lower end of Manhattan Island, south of Fulton Street.

Plans either have been or are about to be consummated for building at least fifteen tall, modern office structures within this small area, which will provide on or before Jan., 1909, more than 2,500,000 square feet of rentable office space in addition to that already existing. When it is remembered that the present Trinity Building has only about 162,000 square feet of rentable area, the extent of this construction movement may be better understood.

Some of the projected buildings will be larger and higher than the office structures now existing in this area, in which, however, are centred most of the city's greatest skyscrapers. Among the buildings referred to are the new Boreel Building and the new Trinity Building annex, at Broadway and Cedar Street; the United States Express Company Building, at Rector Street and Trinity Place; the new Trust Company of America Building, at 87 and 30 Wall Street, midway between the Stock Exchange and the new site of the National City Bank; the proposed great twin structures for the Hudson Tunnel Company on Church Street, extending from Cortlandt to Fulton Street; the City Investing Building, at Broadway, Cortlandt, and Church Streets; the Howard Carroll Building, covering the West Street block front between Cedar and Albany Streets; the addition to the Singer Building, at Broadway and Liberty Street; and the extension to the Whitehall Building, at Battery Place, West, and Washington Streets.

The new Boreel Building and Trinity Annex will be at least twenty stories high, the Trust Company of America Building and the United States Express Company Building twenty-three stories, and the other buildings above referred to, twenty-five stories or more. It is estimated that the fifteen structures, which include, besides those already mentioned, the Seligman, Cockroft, Royal-Queen, and St. Louis Mercantile Trust Company Buildings, and another the name of which is withheld, will cost nearly $40,000,000.

The query which naturally arises is: Will they rent and be successful? My best judgment is that they will be successful, because of the wonderful rate at which the business of the country is expanding, and remembering that most of the country's important enterprises must maintain offices in New York. The increasing demand should be equal to the supply as it is available. Not only is the need for increased office space apparent, but many of the best located properties in the comparatively small area referred to are being permanently absorbed by corporations and firms who are discovering that in owning their own buildings they are acquiring an asset that is valuable in many ways.

Not only, as formerly, are the important financial institutions of the city appreciating these advantages, but the great industrial corporations of the country are discovering the benefit of owning a great building in which all their subsidiary and affiliated corporations can be provided for, and I look for a wide extension of this movement. If the world's greatest oil company has found economy, convenience, and a saving of time by grouping its workers in one huge structure, why does this argument not apply equally to steel, sugar, tobacco, etc.?

The financial and commercial centre of Manhattan Island has been fixed by the enormous vested interests in the great buildings already built or now building, between Fulton Street and the Battery. The inference to be drawn from the facts herein outlined is that well-selected real estate on this narrow tongue of Manhattan Island is the safest purchase in the world. There appears to be no chance of a recession of values, and every reason why they should advance beyond their present status.

New York City has in the last few years become the one great permanent centre of the Western Hemisphere from almost every point of view. It is not exaggeration to say that as a city it contains most of the features of both Paris and London, in addition to many others not found in those great capitals, and affords opportunities in commerce and finance and offers surroundings and luxuries not obtainable anywhere else in the world. No other city and no foreign country contains such office buildings, hotels, retail shops, and theatres, and New York is the magnet that draws the busy and the idle peoples of the Western Hemisphere, and many of the Old World, in the same sense that these classes have been drawn in the past to London and Paris.

W. H. CHESEBROUGH.

PRESENT CONDITIONS ON WASHINGTON HEIGHTS

How the Present Has Justified Speculation of a Year Ago.

NO PRESENT APPREHENSION

Plenty of Tenants for New Buildings—Demand for More Elevator Apartment Houses.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating" may be a homely saying, but the truth of it as applied to Washington Heights real estate has surely been proved in the light of existing conditions. All those speculators, investors, and builders who were fortunate enough to get some part of that small but important section of Manhattan Island now find the "pudding" a very palatable morsel, the speculators in counting their profits, the investors in a realization of the advance in value of their holdings, and the builders in the rapid renting and sale of their finished product.

About a year ago the Heights was the scene of a speculative movement the like of which has certainly not been seen in this generation, and it was but natural that the rapid rise in values should be accompanied by considerable apprehension in many quarters. There were many who predicted that prices were rising beyond all reason, and that a recession was bound to come. To those, however, who were familiar with the real estate history of New York, and who had made a thoughtful study of present-day conditions in the upper part of the city, no such alarms were worthy of serious consideration. And how baseless any such forecasting of calamity was has been amply borne out by the results of the year following this wonderful market.

NEW STRUCTURES WELL RENTED.

The value of land must surely be dependent upon its income producing possibilities, and in my opinion it was a most fortunate thing for Washington Heights real estate that it was put to this test so soon. Immediately following the lot speculation of last Spring dozens of building operations were started, and within the last two or three months we have been put in a position to see whether land was or was not too high on the Heights. Builders who finish their apartments in January and February as a general rule look forward to a period of at least two or three months before their houses are filled with tenants, but that has not been the case this year, for in this most unfavorable renting season tenants have been numerous and many houses scarcely finished are practically filled, at the rents originally scheduled and even in some instances at slightly higher figures. Naturally the result of this has been that houses that are well rented are easily disposed of, and there are now many builders on the Heights who have disposed of the whole or part of their output and are ready for new operations.

The confidence of the general investing public in real estate, and particularly uptown real estate, seems stronger than ever, and there is no lack of buyers who are well supplied with cash. In fact, in all my experience on Washington Heights I cannot recall a time when conditions have been so satisfactory. The future, too, seems to be particularly bright, as there is still ample room for further development along existing lines and also in some fields that have been up to the present somewhat neglected.

CHARACTER OF PRESENT DEMAND.

The general run of apartments built on the Heights during the last few months has been of that class in which rents run from $6 to $8 a room, but there is a constantly growing demand for apartments at a slightly lower rental and also at a considerably higher figure. For this latter class the high-grade elevator house must be built, and it has been only recently that builders, who in the beginning were somewhat timorous about undertaking this larger type of structure, are beginning to see the possibilities of the substantial profits to be made on houses of this sort. There are several six-story corner buildings now in course of construction, and the builders tell me that they are besieged with inquiries as to when they will be ready for occupancy, and in some instances leases have been signed for flats that will not be finished till late in the Spring. It is along Broadway that these buildings are being put up, and it surely will not be long before progressive operators and builders will realize the desirability of Riverside Drive and Fort Washington Avenue for improvements of the best quality.

For those looking for cheap rent there is little place on Washington Heights, and the great mass of people who cannot afford to pay as high as $6 a room will be compelled to go further north and find homes in the Dyckman tract. The opening up of the Subway through to the Ship Canal on the 12th of this month has given us practical proof of how accessible this section is, and there is now nothing that can retard its development in the near future with five and six story apartment houses built to rent at moderate prices.

There is another side to the Dyckman tract which has not been fully appreciated except by two or three large manufacturing concerns and a few operators, and that is, that within its borders along the Harlem River there remains about the only available undeveloped water front on Manhattan Island. The advantages for commercial purposes of all kinds of property abutting on the water are, of course, too obvious to call for comment, and when they are coupled with accessibility by means of exceptional transit facilities both from Manhattan and the Bronx, (from the latter by the new 207th Street bridge, which will be completed in a few months,) it cannot be long before the few remaining blocks will be taken out of the market and used for business.

The demand for private houses, both for rental and sale, is very good, and as there have been practically no private houses built on the heights in the past two years the supply is very small. Builders who will put up good one and two family dwellings in the few restricted streets will certainly sell out before completion.

The Spring season seems to be starting under most auspicious circumstances, after a remarkable Winter, from a real estate and building point of view, with many new structures reaching the finishing stages, with an unprecedented demand for all kinds of property, and with the Rapid Transit Road running to the northerly end of Manhattan.

CHARLES GRIFFITH MOSES.

AUTOS AND REAL ESTATE.

Of the new industries which have contributed to the city's real estate prosperity during the last two or three years probably none outranks in importance the automobile trade.

The automobile has demanded for its storage and its display hundreds of thousands of square feet of space all over the city. A walk up Broadway from Times Square to Seventy-second Street is sufficient to demonstrate the motor car's influence upon real estate. All along this stretch of the city's great thoroughfare stores for which there was formerly an indifferent demand, are now fully tenanted and at greatly increased rentals. Many plots, moreover, have been made the sites of new structures which are yielding excellent returns on the value of the land.

MANHATTAN

FIFTH AVENUE PRICES SCORING NEW RECORDS

Fifth Avenue from Twenty-fourth to Forty-fourth Street, the most valuable mile of land in the world, has continued during the year 1905 and the first few months of 1906 to hold the attention not only of the real estate speculator, operator, and investor, but of everybody, even those who came to New York once a year to do their shopping.

It is, however, of most vital interest to the retail merchant who has not had the foresight already to secure himself with a location for his business. Far-sighted business men anticipating that retail business was bound to come to Fifth Avenue have purchased or leased in the past or are now taking advantage of every opportunity to secure themselves locations. Those who have not already made provision have been looking forward to a slump in prices, but the slump has never come, and the chances are that it will not, for the simple reason that Fifth Avenue, that is, the retail part of Fifth Avenue, is contained in about thirty blocks. Taking both sides of the avenue we have sixty blocks of 200 feet each, or 12,000 running front feet of available property. Excepting Bryant Park, hotels, and the churches that absolutely refuse to or cannot sell, we reduce the above figures to about 10,000 front feet, or 400 twenty-five foot city lots. Now deduct the amount of property already leased for twenty-one years, or improved with business buildings occupied by their owners, and it leaves us with possibly twenty corners and forty or fifty inside lots that are likely to come into the market in the near future.

For these few properties there must be 500 ambitious concerns looking with eager eyes. What are they to do—pay the price or seek a side-street location. Many a concern during the past year has had to pocket its pride and take to the side street while its more prosperous rival has moved in from the former retail district and secured many of the old firm's customers.

Looking back it seems only a few years ago when such a thing as business above Twenty-third Street was unknown to Fifth Avenue, and the fact is that fifteen years back only one or two businesses had located in that district.

You will remember that it seemed like yesterday when John Jacob Astor's house stood on the corner of Thirty-third Street and Fifth Avenue and William Astor's at the corner of Thirty-fourth Street, both occupying four lots on the avenue, with three lots in the rear on which stood their stables. How different it is to-day, and what a marvelous change the Waldorf-Astoria has worked in Fifth Avenue. The completion of this great caravansary was practically the turning point of Fifth Avenue from residential to business purposes.

It may seem incredible to the layman, but it is a fact that five lots on the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street were sold in 1852 by August Belmont for $35,000, and in 1905 for over $1,825,000. By these figures it may be seen that the above property has increased by more than the amount of its original value every year for the last fifty-three years, and a large profit has been offered the latest purchaser on the above figures. Another interesting sale in September, 1905, was that of the southeast corner of Forty-first Street and Fifth Avenue, nineteen feet front by ninty-four feet deep for $350,000, considered at the time a most exorbitant figure, but it was immediately resold at a profit, and our most prominent woman lender on real estate considers it so good to-day that she makes a loan to the present owners of the property of $350,000, or the amount it sold for six month ago.

To comprehend fully the wonderful advance in values in the neighborhood, Fourteenth to Fortieth Street, Fifth to Sixth Avenue, and Twenty-sixth Street to Fortieth Street, Fifth Avenue to East River—part of Section 3 of the tax map of the city—one must take a glance at these books. For the year 1905 the property comprised in this area, including the land and buildings thereon, was assessed at $416,676,900. In 1906 the assessed valuation is $482,589,600, showing an increased valuation of $65,912,700 in one year, and even these figures by no means tell of the great enhancement in values in what is on the eve of becoming the most marvelous retail trade centre in the entire world.

The chief contributing causes to this wonderful development are the absence of trolley cars on Fifth Avenue and the great improvement in transportation facilities to this neighborhood for out-of-town visitors. We will not fully appreciate what effect the Pennsylvania improvements and the Long Island and McAdoo tunnels will make till these roads are complete and in operation. At the time the Subway was in process of construction prices advanced greatly along its line, and in the Bronx particularly it was considered that the high level had been reached, but when the Subway opened, the great speculation really began. So it will be in the section to which these improvements are tributary.

ALBERT B. ASHFORTH.

NEW PENNSYLVANIA STATION.

To Cover Larger Area Than Any Other Similar Structure.

The new station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, being built on the two blocks bounded by Seventh and Eighth Avenues, Thirty-first and Thirty-third Streets, will cover an area much larger than that occupied by any other similar structure in the world. In fact, the Pennsylvania's terminal will be double the size of the great Liverpool Street Station in London, nearly twice the size of the recently completed Hamburg terminal, (now the largest in existence,) and of an area almost three times that of the South Station in Boston or the St. Louis Terminal, the two largest in this country. The station building proper will be 500 feet wide and 800 feet long. Another territory of this same size to the west of the station will probably be covered by another branch Post Office, although this matter is still under discussion between the Government and the officials of the railroad. This Post Office building would extend from Eighth to Ninth Avenue, and be constructed in a manner very similar to that followed in connection with the new Grand Central, the tracks of the station being directly under the Post Office building and connected therewith by means of freight elevators.

MIDTOWN BUSINESS SECTION.

Reasons for Present Activity—Expansion West of Sixth Avenue.

It is conclusive to my mind that the property lying between Fourteenth and Forty-second Streets is peculiarly valuable for investment and speculative purposes, on account of the limited area which can be devoted to business properties. The peculiarity of the value lies in the fact that this section is surrounded by the transit facilities afforded by the present and prospective surface and underground roads, and in addition by convenient shipping facilities—all of which have important relation not only to the residents of the Borough of Manhattan, but also to those of the Bronx, Queens, and New Jersey. All these means of transit will enable the residents of these various territories to reach the central part of Manhattan in a very short time.

Sixth Avenue, from Fourteenth to Twenty-third Street, will without doubt retain its present character for several reasons, one of which is that the modern buildings now occupied by large retail stores are owned by the occupants, and the centre of trade having been established, it is safe to assume that there will be no change for an indefinite period. The fact that one or two large stores have undertaken to move elsewhere appears only to have created an opportunity for other stores of the same character to take their places.

With regard to that section of Sixth Avenue lying between Twenty-third and Thirty-fourth Streets, it might be said that the dry goods merchant will grasp the opportunities afforded to acquire property in this section, owing to the increased population and the consequent demand for more retail stores, both large and small. This will have a tendency to create a business thoroughfare, and this section will ultimately compare favorably with that part of Sixth Avenue just mentioned.

In the belt bounded by Fourth Avenue, Sixth Avenue, Fourteenth and Twenty-second Streets, the demand for space in modern buildings is so great that speculation and finally buying by builders have caused a scarcity of purchasable property for improvement. By reason of the vast amount of property that has been acquired and rented in this section, tenants who are unwilling to pay the high rents which of necessity must be paid, turn to the section between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, from Seventeenth to Thirty-third Streets, where there has been a wonderful amount of speculation, the values of lots having risen from 25 to 50 per cent. within the last two years. This speculation has not been unwarranted, as the builders are able to obtain rentals for improved properties which justify the prices now paid for land.

Twenty-third Street holds its own and values increase day by day, not from a speculative standpoint, but on a basis of actual values, the block between Fifth and Sixth Avenues being occupied by concerns of high standing, such as Stern Brothers, McCreery's, Best & Co., Le Boutillier's, Horner, Putnam, and Schwartz, most of whom own the properties they occupy and are making plans for vast extensions of the space they now use. The new ferries at West Twenty-third Street, the proposed subway through Twenty-third Street, together with the facilities afforded by the subways contemplated and in operation, insure for this street the continuance of its present character. The south side of Twenty-second Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, presents a condition unprecedented in the real estate history of this portion of the city. Being the only street commanding the rear or carriage entrances of so many large dry goods stores, it has itself become a retail street of great value, the last properties sold there having brought as high as $4,000 a front foot.

SMALLER HOUSES IN DEMAND

Moderate-Priced Dwellings as Against Apartment Houses — Movement Looked For on Carnegie Hill.

In looking over the real estate activity of the past Winter we find that the tendency has been toward more moderate-priced houses than heretofore, due, we believe, to a large extent to the fact that Americans generally are taking more interest in country life, and are spending a larger portion of each year in their country places. The development of Long Island, Westchester, and New Jersey suburban towns has also shown this to be a fact. We find that there has been a very active demand for moderate-priced and moderate-sized dwellings, and, in fact, a great many people during the Autumn renting season preferred apartments rather than private houses on account, we believe, of the difficulties of the servant question, and also because in an apartment renting for $3,000 the accommodations equal those in a house that would cost at least $4,000, taking into consideration the expense of heating and the additional servants required.

New Yorkers are becoming more and more nomadic in their methods of living. The average well-to-do New Yorker spends a very short time in town. From the seashore he goes to the mountains, from the mountains to New York for a short period, then to Florida, or somewhere in the South, finally returning to New York again, thus making the time in the city only from three to six months. Rather than go to a hotel, he prefers a small house in town on which the fixed charges will be very low. A medium-sized house in the section near Fifth and Madison Avenues, north of Fiftieth Street, cannot be purchased for less than $60,000, which means fixed charges of from $3,000 to $3,600, while the section between Park and Third Avenues north of Sixtieth Street is as desirable for residence as the section between Fifth and Sixth Avenues south of Fifty-ninth Street, or in the neighborhood of Murray Hill, so far as the annoyance from the elevated road is concerned, and the fixed charges in that section will hardly exceed $2,400.

There have been purchases made in certain of these blocks, changing completely the character of the occupants of the houses from people of small means to people who are well known socially and financially. We believe that the movement has been a very natural and justifiable one, as many of the blocks between Park and Third Avenues have no nuisances in them and are, to a large extent, improved with very good private houses which, at a slight cost, can be made thoroughly modern. The best part of this section is, undoubtedly, between Sixty-eighth and Seventy-second Streets, on account of the elevation, and the occupants and owners of houses in this section to-day rank as high socially and financially as those of the Murray Hill district.

The next movement, we believe, will be an advance in values in the so-called Carnegie Hill neighborhood, around Park Avenue, as that section is improved, to a large extent, with a very good class of private houses, the present owners of which are well-to-do Germans, who make unusually desirable citizens and good neighbors. The prices in that section are proportionately low to-day, and for this reason active buying there in the near future will be taken up on a much larger scale.

DYCKMAN TRACT'S FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

Subway's Northerly Link Now Makes It Accessible.

NEW BUILDING OPERATIONS

One of the most inviting fields for the builder to-day in all Manhattan is the Dyckman tract, that portion of the city lying between the northerly slopes of Fort George Hill and the Harlem River Ship Canal, because of the cheapness of its lots, its accessibility, and its natural advantages over other vacant land from the standpoint of health and recreation. Lots in the Dyckman tract ready for the builder, can be obtained from $5,000 to $7,500 each, and nowhere else in Manhattan is it possible to obtain lots with sewers, gas, and water mains already laid at any such figure.

The Broadway Subway is to-day running through the heart of the Dyckman tract, making it accessible to the lower part of the city in thirty minutes' running time. By means of the new bridge being erected over the Harlem River, connecting 207th Street with the Fordham Heights station of the Putnam Division of the New York Central Railroad, the Dyckman tract will be quickly reached by the Sixth Avenue and Ninth Avenue elevated lines.

As a future region of homes the Dyckman estate affords great promise by reason of its many opportunities for recreation. Van Cortlandt Park is near by, with its public golf links, tennis courts, ball fields, croquet grounds, polo games, and concerts in Summer, while its lake and hillsides provide skating, hockey, and coasting during the Winter months. In addition there is the public bathing beach along the Hudson at the foot of Dyckman Street, the passing of steamers up and down the river, the close brushes on the Speedway between the fastest and best horses in the whole country, and finally the regattas of the many rowing clubs on the Harlem, all of which amusements will cost the tenants and their children little if anything.

NEW BUILDING OPERATIONS.

The cheapness of the lots and their many advantages have already caught the eye of two building companies, namely, the McCormack Construction Company and the Hanover Realty & Construction Company, the former of which is erecting two fifty-foot six-story apartment houses on Dyckman Street, 100 feet from Broadway, and the latter five apartment houses on Sherman Avenue, each 40 feet wide and five stories in height, between Dyckman Street and Academy Street. It is interesting to note that the character of the houses these two companies are erecting is of a much higher type than was generally supposed would be built in the Dyckman tract, since, instead of being of the tenement house variety, they are being elaborately constructed on improved plans.

Another great advantage of Dyckman lots is their extra depth, thus affording an opportunity for larger and better ventilating rooms, as is the case with both of the building operations on Dyckman Street and Sherman Avenue. In the former street the lots are 125 feet deep, thus allowing three apartments of six rooms and bath and one apartment of seven rooms and bath on each floor, while the lots on Sherman Avenue are 150 feet deep and there the plans call for six apartments on each floor, divided up into two apartments of five rooms and bath each, three of four rooms and bath each, and one apartment of three rooms and bath making twenty-five rooms, exclusive of bath rooms, on each floor.

PROBABLE SCALE OF RENTS.

From the demand for apartments it seems certain that rents in the Dyckman tract will be on a higher basis than has been expected owing to the fact that many people will prefer to ride through the Subway to Dyckman Street station, rather than climb the stairs or crowd into the inadequate elevators at the 168th Street and 181st Street stations. This feature has become so pronounced that Dyckman property owners are raising their prices on lots near the Dyckman, 207th, and 215th Street Subway stations.

With the exception of special parcels, the highest priced lots are on Broadway and Dyckman Street, which is the connecting link between the Speedway and the Boulevard Lafayette, now called Riverside Drive. Nagle and Tenth Avenue lots also command good prices, as the route of the Subway is bound to be the great business thoroughfare of the section. Sherman Avenue lots are held by strong owners from $7,500 to $10,000 each, and this avenue promises to be the Fifth Avenue of the district, as it is a fine, broad thoroughfare with no car line, and will be improved with apartment houses of a fine type.

The most prominent of the many remaining streets is Emerson Street, through which a new line of trolley cars will connect the Bronx with Manhattan, running over the new bridge now being erected over the Harlem at 207th Street, a continuation of Emerson Street. At this point, the junction of Emerson and 207th Streets and Tenth Avenue, where a new Subway station is being built to accommodate the crowds of people living in the Bronx, there will be a plaza, which will be the heart of the business district of the entire section.

It is expected that many more building operations will be started during the Spring and Summer months, and that by a year from now the whole aspect of the section will be materially altered. While the land between Broadway and the Harlem will undoubtedly be built up first, it is declared by good judges that the more rolling land lying northwesterly from Broadway, such as the William B. Isham farm of thirty acres, will eventually be improved with elevator apartment houses of the best class.

Investors in the Dyckman tract will reap the benefit of the municipal improvements now proposed for the upper west side of Manhattan Island. The continuation of Riverside Drive above Claremont to a junction, at 157th Street, with the Boulevard Lafayette, is already under way, and it is further proposed to continue the driveway across Dyckman Street to Inwood Hill. From this point the proposed memorial bridge in honor of Hendrik Hudson will span the inlet separating Manhattan Island from Spuyten Duyvil.

The banding together of property owners into an organization known as the Dyckman Taxpayers' Association promises much for the section, as a dozen active committees have been appointed to look after the opening and paving of additional streets and all other municipal improvements, and generally to safeguard the interests of the property owners.

MANHATTAN

Year's Progress Toward Building New Subways

Bids for Many Extensions to Be Taken June 1—Lines to Be Built First—Various Defects of Present System to Be Remedied.

Property owners throughout the city are awaiting with no little eagerness the actual beginning of work on the proposed new subways. The success and popularity of the present underground railway and its effect upon property values in both Manhattan and the Bronx have greatly strengthened the agitation for an immediate extension of the system.

Albert B. Boardman of general counsel to the Rapid Transit Commission said last week that the consents of the majority of property owners along the proposed Third, Lexington, and Seventh-Eighth Avenue routes had already been secured, removing the last serious legal obstacle to the construction of these three most important lines. Mr. Boardman added that satisfactory progress was being made in securing similar consents along the remaining sixteen routes in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, and the Bronx, but that this and other work preliminary to the advertising for bids would take some months. He thinks that June 1 will be the earliest possible date at which figures for the new subway extensions can be asked for, and that it may be a month or two later. Mr. Boardman expects, however, that construction will be under way this Fall on several of the most urgently needed routes.

Numerous delays have occurred in the preparation and adoption of these plans, the most advantageous of which was the prolonged wrangle between the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment over the right to let contracts for future subway extensions. This was finally settled in the Estimate Board's favor by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Wash borings are now being made along the proposed routes to determine the exact character of the subsurface soil in order to enable bidders to figure intelligently on the work.

It is expected that excavations on several of the lines will be started simultaneously, and a special effort will be made to start work within a month after the signing of contracts or just as soon as it is possible to get the men and materials on the ground.

The Brooklyn extension of the Subway is progressing more favorably than was expected. Over 1,500 men are at work on this tunnel alone, and the contractors hope to finish their work by Dec. 1. The estimated maximum capacity of the two tubes to Brooklyn is 40,000 passengers an hour, which compares rather unfavorably with that of the Brooklyn Bridge, but nevertheless enough to lessen materially the crush at the Manhattan end of that structure.

LINES TO BE BUILT FIRST.

The subways on which bids will be taken this Spring are those known as the Seventh and Eighth Avenue route, the Lexington Avenue, Third Avenue, Thirty-fourth Street, Fourteenth Street, Brooklyn and Manhattan loop lines, the Gerard Avenue route, and the Van Cortlandt Park extension. Several of these lines will possess one or more branches, which are, in one or two instances, even more important to real estate interests than the main lines themselves.

One of the principal routes, and an interesting one to property owners, is that to be constructed under Seventh and Eighth Avenues, traversing, as it does, the heart of Manhattan Island and touching such important future centres of passenger traffic as the Pennsylvania terminal, the New York and New Jersey tunnel station, and the great structure being built down town by the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company. This subway, extending south from the present line at Times Square, together with the Lexington Avenue Road, running north from the existing Subway at the Grand Central Station, will serve to round out the present system and obviate the necessity of crossing town at Forty-second Street, and, for those residing on the upper east side, recrossing again under the northern end of Central Park. The proposed Seventh and Lexington Avenue subways will constitute direct north and south lines on the east and west sides of the city, and it is highly probable that that part of the older Subway under Forty-second Street will be used as a connecting spur only, to carry passengers from the east to the west side and vice versa.

The route of the Seventh Avenue subway, as planned, is southward under Seventh Avenue from Times Square to Greenwich Avenue, thence southeast under Greenwich Avenue to Clinton Place, from which point the road will run under private property to Waverley Place, Macdougal Street, and Washington Square, thence southerly under West Broadway to Vesey Street, where the subway will curve into Greenwich Street and follow the latter thoroughfare to Battery Park. Another hardly less important branch, and virtually a part of this route, will lead south from Times Square under Broadway to Twenty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, following Fifth Avenue southward to Washington Square and joining the above-described Seventh Avenue line under that park. There will also be a connecting spur under Twenty-fifth Street from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The Eighth Avenue portion of this subway will extend all the way from the Harlem River to West Broadway and Hudson Street under Eighth Avenue and Hudson Street. The Eighth Avenue subway will be a practically straight route from down town to the upper west side and Harlem.

A glance at the city map will show that this subway will not only afford direct underground connection with the great railway terminals mentioned, but will also reach some of the most important hotel, club, and mercantile districts in the city. An express station will be built at Thirty-third Street and Eighth Avenue, and another at Thirty-third Street and Seventh Avenue, both having underground passages leading to the Pennsylvania station's train platforms. An alternative spur is also provided in the plans, extending northerly under Seventh Avenue from Times Square to Central Park, in order to connect with the above-described Eighth Avenue line under Central Park West. This spur, like some others in the commission's plans, has been planned for the purpose of attracting the bids of independent corporations, though both the Seventh-Eighth Avenue and Lexington Avenue subways are, to all intents and purposes, extensions of the Interborough's system. It is likely that any independent bidders will confine most of their attention to other north and south subways and to the Manhattan-Brooklyn lines.

The Lexington Avenue subway will extend from Forty-second Street and Fourth Avenue northward under Lexington Avenue to the Harlem River, passing under that waterway through a set of four cast-iron tubes and extending northward under Third and Morris Avenues, in the Bronx, to 149th Street, where connection can be made with the present Subway. An alternative route is also provided in this case, running down Lexington Avenue from Forty-second Street, dividing at Thirty-sixth Street into two branches of two tracks each, which would extend through both Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets to Fifth Avenue, down which thoroughfare it would proceed to Broadway and Twenty-third Street, and down Broadway from this point to Vesey Street.

The route of the proposed Third Avenue subway is from 142d Street and Lincoln Avenue in the Bronx, where a large loop will be constructed southward under Lincoln Avenue to the Harlem River, under which it will pass by means of four tubes, following Third Avenue and the Bowery southward to Chatham Square, where the road will divide, one of the branches following the New Bowery, Pearl, Broad, and South Streets to South Ferry, the other proceeding southerly under Park Row, Nassau, and Broad Streets.

Crosstown connections will also be built under Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets all the way from Third to Eighth Avenue, to enable passengers to transfer at the intersecting points for destinations on either side of Manhattan Island, a feature wholly neglected in the present elevated system.

NEW BROOKLYN TUNNELS.

In planning the Manhattan and Brooklyn loop lines the Rapid Transit Commission has sought to abolish the congestion of traffic between Manhattan and Brooklyn by providing no less than three additional tunnels south of the Brooklyn Bridge, these in addition to rapid transit railways over the Manhattan and Williamsburg Bridges forming a belt line by means of connections under various streets in Brooklyn. The three Brooklyn tunnels forming a part of this belt line will be built under the East River from Beekman Street, Manhattan, to Cranberry Street, Brooklyn; from Maiden Lane, Manhattan, to Pineapple Street, Brooklyn, and from Old Slip, Manhattan, to Montague Street, Brooklyn, all joining in the latter borough. An alternative connection with the present City Hall Subway loop is also provided by means of a spur under Beekman Street to Park Row.

PROPOSED CROSSTOWN LINES.

The Thirty-fourth Street route will cross the city from the North to the East River, the ultimate intention being to extend the line eastward under the river to Queens Borough. This line will also have subsurface connection with the Pennsylvania terminal through a new street to be built by the railroad corporation from Thirty-third to Thirty-fourth Street, midway between Seventh and Eighth Avenues.

Another crosstown subway fully as important as that under Thirty-fourth Street will be that to be built under Fourteenth Street from river to river, which will later be extended under the East River to North Seventh Street, Brooklyn. This, like the Thirty-fourth Street line, will be constructed at a lower level than the north and south subways, and will have connection with the latter.

The Fourteenth Street route will differ from that under Thirty-fourth Street in that it will have two branches running to the lower end of Manhattan Island. One of these branches will leave the Fourteenth Street subway at University Place, under which it will proceed to Washington Square, thence southward under Wooster Street to Canal Street, curving eastward under the latter thoroughfare and connecting with the Manhattan and Brooklyn loop line at Canal and Centre Streets. The other branch will diverge from Fourteenth Street at Ninth Avenue, following that avenue to Gansevoort Street, and Greenwich Street from Gansevoort to Spring Street, where the road will turn into Washington Street, proceeding south on that thoroughfare to Liberty Street, and through Liberty Street to the Manhattan and Brooklyn loop line at William Street.

TWO EXTENSIONS IN THE BRONX.

The Van Cortlandt Park extension will form simply an addition to the elevated portion of the present Broadway line north of the Harlem Ship Canal, extending from 230th Street to 242d Street, at the entrance to Van Cortlandt Park, in order to carry passengers directly to the gate of this now comparatively remote city playground.

The Gerard Avenue line will extend from the terminus of the Third Avenue line, at 138th Street and Third Avenue, eastward through 138th Street, curving into Gerard Avenue at Walton Avenue and following Gerard Avenue northward to the junction of that avenue with Jerome Avenue, near Clarke Place. This branch will have only two tracks.

TO REMEDY MANY DEFECTS.

In designing the new subway system the Rapid Transit Commission has endeavored to correct the more pronounced faults of the older road. One of the principal errors made in designing the present line was the ending of the four-track section at Ninety-sixth Street. In the new subways the quadruple tracks will be continued practically to the northern terminals of the roads. In some of the downtown streets which are so narrow as to prevent the construction of four tracks the roads will be divided, two tracks following one street and the other two some other street. This was considered more practicable than double-decking the tracks, which the engineers first thought of doing.

It is likely that the show window feature will be carried out to some extent in future subway stations, particularly where the stations adjoin large shops of various kinds on the principal avenues. This idea was incorporated in one or two instances in the existing Subway, and is being made one of the features of the Hoyt Street Station of the Brooklyn extension.

The rolling stock in the proposed extensions will, of course, be built entirely of steel. Longer trains will be run than at present, probably ten-car expresses and ten-car locals, with stations of much greater length than those in the Interborough tube.

The method of construction required in all settled portions of the city will be that known as the cut-and-cover system, which was used in building the Subway under lower Broadway. Some difficulty was found in securing the consents of property owners along the proposed routes, for the reason that the method to be used in building the new lines was not made entirely clear to them, and it was generally believed that their business would suffer as did that of the merchants along Park Avenue and Forty-second Street when the present Subway was built. When it became known that the contracts will prohibit any but the cut-and-cover system this obstacle was removed.

DOWNTOWN PROPERTIES ATTRACT INVESTORS

Afford Chances for Both Speculation and Investment.

MANY YIELD LARGE RETURNS

Tremendous as has been the activity in the outlying districts, yet this activity is practically obliterated and overshadowed by the sharp advances in values, the sales, resales, and improvement of high class property on Manhattan Island. Fifth Avenue, Times Square, prominent cross streets, the Pennsylvania section, the financial district, the lower west side, Cortlandt Street, with the adjacent territory, have all come into prominence during the past year, and generously shared in this activity.

Investment properties of all kinds have found a ready market. Apartment houses and hotels, office and loft buildings have tempted and are tempting out-of-town capital as well as the local investor. To the real estate broker it appears as if many large investors are shifting their investments from railroad and industrial securities to New York real estate. The market has abounded with spectacular purchases and sales. Almost every week there are chronicled one or more deals involving the sale of million dollar properties. Recently there have been reported downtown sales of the Bennett Building and the Lord's Court Building, the latter sale at a reported price of about $3,500,000.

These colossal transactions overshadow to some extent the hundreds of smaller sales, ranging from $25,000 to $75,000, continually being made to smaller investors, involving store and loft buildings, small office buildings, and plots for permanent improvement for special tenants. These smaller deals are more significant of the popularity of New York real estate as a permanent investment and of the stability of the existing realty market than the larger transactions. They show that the smaller investor is leaving Wall Street, and that the successful business man is placing his surplus earnings in Manhattan real estate in preference to other forms of investment. And why shouldn't he? Real estate is a commodity and investment that is absolutely controlled by the owner. There is no majority interest to contend with. There is no possibility of a "working agreement" with another interest that will curtail the natural profits that accrue from the wisdom of the purchase. The owner can blame only himself for poor management. As New York grows commercially, in a greater ratio does the value of Manhattan realty increase, and increase it will, until in time it will become so valuable that there will be practically no property offered for sale.

The small invester is as keenly alive as the capitalist of larger means to the opportunities that exist in buying New York real estate, especially business property in the lower confined part of Manhattan Island. The activity of suburban property is all the more reason why business property on Manhattan Island will steadily and surely increase in value. As our population increases we can expand for home purposes in every direction; but our immense business interests must ever remain centred on this small island.

As Lower Broadway, Nassau Street, William Street, the financial district, Maiden Lane, and other prominent localities rapidly increase in value and old buildings make way for more modern structures, just as steadily are the old tenants from the displaced buildings forced to seek new quarters in the immediate neighborhood. Thus, the demand for stores and lofts and buildings is increased by the law of supply and demand, and the value of property throughout the immediate neighborhood enhanced.

There are many instances downtown where property on a thoroughfare is worth and sells for $100 a square foot; yet within a few blocks can be purchased property at $15 to $20 a square foot. Light and air are features of increasing importance in successful buying. Buy near present, or, if possible, proposed transportation terminals or stations, and by all means buy corners whenever possible. Corner properties are growing extremely scarce, and tenants prefer them and will pay relatively higher rents to secure them. It is often possible to discount some future improvement by purchasing a strategic "key" lot, a property that will pay a splendid return on the investment, and when needed to complete a permanent improvement can be resold for a big profit.

There are also great possibilities in the purchase of dilapidated and neglected business buildings. It is often possible to secure a building that has been vacant for some time, or that is in a poor condition owing to poor management at a price considerably under its intrinsic value By making alterations and giving the property care and personal attention, a tenant can be secured and the property made to pay an exceptionally high rate of interest on the investment.

These smaller properties—store and loft building just off the line of improvement—pay a much larger return on the investment, with a proportionately smaller degree of care for management, than the more expensive properties. It is not a difficult matter to select buildings leased to one tenant that will net the owner from 5 to 5½ per cent. on the total investment, and the tenant assumes full care of the property. Store and loft buildings where the expenses of management are low, but occupied by several tenants, net from 6 to 7 per cent. on the total investment. With a liberal purchase-money mortgage at a low rate of interest, often a net return of better than 20 per cent. can be secured on the actual investment or equity, and this investment, moreover, is a conservative and safe one. In many cases where the owner of the building is willing to give a long lease to the tenant, it is possible to arrange a lease on a net rental basis that will produce a return of 5½ to 6 per cent. on the value or cost of the property. In such instances, all charges, such as taxes, assessments, insurance, and repairs, are paid by the tenant, and the income is absolutely net to the owner.

CHARLES F. NOYES.

IN THE JEWELRY DISTRICT.

A noteworthy instance of the successful renting of a new downtown structure has been afforded by the S. F. Myers Building, at 47 and 49 Maiden Lane, between Nassau and William Streets.

Despite the fact that the building was fully completed only last September, seventy-one out of its seventy-five offices are rented. Its location is such that it finds favor with the jewelry trade, but the insurance, financial, and real estate districts have been moved northward recently to such an extent that this structure also has a large general tenantry. The building was put up by S. F. Myers, and is said to have more than fulfilled his expectations as an investment.

PROGRESS ON TERMINAL WORK

Electric Equipment of Great Railroads—Facts About the Big Stations.

Factors of the greatest importance in the growth and expansion of the city and its suburbs will be provided by the electrically operated railroads, with their enormous terminal stations in the heart of Manhattan. When the great improvements now under way are completed, these railroads will have unsurpassed facilities for handling the immense through and suburban traffic over their lines.

The New York Central and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Companies are practically reconstructing their lines for many miles out of the city. The former is installing a third-rail system from Croton on the main line and North White Plains on the Harlem Branch southward to the Grand Central Station. while the New York, New Haven & Hartford is equipping its road with an overhead, high-speed trolley system from Cos Cob, Conn., to its junction with the lines of the New York Central north of the city. At these borders of the new electric zone vast yards are to be built, with all the loops, switches, and roundhouses necessary for the change from steam to electric motive power and vice versa.

Great power stations are being built at Yonkers and Port Morris, with numerous smaller sub-stations at other points along the electrified lines to supply the power for the new service. Through trains will be drawn by electric locomotives of tremendous power within the electric zone, while those carrying suburban traffic will be operated on the multiple-unit system, now used on the Interborough lines in this city, three cars out of five and five out of every eight-car train being equipped with motors. Thirty-five electric locomotives are under construction for the New York Central, besides a large number of the suburban motor cars. Outside of the New York Central yards, the New Haven trains will use a bow trolley instead of the third rail, this being the method employed in running the experimental high-speed electric railway at Zössen, Germany, where the railroad speed record was broken a year or two ago.

THE NEW GRAND CENTRAL.

Special interest naturally centres in the new Grand Central, to replace the present comparatively modern structure. This station will be only slightly smaller than that of the Pennsylvania Road, and the architectural and structural features of the building will be on a most elaborate scale. The train house will cover no less than forty-seven tracks, extending from Madison to Lexington Avenue, only twenty-four of which, however, will touch the main concourse. These tracks will be separated by thirteen unusually long platforms, extending northward under the station proper and the Park Avenue Viaduct. The remaining twenty-three tracks of the terminal will extend under the great Post Office Building to be built on the Lexington Avenue side of the station. Some of these extra tracks will be used for the storage of cars, which are now necessarily hauled back to Mott Haven after unloading, and then brought all the way down to the Grand Central when the trains are to be made up. It will thus be seen that this great storage room will do away with the necessity of handling empty trains through the Park Avenue tunnel, and obviate no little of the unnecessary traffic through that already overcrowded section of the road.

There will be two levels of tracks in the new station, the upper for express trains and the lower for suburban trains. An immense concourse, larger than anything of the kind yet attempted, will face the express tracks, being 160 feet wide and 470 feet long. A broad flight of stairs will lead up from this to the ticket lobby, another room of immense size, 300 by 90 feet. The main waiting room of the station will be situated on the concourse level, directly under the ticket lobby, and the size will be similar to that of the ticket office. Under this waiting room, far below the street surface, will be situated the suburban waiting room, opening upon the lower, or suburban, concourse, which is under the main, or express, concourse. Passenger elevators of great size will carry those entering and leaving the trains from one concourse level to the other. The suburban concourse will face fifteen tracks, two of which will encircle the suburban waiting room, enabling trains to turn completely around, preparatory to making their outward trip.

The great express train concourse of the Pennsylvania Station will be 125 feet by 147 feet, slightly smaller than that in the Grand Central. Access to the train platforms will be had by means of several broad stairways leading down to the eleven platforms which will divide the twenty-one tracks of the station, and by nine passenger elevators of ample size. Eight large freight elevators will also be used to carry baggage to the train level of the station. Under this express concourse will be another, slightly smaller concourse, for suburban traffic, with passages leading to both the Thirty-first and the Thirty-third Street entrances.

The idea in both of these great terminals is completely to separate the incoming from the outgoing passengers, and thus avoid an endless amount of confusion which might result otherwise. There will also be entirely separate rooms for incoming and outgoing baggage.

On the north side of the train room will be a platform of extraordinary width for passengers destined to Long Island points, passages leading from this to the proposed Seventh and Eighth Avenue Subway lines. The main waiting room of the station will be 275 feet long and 92 feet wide, while the outgoing baggage department will cover an area 276 by 114 feet. These dimensions will give an idea of the immense proportions of this, the greatest railway station in the world.

The excavation for the Pennsylvania terminal and the building of retaining walls is well under way, and a power house is being built on Thirty-first Street, opposite the middle of the station. Under the North River the shields of the two great tunnel tubes are being advanced on both sides of the stream, and it was stated in the recent annual report of the company that it is confidently expected that the headings of the tunnels will be connected and the cast iron lining in place before the end of the present year.

TERMINALS NOT A DETRIMENT.

Values Higher in All Directions Around Proposed Railroad Stations.

It is an interesting fact that nowhere around the two great terminal sites of the Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroads have property values failed to undergo a large increase.

This can only be attributed to the improved architectural features of the proposed structures over those of old railroad stations, and also to the fact that with the electric operation of trains there will be none of the unpleasant surroundings to be found in connection with most terminals.

Proximity to a railroad station in many cases has been regarded heretofore as a rather doubtful recommendation for a property, but at the back, front, and both sides of New York's great transportation centre there is apparently no question as to the increased value and utility of every square foot of ground.

OF
UPON
Island

Now is a good time, if you have desirable properties, either in Dwellings, Apartment Houses, Lots, Farms, Improved Tracts or Acreage properties, conveniently situated in or near New York, to place with us for sale.

Only good properties wanted for purchase or Sale. In order to be attractive they must appeal to shrewd buyers. We want no inflated figures upon City or Country properties. We handle large and small propositions, and have some clients who are in the market for good investments.

You do not obligate yourself in any way by sending full informaton in regard to REAL ESTATE, either for Purchase, Sale, or Exchange.

If you want to borrow money, or change your mortgages to bear a lower rate of interest we can be of service to you.

Our offices are easy of access to all who are interested in REAL ESTATE, MORTGAGE, LOAN and INSURANCE.

This department is in care of competent people, and we should be pleased to welcome you and give information to our clients.

2 new law 40-ft. 4-family houses; nothing like them on the Heights; each apartment has separate telephone, double floors, electric lights, and are rented at low rents. Can be bought direct from builder—only one block from Subway station. It will pay you to have us show you these houses—Asking $70,000, terms to suit.

Elegant new law 50-ft. house, apartments of 2-6 and 2-5 rooms on a floor, up-to-date in every way, telephone in each apartment, convenient to Subway and Amsterdam Avenue cars; near the new City College, which will keep them always rented. Will rent for $9,000. Price $75,000, terms to suit.

SPECIAL—Row of new law 40-ft. houses, apartments of 2-5, 2-4 rooms on each floor; especially attractive fronts. Can be bought under $60,000 each—easy terms. Rents over $7,000. We know they are a bargain.

IT IS A FACT

We make a specialty of private houses, both selling and renting. Spring list now ready.

We have a few houses left at $13,000, several at $15,000, a bargain at $16,000, and some elegant houses $17,000 to $25,000.

Why pay $30,000 in the lower part of the city when you can buy one just as good in a nice location for $18,000?

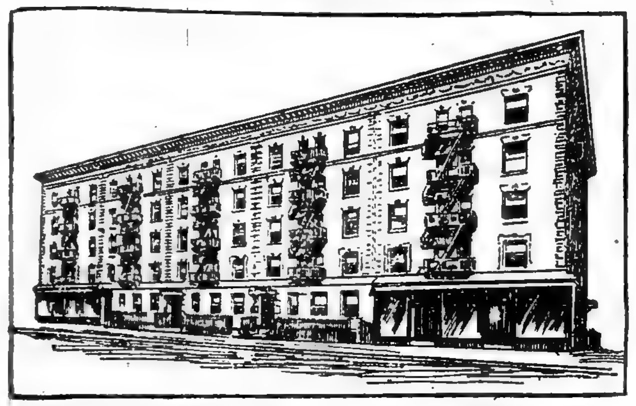
LONGWOOD AVENUE SECTION

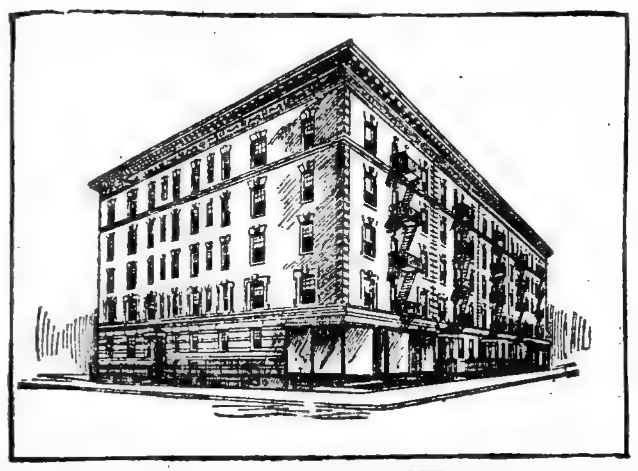
A Handsome Block of Apartments.



Built on Longwood Ave. by James A. Frame & Son.

James A. Frame & Son, who are the owners and builders of the attractive row of apartment houses shown in this column, are builders of high reputation whose specialty has been high-class dwellings and apartments in Manhattan Borough. Perhaps one of the best specimens of their work is the Avondale apartments, on Broadway. Messrs. Frame & Son, whose offices are in the Johnson Building, near the Prospect Avenue Subway station, were fortunate enough to secure a block fronting upon Longwood Avenue, three blocks from the rapid transit station, upon which they have erected the elegant row of houses shown above and below. The apartments are complete in detail, and every modern improvement tending to the comfort of tenants has been installed. They are new-law houses, and their liberal courts provide ample light and air, assuring healthful conditions. Private hallways, dumbwaiters, sanitary refrigerators, and a most convenient arrangement of the large, handsomely decorated rooms are but a few of the attractive points.

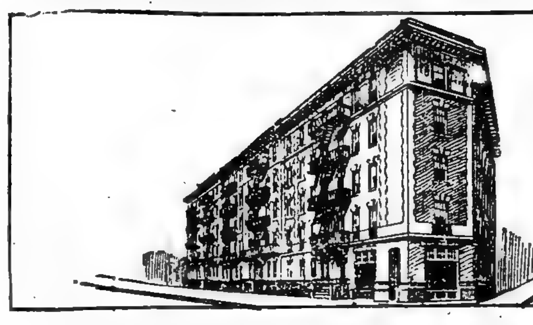
Frame & Son's Apartment Houses, Side View.



George C. Edgar's Sons, whose offices are at 2 West Eighty-eighth Street, are the builders and owners of the two rows of elegant apartment houses on Longwood Avenue, shown in the accompanying illustrations.

They are situated one and two blocks east of the Prospect Avenue Rapid Transit station, on the north side of Longwood Avenue. The Messrs. Edgar are too well known to need a lengthy introduction here. They are also the builders and owners of the Mohonk and Minnewaska apartment houses, on Central Park West, as well as other high-class apartments and dwellings in the Fifth Avenue section, conspicuous among their achievements being the home of Archer Huntington.

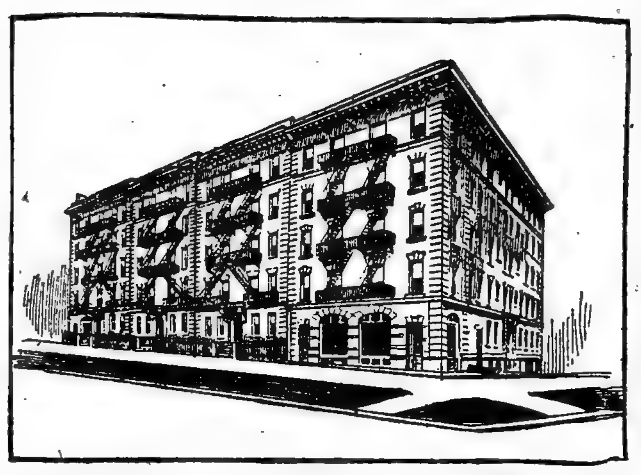
One of Geo. C. Edgar's Sons' Apartments.



One Block East of Rapid Transit Station.

As the illustrations in this column would indicate, these apartments are strictly high class, and are very substantial additions to the Longwood Avenue section. Each house is installed with every conceivable modern convenience, based on the same lines as their other structures. The apartment house shown in the above illustration is less than one block from the rapid transit station. It is constructed of red brick and limestone, giving it a very attractive appearance. The one shown below in this column is finished in buff brick and limestone, and is situated two blocks east of the rapid transit station. Both apartment houses are finished in hardwood in the best of taste, and are equipped with steam heat, hot and cold water, dumbwaiters, and tiled baths.

Another of Geo. C. Edgar's Sons' Apartments.



CHOICEST DISTRICT IN THE BRONX AND ONE OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL IN THE CITY.

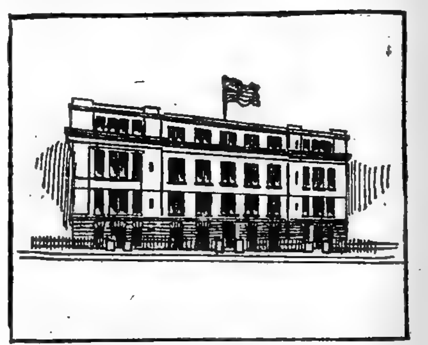
Remarkable Growth of a New Neighborhood, Whose Natural Conditions and Future Was Foreseen by the Sagacity and Foresight of the Leading and Wealthiest Builders of Manhattan, Who Fairly Plunged in the Section by Erecting Blocks of Apartments Which Easily Outclass Anything of Their Kind.

The Longwood Avenue section is to-day the most interesting in the Borough of the Bronx. Elegant apartment houses have sprung up within the past year as if by magic, and the quality of the structures and the extensive improvements in the locality will come as a complete and pleasant surprise to many who have not recently visited it. Although the proximity of this section to the rapid transit route has been a potent factor in its rapid development, the fact that a number of competent builders and conscientious real estate operators became interested in its welfare, each of whom has taken a personal pride in contributing to its general excellent appearance, has made the existing conditions possible.

Rapid Transit.

The Longwood Avenue section is situated directly upon the rapid transit route, the station being known as "Prospect Avenue," and situated at the junction of Longwood, Prospect and Westchester Avenues.

This is the second station north of 149th Street, at which point the line emerges from the tunnel and continues northward upon the elevated structure. This station is only ten minutes from the Lenox Avenue and 116th Street Subway station, and the unprecedented rush of tenants from other parts of Greater New York to this high-class residential district, with its moderate rentals, so easily accessible to the business districts of New York, indicate that its wonderful advantages are appreciated. Only a few hundred feet east of the Prospect Avenue station, the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad is to erect a station upon Longwood Avenue, and together with the Subway and the various trolley lines running along Westchester Avenue, the Longwood Avenue section has rapid transit facilities unequalled in any part of the Bronx.



LONGWOOD AVENUE SCHOOL.

The Longwood Plaza.

Longwood Avenue, as well as the intersecting streets, is paved with asphalt blocks, and has along its center a series of parklets, or grass plots, making the general scheme of street decoration most picturesque. These parkways are under the supervision of the Department of Parks, and make attractive and healthful breathing spots. The surrounding land has unequalled advantages in elevation and outlook, the street level being about 65 feet above the sea level, thus assuring healthful conditions.

Schools and Churches.

The Longworth Avenue Public School is one of the handsomest modern structures of its kind ever erected by the city, and is an ornament to the thoroughfare. It occupies the entire block on Longwood Avenue between Beck and Kelly Streets, and the fact that children living in this section can attend this school without having to cross trolley tracks, has added greatly to its popularity. Within a few blocks of Longwood Avenue are several churches of various denominations, and taking into consideration the number of first-class stores in the immediate vicinity, the location for a home is ideal.

Jacob Leitner, the well-known real estate operator of the Bronx, whose offices are in the Johnson Building, is the manager of the two massive apartment houses shown in this column, as well as a number of others in the immediate vicinity of Longwood Avenue. The Manhanset apartments is the first elevator apartment house ever built in the Bronx. It faces both Longwood and Prospect Avenue, overlooking these parkways, and has helped materially to fix the high standard of the neighborhood. The architectural effect of this construction is most pleasing, and each apartment is liberally planned with wide private halls. Jacob Leitner is also the manager of the Dawson Street apartment houses, shown below. They are finished with the same careful attention to detail as the surrounding buildings of this section, and with the advantages of healthful surroundings, extensive outlook, and rapid transit facilities, combined with the unique arrangement of the living rooms, which affords all the privacy of a residence, they are naturally in demand. Jacob Leitner maintains a separate rental department, thus assuring tenants of his buildings prompt and courteous attention.

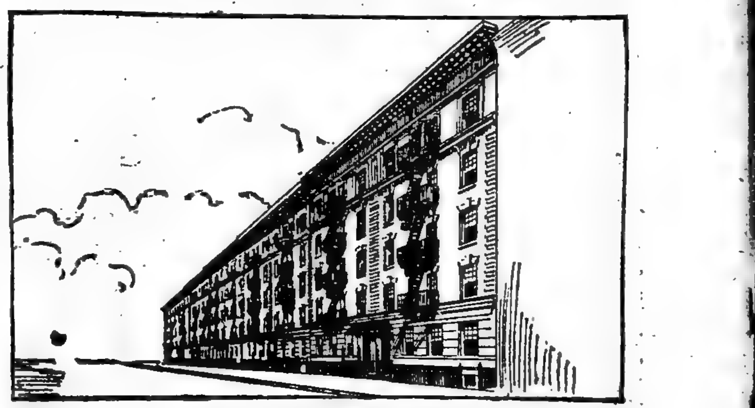
The Johnson Houses, Hewitt Place, just North of Longwood Ave.



Purchased by Albert Zimmermann for N. & E. and Ferd. Marx.

The Johnson houses, situated on the east side of Hewitt Place, (close to Longwood Avenue,) the first street east of the Prospect Avenue Rapid Transit station, are the handsomest row of apartment houses built by George F. Johnson & Sons. That the greatest care in the erection of these houses has been given is shown by the fact that not only did the Messrs. Johnson themselves devote their personal attention to their layout and construction, but had for their assistants Charles L. Morse, the general Superintendent of the Johnson Houses, who was aided by Percy E. Lane, his assistant, both well known as building managers of ability. The houses, twelve in number, are each forty feet wide, with three families on each floor, and are named, respectively, the Puritan, Riverside, Rutherford, Sterling, Aberdeen, Lafayette, Longworth, Lucerne, Madison, Mohegan, Mohonk, and Oxford. N. & E. and Ferd. Marx have purchased these houses through Albert Zimmermann, their attorney, one of the most sanguine believers in the present and future of the Longwood Avenue section. Mr. Zimmermann, who is one of the best-known expert real estate men in the city, bought the houses on behalf of Messrs. N. & E. and Ferd. Marx from the plans a year ago, when lots in this section and building materials were much lower than at present, and they have been finished under his direction. The construction and materials used in these houses are the best, and the appointments of each are both elegant and convenient, making them strictly high class in every respect, and they are being eagerly sought by prospective tenants.

Bronx Only Beginning Its Era of Prosperity and Development

Borough President Haffen Tells of Its Great Growth and Future Prospects—Building Records, Now Published for the First Time, Show Phenomenal Progress.

By Borough President Louis F. Haffen.

Tales of the wonderful growth of Western cities and towns fade into insignificance when compared with the giant strides the Borough of the Bronx has made in the course of a few years. Its increase in population, wealth, and general development is universally conceded to be one of the most striking evolutions of history.

All great cities of the world have been the outcome of centuries of gradual development. Even London and Paris, rated as the two largest cities, grew as man grows to maturity, strengthening in fibre and bone and nerve and brain year by year, each successive period during which they were passing from infancy to full growth involving a century of time.

But the Borough of the Bronx has accomplished all this in a few years. Since its annexation to New York City it has shown an increase of 1,000 per cent. in population, and 1,200 per cent. in the value of taxable property. If it were a city by itself it would rank as the ninth largest in the United States.

In 1874, the year the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards were annexed to New York City, they represented a conglomeration of not less than fifty-two villages and hamlets west of the Bronx River. The population of this territory was approximately 33,000, scattered in small and unrelated settlements over an area of 12,317 acres. In 1895 the territory east of the Bronx River was annexed, adding 14,500 acres to the city domain and making a total of 26,800 acres, or 42 square miles of city territory north and east of the Harlem River.

The population of 33,000 in 1874 has grown to 350,000 in 1905. An increase of more than 1,000 per cent. in so brief a period is perhaps without a parallel in the history of the world. When it is considered that nearly all this wonderful growth has taken place since 1895, when the final maps of the street and highway system of the present borough west of the Bronx River were completed and filed, an idea may be obtained of the rapid development, present prosperity, and future possibilities of this section of New York City.

In 1895, the Borough of the Bronx, then the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Wards, had perhaps 100,000 inhabitants within its boundaries. In 1900, the Federal census gave the borough a population of 200,507, so that in five years the figures had doubled. It is a conservative statement that during the last twelve months at least 75,000 new inhabitants have come to the Bronx. This marvelous increase means that if the present policy of development and improvements by efficient municipal and borough administrations is unchecked, and the growth continues in the same ratio, 1,000,000 people will reside in the Borough of the Bronx within ten years, and that two, or, at most, three, decades will see a larger resident population in the Bronx than in any other borough in Greater New York.

INCREASED POPULATION.

The percentage of increase in population of the various cities of the United States during the ten years from 1890 to 1900, shown by the United States census of 1900, affords an official basis of comparison which tells for the Bronx a story of development unequaled in municipal annals. The census gives the following figures:

Chicago	1,698,575	54
Philadelphia	1,293,697	23
St. Louis	575,238	27
Boston	560,892	25
Baltimore	508,957	17
Cleveland	381,768	46
Buffalo	352,219	37
San Francisco	342,782	14
Cincinnati	325,902	9
Pittsburg	321,616	34
Manhattan	1,850,093	29
Brooklyn	1,136,582	30
Queens	152,999	82
Richmond	67,021	29
Bronx	200,507	127
Bronx (1905, 5 years' growth)	350,000	75

Of the counties in the State of New York, outside of Greater New York, Erie alone has a larger population than the Borough of the Bronx, which in this respect is as large as Cincinnati or Pittsburg and larger than New Orleans, Detroit, Milwaukee, Washington, Newark, Jersey City, or Minneapolis. There are but eight cities in the United States with a population in excess of that of the Bronx—Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston, Baltimore, Cleveland, Buffalo, and San Francisco.

The last two years, however, have broken all records, and the history of the Bronx during that period is one of unparalleled growth and prosperity. It bristles with the record of the completion of subways, tunnels, bridges over the Harlem and other waterways, and other city and borough undertakings of prime importance. Yet the plans projected and adopted for the enlargement of local transportation facilities by the building of new subways and the extension and improvement of existing underground, elevated, and surface lines of communication, the completion of a Court House, the erection of public baths, the construction of docks along the fifty-nine miles of Bronx water front, the completion of boulevards and parkways, the paving of streets and highways, and the extension of water and sewer systems will further accelerate the movement that is rapidly creating a great city north of the Harlem River. New arteries of travel are to connect every section of the borough with the business heart of the city in lower Manhattan.

The Rapid Transit Commission has approved subway plans that are on a scale worthy of the borough. Jerome Avenue and the territory west of it, the Southern Boulevard, and the northern and eastern sections of the borough, including William's Bridge, Westchester, Unionport, Wakefield, and other centres are included within a comprehensive system of transit that will revolutionize the conditions which now exist in the zone outside the present Subway and elevated lines. Grade crossings are being abolished. The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is to spend millions to improve its lines within the Bronx. The New York Central, Harlem, and New York & Putnam Railroads are to be doubled in carrying capacity by the laying of additional tracks and new stations and the substitution of electricity for steam as a motive power.

Records of the Finance Department show the Bronx to be a self-sustaining borough. Instead of being a financial burden upon the rest of the city the Bronx pays into the city treasury taxes approximately equal in amount to all the appropriations and expenditures for public works carried on within its limits.

BOROUGH'S GREAT FUTURE.

The great natural topographical advantages of the borough, with its 26,800 acres of rolling land and level plains, are supplemented by a water front magnificent in extent and in the facilities it offers to the growing trade and commerce of the metropolis. This water front is destined to be the centre of the greatest manufacturing district in the United States, while it is a safe prediction that along the deep water frontage on the Harlem River, East River, and Long Island Sound the finest warehouse system in the world will eventually be built up.

It is but a question of a few years when ocean liners and New England coast vessels will begin and end their journeys at great wharves and docks to be constructed along the Bronx frontage of the East River and the Sound. The deepening and enlargement of the Erie Canal and the completion of the Harlem Kills improvement and the Harlem River Ship Canal will bring the Bronx and the maritime States of New England into direct water communication with the great lakes of the Northwest.

Before many years have elapsed barges and vessels of a thousand tons burden will sail from Portland and Boston via Long Island Sound, the Harlem River, and the Ship Canal to the Hudson at Spuyten Duyvil, and from thence north and west by river and Erie Canal to Buffalo, and through the lakes to Chicago or Duluth. This vast commerce will converge at Port Morris and its vicinity, and will have a mighty influence in increasing the population and hastening industrial and commercial development of the Bronx.

A review of the public improvements completed within two years, or in process of completion, would give only a partial picture of the movement that has already begun and which will make the borough a great city in itself.

Among the many important public enterprises projected or now under way in the borough is the building of the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, the removal of all grade crossings except those used by trolley cars, the expenditure of $10,000 for a floating public bath, and of $247,500 for interior public baths, the erection of a borough office building at Williams's Bridge to cost $35,000, the building of bridges and approaches to and over railroad tracks to cost over half a million dollars, the erection of the new court house at 161st Street and Third Avenue at a cost of $800,000, the building and equipment of a corporation yard and stables at a cost of $159,000, the construction of a bridge over the Bronx River at 222d Street at a cost of $200,000, and the construction of the Webster Avenue relief sewer at a cost of $705,000.

Amazing as the growth of the Bronx in population has been since annexation in 1874, and more especially since the present home rule system of government went into effect in the early nineties, the increase, within the same period, in the assessed valuations of real, personal, and corporate property is even more wonderful. In 1874 the assessed valuation of every form of taxable property within the territory then annexed to New York City amounted to $22,906,365. In 1893, when the present local administration entered upon its career, the total assessed valuation of the territory west of the Bronx River was $58,612,268, an increase of approximately 75 per cent. in twenty years.

The assessed valuation of real estate alone in the Bronx for 1905 amounts to $246,852,068. To this total should be added $44,681,150, the assessed value of personal property and of corporation realty and franchises, giving a grand total of $291,533,218 as the assessed value of every form of taxable property in the Bronx in the past year.

This shows an increase of 1,200 per cent. in assessed valuation since annexation and an increase of 500 per cent. since 1893. Within twelve years the taxable value of the Bronx has been multiplied by five. It is now greater than the assessed valuation of any county in the State except New York, Kings, and Erie. According to the very latest figures, the assessed valuation of the Bronx at the present time is in excess of the combined valuations of Queens and Monroe Counties, the two wealthiest counties in the State outside of New York, Kings, and Erie.

Beginning with the assessed valuation of $22,906,365, in 1874, the borough since 1893 exhibits the following annual gains in assessed valuation of property subject to local and State taxation:

Year.	Total Assessed Valuation.
1893	$58,612,268
1894	62,595,458
1895	65,885,155
1896	84,580,009
1897	85,714,520
1898	93,652,223
1899	130,508,918
1900	146,508,491
1901	155,993,160
1902	166,183,678
1903	261,852,808
1904	275,783,430
1905	291,533,218

It is the 1906 figures, however, that tell the true story and make plain the results of the boom that struck the Bronx over a year ago, and sent prices soaring, for they show an increased assessed valuation in real estate alone of over $84,000,000. Figures not yet complete for personal property and corporation franchises show a similar increase.

We are only on the frontier of a Greater Bronx, when the population will be counted by millions, and when the seat of municipal power and wealth will be located north of the Harlem River. Bronx confidence in the magnificent future of the borough was never so great or so well founded as at this very time.

REMARKABLE BUILDING ACTIVITY.

But the very best evidence of the growth and prosperity of the Bronx is the increase in the number of its buildings of every description since 1895. Not in the annals of the development of any suburban section of any city is there a similar record of expansion and progress. Since 1895 the official records show that 16,931 buildings have been constructed within the borough at an aggregate cost of $155,387,054. This enormous sum represents the cost of the buildings alone, and does not include the value of the land on which the buildings stand. This amount is greater than the total assessed valuation of Onondaga County, which contains the City of Syracuse, and greater than the combined valuations of the populous Counties of Broome, Chemung, and Dutchess.

The substantial character of the buildings constructed within the borough makes it plain that this phenomenal addition to the permanent population of the Bronx comes from the best citizenship of the Republic, business and professional men, artisans, clerks, mechanics, and their families—in other words, the law-abiding, progressive, and wealth-producing class of the people.

The stable character of the growth is beyond question. It is not a boom such as characterizes the temporary expansion of Western cities, or even some sections of Greater New York. The growth in population is fully abreast of the vast building operations and the opening and paving of new streets and thoroughfares. In fact, in some sections of the borough, especially along the line of the Subway, it is difficult for builders to keep pace with the influx of new tenants and home-seekers.

During the last twelve months more than $38,000,000 has been expended in building operations, while block after block of the most substantial brick and stone apartment houses and dwellings have been erected. Out of this amount over $30,000,000 has been put into stone and brick apartments alone. Frame dwellings and flats have been erected to the number of 1,015 at a cost of $4,660,060, while $1,346,000 has been spent in the erection of office buildings, stores, factories, and workshops.

An insight into the extraordinary high quality of Bronx building construction is obtained by the mere statement, based on official figures, that the average cost per building in the Bronx is $18,435, as against $6,500 in Brooklyn and $4,000 in Queens. Detailed figures covering the building operations in the Bronx for the years 1902, 1903, 1904, and 1905 appear in the accompanying table, now made public for the first time:

BRONX

OPENING UP OF THE ANNEXED DISTRICT

Recent Changes in Territory East of the Bronx River.

MANY OLD ESTATES SOLD

Prospective Transit Improvements Have Led to Speculative Buying Over a Wide Area.

That section of the Bronx known as the Annexed District became part of the city about 1896, and consists of that portion lying east of the Bronx River bounded on the south and east by the East River and Long Island Sound, and on the north by Mount Vernon and the Pelham line. The section contains about 14,500 acres, of which about 2,100 acres are embraced in parks and parkways, in which the easterly part of Bronx Park, the Bronx and Pelham Parkway, and Pelham Bay Park are included.

As a whole, the physical aspect of the section is as beautiful as any portion of the city, the greater part of it being high, level ground, slightly undulating, with here and there along the water front, where creeks run in from the Sound and East River, salt marsh. Its beautiful water front has made it since the early Colonial days largely a residential section for the wealthy classes of the city, whose large estates, occupied generally in the Spring and Fall, are still to be seen, and many of which, in fact, are occupied even at the present time.

About 1899 the city graded an avenue through Bronx Park, which crossed or connected with all the old thoroughfares of the district. This, together with the development of the trolley system throughout the territory, at once attracted more or less attention to it, and from that time on public interest has increased with the building of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad, the New York & Port Chester Railroad project, the completion of the Subway to West Farms, the projected extensions of the Subway out to Pelham Bay Park and up White Plains Road, and the electrification of the Harlem and New Haven Railroads—improvements and projected improvements which will bring the section into close communication with Manhattan.

Then, again, it was recognized that there was a great disparity in values between that portion of the Bronx west of the Bronx River which had already undergone a readjustment of values, and where the average value of lots had risen from $2,500 to $5,000, and the section directly east, where large areas could be had at the rate of $2,500 to $5,000 an acre. This disparity was appreciated by operators who at once began to purchase property in the section to the east.

ALONG WHITE PLAINS ROAD.

The completion of the work of opening and grading White Plains Road, together with the electrification of the New York & Harlem Railroad has, however, caused a marked increase in activity and more or less increase in the value of the property in the westerly part of this territory. That portion within a thousand or fifteen hundred feet east of the Harlem Railroad and from West Farms north has had a marked increase in demand as well as in price. This section was perhaps the first to be improved to any extent.

The settlements of William's Bridge, Laconia, Wakefield, Jacksonville, Washingtonville, Cranford, Penfield, Olinville, and Bronxwood Park are along the high ridge on the east bank of the Bronx River, and the section has always been more or less convenient to the city by means of the Harlem Railroad, and of recent years the trolley along White Plains Road. The streets and avenues throughout the district were in many cases graded, curbed, flagged, and sewered, and the values ranged, up to a few years ago, from $400 to $700 a lot on the side streets, but in the last year values have risen from $700 to $1,200 a lot, and in comparison to other sections they still seem remarkably cheap.

Lots on White Plains Road which up to two or three years ago could be obtained for $1,000 to $1,200 a lot, now range in value from $2,500 to $3,000 a lot, and the present prospect is that within a very short time it will be impossible to obtain lots on White Plains Road even at these figures.

MANY OLD ESTATES SOLD.

It is in the easterly part of this section that a number of old estates have sold their holdings during the past year. I refer to the sales of the Cranford property, the Heintze property, part of the Schieffelin estate, the Pittman estate, the Blodgett & Tilden property, the Wolfe estate, and the Rauch estate.

The first sales which were made during the last year in this district were the purchases along Eastchester Road and near the line of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad, covering what were known as the Hunter, Bushnell, Schnugg, and Hamersley properties, which were purchased and have been recently resold at a considerable advance. Sales of these properties have been followed by activity in what might be known as the middle section, with sales of the Pearsall and O'Connor tracts on Pelham Bay Parkway, the Morris Park race track, and Westchester Heights East and Westchester Heights West, east of Morris Park race track. This great middle section is wholly undeveloped, with old farmhouses here and there—high ground, perfectly level, with beautiful views of the Sound to the east.

There has been a marked increase also in property to the northeast of this, along the line of Boston Road, toward the Pelham and Mount Vernon line, acreage having advanced in price from $1,000 and $1,500 an acre to $2,500 and $3,500 an acre. This section is adjacent to the Pelham Bay Parkway, and part of it adjoins the Hutchinson River and consists of a great deal of salt marsh.

In this extreme easterly section of the borough very little development has taken place, but that it will soon develop is shown by the recent sales of what is known as the Bruce Brown property, of the Wright estate at Locust Point, of the Kelly property at the Eastern Boulevard and Fort Schuyler Road, and of the Waring and Hupfel properties, all of which are located in this section. To the west there is the oldest settlement perhaps in the Annexed District—Westchester. South and west of this, Unionport, the Hunt and Van Nest estates and various other properties have been cut up and placed on the market.

NEW STREET OPENINGS.

Westchester Avenue has recently been completed from Westchester, and my impression is that this will be the next section to attract public attention. In fact values have already commenced to rise in Unionport, Westchester, and the adjacent territory. The opening and grading of 177th Street will make an enormous difference to the section, as it will afford a direct east and west connection with the rest of the city. South of Unionport is what is known as Clason's Point, and here there has been no development whatever, but acreage values are steady.

Perhaps the greatest increase in the district during the last two or three years has been in that section directly east and northeast of West Farms itself, along the West Farms Road and Morris Park Avenue out to Westchester and the Morris Park race track. This has been due largely to the Subway running to West Farms and the cutting through of White Plains Road.

The whole section is new and comparatively undeveloped, but the city is laying it out in streets, avenues, and boulevards. It is really the only property left in the city to-day that is comparatively cheap and which can be used for homes for people of moderate means and the poorer classes. I am of the opinion that a very large part of the increase in value in Bronx Borough will take place in this district and that here is a great field for future operations in real estate and one in which large profits will be realized.

J. CLARENCE DAVIES.

WESTCHESTER ROAD'S WORK.

Progress on the High-Speed Line to Port Chester and White Plains.

The astounding development in the Bronx within the last year or two now bids fair to be repeated in Westchester County, with a consequent increase in real estate values. Stretching from the Sound to the Hudson, and bounded on one side by New York City and on the other side by the State of Connecticut, it rivals the beauty of the Berkshires, and with the completion of the rapid transit facilities afforded by the building of the New York, Westchester & Boston high-speed electric road it is destined to be the healthful home of countless New Yorkers and to draw back to citizenship within the State innumerable commuters who now spend their nights and Sundays at far-off Jersey points.

Work on the New York, Westchester & Boston Road is progressing rapidly within the limits of the Bronx and in Mount Vernon. Bids are being received by the construction company on its main power house and electric equipment, and additional contracts are about to be let for the grading, masonry, and bridge work between Mount Vernon and Larchmont.

The construction of the road has been delayed to an aggravating extent by the hostility of a rival corporation and by the tactics of two or three large landowning interests of the type which have accumulated vast fortunes by waiting for more public-spirited citizens to create and develop value around their immense inherited real estate holdings.

The people behind the Westchester Road have gone quietly and persistently ahead with the development of their enterprise, regardless of the difficulties encountered. The "stand-and-deliver" methods of the obstructing landholders are now being submitted to the arbitrament of the courts through condemnation proceedings.

Land values along the line of the road have increased enormously. The fortunate holders of Pelham and New Rochelle real estate have been made dizzy within the past month by the sudden influx of homeseekers and speculators. Tracts of land in the county that a year ago could have been bought readily at $800 or $1,000 an acre have recently been changing hands at double and treble those figures. New subdivisions are springing up on all sides, and well-located corners and plots in Mount Vernon and New Rochelle have doubled in value. The railroad company has itself spent in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 for the property acquired by it, and by rapid and clever work through local brokers working in its interest has secured practically the whole of its right of way through the heart of the business sections of both Mount Vernon and New Rochelle before the speculator "caught on." Where they have met with exorbitant demands they have announced frankly their willingness to pay only a fair price for the property desired or to resort to condemnation proceedings.

There is said to have been a considerable amount of "plunging" by speculators in Larchmont and Mamaroneck on guesses as to the prospective route of the road through those places, but neither President Rhodes of the construction company nor Chief Engineer Pratt has yet taken the public into confidence as to which of several lines the road purposes adopting between Mount Vernon and White Plains on its White Plains Division or between New Rochelle and Port Chester on its main line. It will not be surprising, therefore, if some members of the speculative fraternity find themselves in possession of choice sub-divisions on the wrong line, and it behooves the legitimate investor to wait for an authoritative announcement as to the route, as well as concerning location of the company's stations.

JEROME AVENUE PRICES FIRM.

Connection with Subway Soon to Help Its Transit Facilities.

Prices hold firm in the Jerome Avenue section, south of King's Bridge Road, ranging from $6,000 a lot upward on the avenue itself, and from $2,500 upward on neighboring avenues and side streets.

The demand for houses in this section is much greater than the supply, its only temporary drawback being a lack of rapid transit, which will shortly be remedied by the continuation of the Sixth and Ninth Avenue Elevated Railroads and the contemplated subway up Jerome Avenue. Connection will soon be had by trolley with the present Subway at 181st Street by way of Washington Bridge, Aqueduct and Tremont Avenues; also at 207th Street by the Fordham Road trolley, and at King's Bridge by the King's Bridge Road trolley. These trolley connections are now nearing completion. With these improvements Jerome Avenue will grow rapidly in business importance.

It is the only north and south thoroughfare of prominence for the whole section between the Grand Concourse and the Harlem River, and tributary to it are prosperous residential districts of University Heights, Mount Hope, Fordham Heights, and Bedford Park.

BEDFORD PARK'S ACTIVITY.

William's Bridge Section Also Attracting Many Homeseekers.

The Bedford Park and William's Bridge sections of the Bronx have attracted an unusually large amount of attention from small investors and home seekers during the last few months. The auction sales of the Bruner and Varian estates, last Fall, in the opinion of the local brokers, Sonneborn & Co. and O'Hara Brothers, had much to do with the enlisting of a larger degree of public interest in these parts of the Bronx, which are so well adapted to immediate development both in point of natural location and surroundings.

The Bedford Park section, having been restricted, warrants the construction of the better class of dwellings, either private or two-family houses, while in the William's Bridge territory there are ample opportunities to secure small houses the carrying expenses on which are less than the sums paid by many in apartment house rents. Single dwellings of seven rooms may be had for $5,000 up, and two-family houses containing eleven rooms and two baths for $7,500 up. Six-room houses in William's Bridge sell for $3,200 up, and the two-family structures for $4,800.

BROOKLYN

HUGE VOLUME OF TRADING IN BROOKLYN PROPERTIES

Both Central and Outlying Districts Sharing in Activity—Southerly and Easterly Parts of the Borough Developing Rapidly.

The speculative interest in Brooklyn realty, which has been in evidence all through the mild Winter, is with the approach of Spring growing and expanding into what even the more conservative of brokers and speculators who are watching the drift of things predict will be one of the most remarkable real estate booms in the borough's history. Supreme optimism appears to be the spirit of the market.

Tunnels and bridges, building or projected, and the vast plans of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for the development and improvement of its Long Island system have attracted to the Brooklyn field speculators and investors not only from the metropolis itself but from many other cities as well. There are, in fact, many well-informed brokers who assert that a great deal of the money which is now figuring in realty speculation in Brooklyn and on Long Island comes from Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, and other cities on the Pennsylvania lines, the money being that of speculators who have before this followed the development work of this company to their profit. A study of the realty records of Brooklyn for the last few months shows that a large number of the buyers have been men living in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and the Middle West. It appears from these also that there has been not a little dealing in which foreign capital has figured.

It is no exaggeration to state that the influx of investors and speculators has been such as to astound even the most sanguine and optimistic of Brooklyn brokers. There is not a dealer in the borough who has not had his hands full of business all Winter and who does not expect to be "over his head" in the Spring maelstrom of selling and buying which is already in motion. There is probably not a foot of land in Brooklyn, whatever its location, for which a purchaser cannot be found, if it is offered for sale at a reasonable price. It is a fact, indeed, that the supply of properties in the local market to-day does not meet the demand. Some properties there are which have changed hands half a dozen times in one day, such is the speculative activity in some quarters. Conditions in Canarsie and the southern section of East New York present themselves as striking indictations of the fever for realty buying which has seized upon the borough once known to fame as the City of Churches. In these districts, where only a year or so ago land was inactive and in excess supply, there has developed such a demand for vacant properties that even marshes which admit of reclamation from the tides find willing buyers.

IMMENSE VOLUME OF TRADING.

Even Manhattan and the Bronx are far behind Brooklyn in the volume of building and real estate dealings being carried on. Alfred J. Boulton, Register of Kings County, yesterday pointed out that the number of transactions recorded in his office daily is now greater than that of any three counties in the State combined. The tide, Mr. Boulton said, is rising rapidly and will not reach its flood until May, at the earliest.

The bulk of this Brooklyn trading is in vacant land, although transactions affecting improved properties are many. The farms in Brooklyn's suburbs, as farms, have disappeared. Nearly all have been gobbled up by syndicates, and either sold or resold in the line of speculation, or mapped out in home sites and disposed of piecemeal to small investors. Some of these, not long ago potato and corn fields, although out of the hands of their old farmer owners, are yet to be improved. Their newer owners are holding them against the expected big advance in prices this Spring.

As to the steady and, of late, rapid rise in values in Brooklyn's suburbs, Glenwood Hawkins, Secretary and Treasurer of the McLaughlin Real Estate Company, one of the largest concerns operating in Brooklyn suburban realty, while admitting that existing or proposed transit and like influences had their effect upon the market, said yesterday that he believed that the advance in the price of vacant land would be found, in the last analysis, to be due simply to the natural law of supply and demand.

"There are, we will say, about 100,000 vacant lots in Brooklyn," said he. "Last year there were something like 10,000 houses built in the outlying districts of the borough. The building of those houses, of course, reduced the supply of vacant property by many thousands of lots. If building operations continue at the present rate, additional land is used by the city for park purposes, and the vacant stretches otherwise taken up, we shall find in, say, half a dozen years very little, if any, vacant land in the market. The increased earning power of the land in this borough is also a factor which has greatly stimulated the demand for it. More and more builders who confined their operations to upper Manhattan and the Bronx are beginning to recognize the fact that it pays to build in Brooklyn. I know of a Manhattan builder who contemplated erecting some apartment houses on 181st Street, in the Bronx. He was offered lots there at $6,000 each, and figured that it would cost him about $2,000 a lot to blast out the rock. This man was induced to buy property on Kings Highway, in Brooklyn, the price being less than $1,000 a lot. He had no expensive rock blasting to do and saved a good deal of money on the purchase of the property and the erection of the [illegible]. And those houses to-day are [illegible] six dollars a month more for [illegible]nt than could be obtained [illegible] man first intended to build. Other builders are meeting the same experience, and this is but one of many logical reasons for the belief that Brooklyn's suburbs have a great future assured them."

ANOTHER ACTIVE TERRITORY.

South of Bay Ridge, along the water front to Coney Island and eastward to the shores of Jamaica Bay, there is a great field of realty activity. Despite the general advance in prices the trading is growing in volume daily. But a few years ago the land boomers in this suburban region had to resort to the public auction sale, the band concert, and the free lunch to work up interest and attract buyers, and even then got rid of their land slowly and at modest prices. To-day, in nearly all parts of this section, the dealers themselves are hunting for land to market, and are getting the prices asked with an ease which quite astonishes them. Bay Ridge, Bath Beach, and Coney Island are relying much on proposed or talked of subway extensions, while Borough Park, Parkville, Sheepshead Bay, and Flatlands are speculating confidently on transit improvements and extensions projected or being carried out by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

The Rapid Transit Company wants to build new lines into Flatlands and open up a big district which now has little or no communication by railroad with the rest of the city. The company says that if it can get authority to do so, it will extend several of its lines into Flatlands. This, the last of the old county towns annexed to Brooklyn, is experiencing a tremendous boom, despite its lack of transportation facilities. This is particularly true of the Canarsie portion of the ward. Brownsville has for some time been overflowing gradually into Canarsie. When the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, a few months ago, acquired the old Canarsie steam road and began the work of reconstructing it as an extension to its elevated system, there was a rush of small investors and speculators from Brownsville and Manhattan's east side to the old fishing village on the shore of Jamaica Bay. Weather-beaten old clamdiggers, who all their lives had earned a precarious living from the waters of the bay, suddenly found that the little tracts of land on which stood their humble homes had become of interest to speculators, and are dreaming now of easier lives.

BROWNSVILLE EXPANDING.

The boom which started in Brownsville has also spread eastward until even the inaccessible fields and meadows near old Mill Creek are feeling its influence. Buiding operations in this section of East New York have been of such extent as to give great vitality to the trading. From Atlantic Avenue south for a mile to New Lots Road, and even further, East New York has been undergoing a transformation which quite amazes visitors who remember the locality as a here and there broken stretch of farm land. Row after row of brick and frame flat houses or two-family dwellings have gone up, hundreds of stores have been opened, and as fast as the buildings go up they are filling with people, most of them from the crowded neighborhoods of Manhattan.

Speaking of the wonderful development of East New York, George A. F. North, Jr., Secretary and Treasurer of the Charles H. Smith Company, said yesterday that he believed this growth, although rapid, was most substantial, and he saw no reason why there should be a reaction.

"So far as East New York is concerned," said Mr. North, "I look for an indefinite continuance of healthy conditions. In 1890 we experienced a boom here which was altogether different from the present one. That boom lasted for about two years and then there was a reaction. But it had not the solid and substantial foundation which the one of to-day possesses. The causes of it were more or less artificial, whereas the basis for the present boom is natural and enduring. The developing policy pursued by the Pennsylvania Company is making of East New York a great railroad and manufacturing centre. The Pennsylvania Company's improvements will place this section of Brooklyn in more direct communication with the rest of the country by railroad than any other portion of the borough. The Williamsburg Bridge has brought to East New York many thousands of people who have found here in the cheaper, healthier, and generally better living, emancipation from the life which obtains in the crowded tenement quarters of Manhattan. Other transit improvements are certain to attract here many thousands more, and the building of homes for them will mean the disappearance of vacant land and a steady and reasonable growth in realty values.

CHANGES IN RIDGEWOOD.

The Ridgewood section of Brooklyn also seems to be catching much of the overflow population from the east side, Manhattan, and lower Williamsburg. Transactions in realty there have grown daily to such numbers that the dealers have found it necessary to establish a real estate exchange of their own. Such has been the growth of the district that a bank and a trust company have been started there, while another trust company has opened a branch office there. Large tracts of vacant land, lying on either side of Myrtle Avenue and extending over into Queens Borough, have been bought up by combinations of buyers, and nearly all of it is to be cut up into building plots this Spring or Summer. One large realty concern has invested for its clients nearly $1,000,000 in undeveloped land on the Brooklyn-Queens border in Ridgewood. The announcement that the Long Island Railroad Company has planned to build a passenger station at Myrtle Avenue has further stimulated trading in Ridgewood, as it is understood that the section will have eventually direct communication with Manhattan by way of the Pennsylvania tunnel.

IN THE OLDER SECTIONS.

The older sections of Brooklyn, in common with the suburbs, are feeling the effects of the rush for realty investment and speculation. In these neighborhoods, while the transactions are fewer than in the newer sections, the business done is mostly in improved properties, and involves larger individual investments. The demand is chiefly for apartment houses, but the supply of this class of property in the market is very limited. Many of the old three and four story one-family dwellings in these neighborhoods are being enlarged and converted into flats, that they may produce a larger revenue. John E. Henry of the firm of Boerum & Henry of Sumner Avenue, said yesterday that realty values in the Bedford and St. Mark's districts had advanced ten per cent. in less than a year, and that he looks for a further increase this Spring. There is nowhere near enough property in the market, he said, to meet the demand.

Within the last month or two property on Brooklyn Heights has reached the highest mark in its history. Realty in this advantageously situated part of Brooklyn has always commanded high prices, and rents there have been the highest in the borough. Speaking of Heights realty conditions, Thomas Hovendon, of the D. & M. Chauncey Company, said the chief factor in its favor is that with its peculiar accessibility from Manhattan it is as quiet a place of residence as any in the city. Comparatively little property is for sale, he said, as most owners find it profitable to retain their holdings. Many of the old mansions, as well as the cheaper class of houses on the Heights, are gradually giving way to family and bachelor apartment houses. Plans are now being drawn for a sixteen-story apartment hotel, which a Detroit capitalist is to build on the Packer property, in Grace Court, overlooking the harbor.

Rents in Brooklyn, while they have been steadily advancing, are still far below those in Manhattan for similar properties. Some builders who have been devoting their efforts to the erection of higher-class apartment houses have suddenly come to realize that there is a scarcity of cheaper and middle-grade flats in the borough. It is expected that the builders will give more attention to these classes of buildings this Spring and Summer.

STATEN ISLAND REALTY ENTERS UPON NEW ERA

City Ferry Has Worked Complete Change of Conditions.

MUCH BUILDING ACTIVITY

The municipal ferry to Staten Island has been in operation five months. The volume of travel between Manhattan and Richmond has increased 20 per cent. during that period, and it is estimated that more property has changed hands there in the last year than in the preceding two decades. This declaration is made by old Staten Island residents who not only know the situation from personal observation, but also by those who base their assertions upon the records. They say that the island is undergoing an unprecedented spirit of real estate activity, and coupled with the activity is the conspicuous feature that prices there have doubled within the last six months.

J. W. Hughes, a large property owner on the island, in speaking of the subject yesterday, said:

"Staten Island is the coming rival of Manhattan for residential purposes. All New Yorkers know that there is a Staten Island, and that it is cool and beautiful, but they have been brought up with the idea that this island has been for but two classes, one the very rich, the descendants of the old patroons, and the other those who were willing to take a long time to get home for the purpose of saving rent. All this is now changed. The great middle class now finds the island accessible by means of a transit rapid, frequent, and comfortable. The new order of things has made the island one of the great future residential quarters of the metropolis, as well as an important commercial point."

Residents of the island are pointing out many other inducements to people who are looking for homes outside of Manhattan. The island measures from St. George to Tottenville about eighteen miles, and, being a rolling country, it represents almost every elevation up to 400 feet above the sea level—the highest point on the Atlantic Coast south of Maine. It is well served by steam railroads and electric cars, and in many localities municipal improvements—streets, water works, electricity, and gas—are complete. While the population is growing at a rapid rate, the area of the island is so great that there is an abundance of room for further development.

Any one taking the trouble to make the trip from Manhattan on the new municipal ferry between the hours of 6 and 7:30 A. M. will be surprised to find the great number of workmen who live in Manhattan and are compelled to make this trip every night and morning in order to reach their work on Staten Island, because they are unable at the present time to find suitable homes there. Hence a great field for building is offered.

Central and Southern Staten Island are made up of many small localities, each as desirable as any of the others. Values and rents vary little between them. Each has its district of costly residences and of moderate-priced homes. One section which would seem particularly to invite the attention of builders is the north shore, in close proximity to the great manufacturing and commercial district along that part of the island's waterfront.

It is now possible to secure sites on Staten Island in fully improved neighborhoods, and easy of access by the electric street railways, at prices from $150 to $300 a lot. It is possible also to build suitable houses for from $1,500 to $2,000 each. With the other necessary general improvements, the total cost of lot and building would therefore run from $1,700 to $2,500.

Charles E. Griffith, Sr., of the firm of Charles E. Griffith & Son said yesterday, in speaking of the island and its real estate inducements:

"Old conditions are fast being forgotten as new ones arise. The city has established a ferry with boats unequaled for comfort and speed. The general improvements made in the last few years, including a magnificent borough building, schools, and new streets and sewers, have all had their influences in drawing people to the borough.

"Realty values are steadily increasing, and bid fair to show advances equal to that in the other boroughs of Greater New York. Investors from all parts of the country are inquiring about Staten Island property, and several of the large title insurance companies from Manhattan have opened offices and are doing business here. That is a sign of favorable conditions. The time was, and not so long ago, when it was difficult to get money to make improvements here. That day has passed forever. We are experiencing most decided and far-reaching improvements in realty conditions."

STATEN ISLAND

FOR SALE.

The celebrated Slosson Farm, located at Castleton Corners, Borough of Richmond, City of New York. This is one of the most attractive home site properties within the limits of Greater New York. Its location is about 300 feet above sea level, affording a magnificent view of the City of New York and the adjoining cities of New Jersey, and for pure air and healthfulness this location cannot be equaled. The property has been tentatively laid out and can be readily improved without great expense. Improvements are fast surrounding the property, and there are now trolley lines on two sides, one of which leads direct to St. George Ferry, time fifteen minutes, and with the new magnificent ferryboats, which are making an average time of twenty minutes, this property is brought within thirty-five minutes of Manhattan. There are many advantages in this section that cannot be found in any other portion of the Greater City.

The tentative map of this property shows over 500 lots, 25x100 and over in size. We are offering this property for $60,000, and it can be sold on a basis of $20,000 cash, balance on mortgage, with a reasonable release clause.

If the conditions here to-day indicate anything, it is fair to assume that this property will be worth at least three times the price now asked in the very near future.

We are offering also at New Springville, Staten Island, four miles from Port Richmond and the new ferry to be established from there to Manhattan by the City, on the Main Macadam Road, a Fine Farm of about 25 acres, with a commodious farm dwelling, barns, windmill, etc., brook running through the property, pleasant neighborhood, church, school, store and Post Office within a few hundred feet; trolley, at present, a half mile distant.

Property in this section is rapidly increasing in value and much of the property has been bought up. This property offers a good opportunity for investment with a view to holding the same for a few years. It is leased until April 1st, 1907; by that time it should be worth more than double the $12,000, at which it can now be bought. Terms, 50 per cent. cash, balance on bond and mortgage at five per cent.

We have also other properties, large and small, for sale.

To those who are really in the market to buy property, we will be glad to give further information.

MARCH 1906

INCREASED VALUES ALONG SOUND SHORE

Westchester and Connecticut Towns Growing Rapidly.

PRESENT RANGE OF PRICES

Many Development Projects Being Carried Forward—Improved Transit Now Assured.

In no part of the country around New York City has the remarkable increase in land values, based upon actual worth and not upon fictitious conditions, been felt in the past year more than in the southern part of Westchester County and that part of Fairfield County, Conn., adjoining it.

This increase is due, first, to the enormous growth of the city itself; secondly, to the settling of the transit problem, for it is now felt that Southern Westchester will have the quickest and best means of reaching the business centre of New York of any of the outlying districts, due to the electrification of the New Haven Railroad, as well as to the building of the other electric lines now under way.

Beginning with New Rochelle, the effect upon land values is seen as far as Stamford, and even beyond. At New Rochelle, where, in the residential part of the town, plots 50 by 100 could have been bought, even a year ago, for from $1,700 to $2,000, the owners are now asking—and what is more, getting—$1,750 to $3,000, and in the business part of the town this increase is equally apparent.

In Larchmont, unimproved land on the outskirts of the village proper is now selling for $2,500 to $4,000 per acre which a year ago could have been had at scarcely more than half this figure, and in Larchmont Park, which has all city improvements added to the attraction of the country, plots of 75 by 125 are now selling rapidly at from $2,000 to $3,500, while in Larchmont Manor, separated from the Park only by the Boston Post Road, a plot of equal size brings from $3,500 to $7,000.

At Mamaroneck the increase in values is equally noticeable, but as much of the land about the village is held in large country places, there has been less buying. Harrison has several land development projects of smaller proportions, and land values have already felt the benefit to be derived from better and more rapid means of reaching New York.

In Rye there is almost nothing left to be bought at any price, within reasonable distance of the railway station, except in one or two developments, adjoining the Apawamis Golf Club, but even in the newest of these, begun only a few months ago, over half of the property has been disposed of at a very handsome profit. Like Mamaroneck, a large part of Rye is given up to large country places, which are not in the market.

At Portchester the same conditions prevail, there being little land for sale, and most of that of a very high class, on Byram Point. Values in Greenwich and Belle Haven, as well as in the territory north of the railroad, have doubled in the last two or three years.

At Cos Cob and Riverside, which are divided by the Mianus River, so little land is for sale, except in large parcels, that the increase is not as evident to the casual observer; but in acreage property the actual increase is just as apparent. At Sound Beach actual sales have taken place at from $15,000 to $18,000 an acre, involving tracts which three years ago could have been bought in the rough at $2,000 to $2,500.

The largest and most striking development at Stamford is seen on Shippan Point, about two miles from the station and reached by trolley. There a company has bought up all the available land and, after thoroughly improving it with roads, sewers, and water supply, is selling it at from $5,000 to $10,000 an acre—land which two years ago could, in many instances, have been bought at $1,500 to $2,000 an acre.

Despite the recent large increase in prices along the Sound shore, home seekers now regard the territory with great favor, because, for those who may wish to sell in the future, it affords promise of a steady demand and an even higher scale of values.

EDWARD McVICKAR.

MOUNT VERNON'S GROWTH.

Many Chances for Profitable Building and Investment.

The general tendency of improvements in Mount Vernon has been toward one and two family houses, and the demand now prevailing to an extraordinary extent is for dwellings costing from $6,000 to $8,000 and renting for from $45 to $75 a month. It must be remembered that houses of this class prove to be good investments, because, generally speaking, they have a guaranteed rent of at least 10 per cent. on the actual cost, and with the prevailing tendency of railroad companies to extend their lines to and through Mount Vernon there is no doubt that the population will double itself within the next five years. By that time not less than 50,000 people will be residents of the city. To those who have had experience this is guarantee enough for investment at the present time.

Mount Vernon will have in the near future all the advantages to be offered by the electrical equipment and improved conditions on the Harlem Railroad branch of the New York Central Railroad. In addition to this the New Haven Railroad is being electrically equipped, the New York & Westchester Line is being constructed through the central part of the city. Then again there are other conditions that should be noted. Numerous manufacturing concerns have recently established large plants in Mount Vernon, prominent among them being the Mauser Company, the Max Ams Company, and the Bronze Company, whose payrolls each year will amount to over $400,000.

The greatest present need is for homes ranging in price from $4,000 to $10,000. This demand cannot be filled, and single and double houses are eagerly sought for at rental values that far exceed expectations. These advantages are all offered at the present time in Mount Vernon, and have created many opportunities for profitable investment.

AT HASTINGS-ON-HUDSON.

Attractive Town Gaining Many New Residents This Spring.

Hastings-on-Hudson, just beyond Yonkers and within the New York Central's "electric zone," is the scene of great real estate activity. For many years there has been practically no building in this section, but recently there have been many inquiries for dwellings, and if 200 houses were built in the section this Spring it is believed that there would be but little difficulty in disposing of them to prospective residents. An important development has been the co-operative enterprise of nineteen professors, many of them from Columbia University, who have purchased a tract of land of about forty acres upon which they will build homes.

Another large operation is being handled by the People's Home Building Company, which has purchased and developed 165 acres. This property, which has been named Cedarcliff, is located about 2,000 feet back from the river, and, rising gradually to an altitude of 375 feet, affords a beautiful view of the surrounding country. It is to be improved further by the construction of boulevards, lakes, observation points and parks. Twenty-five modern houses have already been contracted for in Cedarcliff.

BELMONT TUNNEL IN THE LEAD

Likely to Afford Earliest Improved Transit to Queens.

Of great interest in its bearing upon real estate is the progress being made on the new means of communication between Manhattan and Queens—the so-called Steinway tunnel at Forty-second Street, the Pennsylvania-Long Island tunnel at Thirty-third Street, and the Blackwell's Island Bridge. From the present condition of work on these new routes to Queens Borough it is safe to predict that the Steinway tunnel will be the first to be completed, with the Pennsylvania Railroad's tubes a close second.

Work on the Blackwell's Island Bridge has been practically at a standstill for some time, and it is not likely that this structure will be finished and in working order before the end of 1908. No reason has been given for this delay by the Pennsylvania Steel Company, which is furnishing and erecting the structural steel, other than that there has been a strike. Supt. Gross of that company said last week that while he expected to resume work on the structure shortly, he could give no definite date. At the offces of the Department of Bridges John D. Wilkens, the engineer in charge of this particular undertaking, said that satisfactory progress has been made so far, but that the end of 1908 woul be the earliest possible date of completion.

It is said that unless the work of demolishing the houses to make way for the approaches in both Manhattan and Queens is started at an early date, the completion of the Blackwell's Island structure will be greatly delayed, as was the case with the Williamsburg structure, which even to-day cannot be operated to its full capacity on acocunt of the elevated tracks not being connected at either end.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, on the other hand, is carrying out its work with great dispatch. It is apparent from the activity along the route of their Long Island tunnel that the company is sparing no effort to complete this link at the earliest possible date. A fair idea of the progress on this part of the great project can be gained from President Cassatt's recent report to the stockholders of the company, in which he says:

"The tunnels under the City of New York are being driven westward from the main shaft at First Avenue, and also in both directions from the intermediate shafts located on Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets, between Fourth and Madison Avenues.

"On the East River section the shields on the Manhattan side are in place and working toward the river, and while the shafts on the Long Island side are not yet completed, a considerable amount of work has been done between these shafts and the eastern portal of the tunnels in Long Island City.

"The power house in that city is in service, and is supplying the electric lines of the Long Island Railroad."

The work on the Pennsylvania tunnel is being prosecuted night and day, and the four tubes to Long Island will be ready by the time the terminal station at Seventh Avenue is completed, in two years. The four-track feature of the Pennsylvania's Long Island tunnel shows the immense amount of traffic which the company expects to carry in that direction, since two tubes have been considered sufficient for its Hudson River tunnel.

STEINWAY TUNNEL'S PROGRESS.

The Steinway Tunnel will extend from Fourth Avenue and Forty-second Street, Manhattan, under the East River to a point near Jackson Avenue, in Queens. The Degnon Contracting Company, which is constructing this tunnel, has sunk two shafts on the Manhattan side, one on the south side of Forty-second Street, just east of Third Avenue, the other on the north side of Forty-second Street, near the East River. Besides these, three shafts have been sunk in Long Island City and one on Man-o'-War Rock, in the middle of the river. At all of these six points work is progressing in both directions twenty-four hours every day, and although the tunnel was commenced only last October, M. J. Degnon expects that the Fall of next year will witness the completion of the undertaking. It is said that the progress being made on the Steinway bores is the most rapid known in river tunneling. Two thousand five hundred men are at work, a greater number than ever before employed on a tunnel of this size. It is estimated that the Steinway Tunnel will have a maximum capacity of 30,000 passengers an hour.

The construction of the Steinway tunnel is being financed by August Belmont & Co., who also control the New York and Queens County Railway. This railway operates over seventy-five miles of trolley lines in the Borough of Queens, including those in Long Island City, and reaches such growing suburbs as Flushing, Elmhurst, Corona, and other neighboring towns along the north shore of Long Island. The population served by its lines is estimated at 200,000.

The cars of this extensive system will run through the Steinway tunnel from Jackson Avenue, Queens, to the Grand Central Station, Manhattan, at which point direct connection will be made with the trains of the Interborough Subway. Thus, the New York and Queens County trolleys will become virtually a part of the Interborough system, and residents of a large part of Queens will be able to reach almost any part of Manhattan or the Bronx with only one change of cars and in less than half the time now occupied by the journey.

OTHER ROUTES TO QUEENS.

Besides these three more important routes to the Borough of Queens, there is another which will be in operation even sooner than the Steinway tunnel, that is, the Subway from the Battery connecting with the Long Island Railroad at its Atlantic Avenue Station. This line, it is expected, will be opened for traffic early next year. Direct connection will be made with the Atlantic Avenue Station at the latter point, and it is possible that arrangements will be made to run the interborough trains out over the Long Island Railroad at a later date, although the plans for the new Long Island Station at Atlantic Avenue provide for no such connection. However, the newly electrified Long Island Railroad, together with the Brooklyn Subway, will afford a rapid and convenient route from nearly all parts of Manhattan and the Bronx to the many sections of Queens Borough now reached by the Long Island Railroad, and it is this fact, rather than the Pennsylvania improvement, which is responsible for much of the present development in Queens.

The Rapid Transit Commission has adopted plans for two subways into Queens, the first from Thirty-fourth Street, Manhattan, and the second extending from the proposed Brooklyn subway system, by way of Driggs and Manhattan Avenues, Brooklyn, to Jackson Avenue, Queens, following the latter thoroughfare to the Long Island end of the Blackwell's Island Bridge, which it will probably cross and connect with other new routes in Manhattan Borough, forming a belt line.

Italian Holdings $35,000,000.

The present Italian immigration to this country as a class has greatly improved and now forms a more desirable class of tenants than formerly. Many of them have accumulated wealth, and there are many real estate owners and speculators among them. According to Tuoti & Co., who devote themselves largely to the handling of Italian tenement property, over $35,000,000 worth of real estate in Manhattan is now in the hands of Italian owners. The rewest of the Italian colonies and one that is growing very rapidly is that in the Bronx, along Morris Avenue, from 149th to 155th Street.

HASTINGS -ON- HUDSON IS TRULY AN IDEAL SUBURBAN HOME REGION

CEDARCLIFF

HAVE YOU EVER DREAMED of some day owning a home? It may not be just like the one pictured above. This is simply one of various styles to be constructed this summer. If you do not object to paying for a home on the "little at a time plan" write us and we will tell you about it.

Y DON'T YOU LIVE IN THE SUNSHINE?

Why don't you have a home on a picturesque eminence overlooking the majestic Hudson? Why do you persist in living in congested gloomy flats, paying exorbitant rents and compelling your little children either to be confined to the "atmosphere" of the "four rooms and a bath" or else to breathe the more contaminating "air" of the children of the street? Let their playground be amidst nature in all its grandeur. Our development at Cedarcliff will include beautiful parks, lakes, observation points, broad boulevards and driveways. Why don't you get your lots at the initial selling price, away below actual value and take advantage of the rise sure to follow? We will build you a home and let you pay for it as convenient. Just as easy as paying rent. All the comforts of a modern flat—water, sewer, gas, electric lights, etc. Modern school costing $50,000 already on our property.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES YOU SAY? Excellent. 35 minutes by express trains to 42d St. now. With the conversion to electricity this time will be reduced. Putnam Division and trolley also pass "Cedarcliff." If you only realized the advantages of living at Hastings-on-Hudson you would write for fuller particulars and map.

LONG ISLAND

ALL PAST BOOMS ECLIPSED BY QUEENS SPECULATION

Prices Advanced in Many Instances Threefold—Total Investment Estimated at $40,000,000—Facts and Conditions of the Movement.

Even in the history of this city of rapidly changing values it would be hard to find a parallel to the movement that has been going on in Queens realty for the past year or two. The important question to consider is: Has this movement a sound basis? In area affected, in the amount of capital invested, and in the rapid rise in prices, it may safely be said to be unprecedented in this city in this generation. The Bronx never had such a sudden and overwhelming accession of investment moneys, but the discovery of the Bronx as a field for speculation happened in that now-distant era when the possibilities of the Subway and the electric railways, if dreamed of, were not then properly appreciated.

The invasion of the Washington Heights section by the Barney syndicate three or four years ago, and the large investments made by it were trifling in comparison with what has happened across the East River. The speculation in Flatbush and the outlying parts of Brooklyn Borough seven or eight years ago, although it brought a great deal of New England money into the market, cannot stand comparison with the Queens operations.

A rough calculation by one authority of the total investment in Queens acreage and improved property within the last two years is made at about $40,000,000, but there is no one authority competent to give more than a rough calculation and there is more than one reason to believe that the figures quoted are unduly conservative. The purchases of the Queens acreage by the Matowok Land Company, Dean Alvord, Franklin Wallace, and their syndicates, overshadow, in themselves, the Washington Heights purchases. W. G. Park and his associates have made purchases in Long Island City alone aggregating nearly $1,000,000. Besides these, the investments by individuals and realty companies are legion.

The title companies might make an interesting contribution of facts on the point, and the County Clerk's office at Jamaica does give a sort of clue. The record of papers filed to date is 50 per cent. ahead of the record to this date last year, the banner year of the office. This indicates that the purchases are scattered far and wide among a multitude of buyers. Money has come from all parts of the world. Towns up the State have been canvassed and have responded liberally. Philadelphia or Pittsburg now very likely has a larger interest in Queens than has the sister borough of Manhattan. That such a condition can exist implies a noiseless invasion, and it is entirely correct to say that the Queens sales reported in the New York dailies have only been a small part of an enormous total.

RECENT DEALS AND PRICES.

What does it mean? Has this speculation—for that is what it is—a sound basis? Has greed overshot the mark and is disaster to be the lot of those who have staked their substance on the growth of the metropolis eastward? That the speculation has been a feverish one is beyond question. Jefferson M. Levy bought the Baldwin farm, at Steinway, last March for $32,500, and sold it within ten months for $70,000 to a purchaser who now sells it for $90,000. The property at Academy and Lockwood Streets, in Astoria, was sold two years ago for less than $30,000, and now sells for nearly $70,000. A Fulton Street corner, opposite the County Clerk's office at Jamaica, sold at auction for $24,750 a year or so ago, and now, after $5,000 or $6,000 has been expended in improvements, E. G. Bullard, well posted and by no means a stranger to values, pays over $52,000 for it. A few corners above this, the Queens County Trust Company paid $17,000 a few years ago for a parcel for which they have now refused $35,000, and for which they could probably get $40,000 if they thought it profitable to sell.

Even more thrilling stories come from the acreage arena. The Rottkamp farm at Springfield, which went begging a year ago at $300 an acre, has lately changed hands for the sixth time at $1,600 an acre. A farm east of the Belmont Park track was sold five times before the title closed. It started at $800 an acre, and the man taking title paid $1,500 an acre. He received much sympathy by reason of paying four profits, but more consoling still was an offer of $2,250 an acre, which he refused. At Richmond Hill a corner on Jamaica Avenue brought, six months ago, four times what it could have been had for two years ago, and those who were then mystified at a business corner in that thriving settlement bringing $400 a front foot have now seen that figure increased by 50 per cent. on similar property in the same neighborhood.

FEATURES OF THE MOVEMENT.

These few instances, neither isolated nor typical, may serve to point out the salient features of the movement, and from them we may glean facts as to the stability of the new standards of value.

The first is that the value of real estate being determined by demand and supply, like everything else where there is free competition, the new prices are likely to hold, as a rule, on account of the enormous sums of money invested in the borough, and still flowing in from all parts of the country. It is a reflection of the National prosperity, and it may also be a proof of a tendency supposed to have been noticed of late, to devote to real estate capital which formerly went into other lines of investment recently discovered to be of questionable safety.

Some of those who have paid the biggest prices for land in Queens are, like Mr. Park and his associates, those most likely to be well informed and possessed of the best judgment. You can look across to Manhattan from some of their purchases in Long Island City, and with the Belmont tunnel and Blackwell's Island Bridge in operation they will have sites for tenement property at a small fraction of the present price of Manhattan tenement property not as conveniently located as theirs will be on the completion of these improvements. Jackson Avenue is referred to as East Thirty-fourth Street continued, and the indications are that this will soon be taken seriously.

The Matowok Land Company, reported to be made up of stockholders in the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, has bought hundreds of acres in the Second Ward in Newtown and the Whitepot section. When the Pennsylvania tunnel is completed and in operation Whitepot will be nearer to Times Square than 155th Street is now. Land in the Whitepot section brings about $5,000 an acre; to get a lot at that price you must go miles north of 155th Street. Again, two years ago there was considerable farming done between Richmond Hill and Brooklyn. The few farms that have not yet been cut up into lots are held at $10,000 an acre. Last Spring the Noah Waterbury farm at Richmond Hill was actually tilled. To-day a number of detached houses are in course of construction, and by next Spring it will be a choice residential section. A few years will see a compactly built-up residential district between Brooklyn and Richmond Hill.

No two buyers, perhaps, have been actuated by the same impulse; but whether the purchases have been intelligently and providently made there is considerable in the argument in their favor: First, the natural advantages of Queens, due to its proximity to the heart of the Borough of Manhattan, and, second, the transit facilities in operation and those under way. The Pennsylvania tunnel receives the chief notice, although the date for its operation is probably four years off. The Blackwell's Island Bridge is the support and hope of many, but its terminal on the extreme east side of Manhattan, at Sixtieth Street, should give pause to any one tempted to be hasty on account of that project.

The Belmont tunnel, the operation of which is dependent on the outcome of pending litigation, will be of exceeding benefit if operated, as it will bring Long Island City within a few minutes of the important section of Manhattan of which the Grand Central Station is the centre, and will be of immense benefit to the whole north shore. It may develop that the extraordinary benefits bound to result from the operation of this tunnel will help to solve, by act of Legislature or otherwise, some of the legal difficulties now existing. The Atlantic Avenue third rail system, in operation and within a year likely to be connected with Subway trains operated through the tunnel from the Battery, receives less notice than it is entitled to. It means at a comparatively early date an actual connection with our own Subway, and a consequent diminution of the time of travel to Richmond Hill, Morris Park, Jamaica, and the vast territory beyond.

The Connecting Railroad's influence on Queens values, if passenger traffic is permitted, is worth consideration, and, even without the great help of passenger traffic, if the millions of dollars placed in factory investments in Long Island City within the last two years give any indication, it must be regarded as an important factor in the borough's development.

In a word, there is a great deal to justify or vindicate, in part at least, the speculative operations referred to. But some have bought blindly, trusting to the future, and to the future they must look for profit or safety from loss. Whatever else the future may bring, no one doubts that the trend northward to the Bronx and eastward to Jersey has to a large extent been arrested, and that the future will see a very large increase in population in Queens. A borough covering 80,000 acres of land will be able to accommodate a considerable increase in population, even in detached houses. West and north of Jamaica there is little acreage to be had for less than $2,500, and a great deal is held at $5,000 an acre. South and east of Jamaica the acreage is held at considerably lower figures.

E. V. DALY.

BUILDING ON LONG ISLAND.

Four Thousand Dwellings Erected Last Year in the Smaller Towns.

That the present interest in Long Island property is not wholly speculative is shown conclusively by some interesting statistics gathered recently by the Long Island Railroad through its agents.

During 1905 nearly 4,000 dwellings were erected on Long Island in the territory outside of the old city of Brooklyn, Long Island City, and East New York. About one-half of this number, moreover, were outside of the present limits of Greater New York.

In Freeport 300 new houses were built, in Amityville 32, in Babylon 28, in Hempstead 55, in Lynbrook 70, in Oyster Bay 75, and in Patchogue 87.

Some idea of the amount of new buildings in Queens may also be had from the figures. In Flushing the new dwellings for 1905 numbered 230, in Richmond Hill 250, and in Corona 500.

During the same period there were also erected on Long Island 201 store buildings, 45 factories, and 47 structures of miscellaneous character.

MORE TENEMENTS IN QUEENS.

Changed Conditions Creating Great Demand for Such Structures.

Permits for fifty-one new buildings to cost $206,525 have been issued by the Building Bureau in the Borough of Queens. Recently there has developed there a change in the character of new structures. Flats and detached cottages have held sway for a long time, but now there is a rush to put up tenements.

It appears that there has been a constantly growing demand for cheap homes, and as builders have ignored the demand for a long time it has grown so that they have at last been forced to recognize it. Several permits for tenements have been issued recently. They are to be located in the First and Second Wards, where the population is becoming congested. Their estimated cost is $47,000. Four three-story brick tenements are to be erected on Ralph Street, Ridgewood, and several in Long Island City.

Cottage building is going ahead in Corona, that section having become the abiding place of colonies of mechanics, who can afford to pay fair rentals for small frame houses. Such dwellings are being erected in large numbers.

Flushing is now far behind in the matter of individual homes, but the houses being built there are of a better grade, the average cost being $8,000.

Large Owners on Long Island.

The largest individual holder of Long Island real estate is L. J. Busby, a member of the New York Produce Exchange. He began investing on Long Island before the tide set in, and now has holdings representing more than $1,000,000. He owns land in Flushing, along the old Stewart Railroad, and at Creedmoor. Henry Morgenthau, who made a fortune in Bronx real estate, has recently purchased over 500 lots at Flushing. Frank Tilford of the New Amsterdam Bank of Manhattan owns over $500,000 worth of land near Flushing. Joseph Cassidy, the former Borough President of Queens, has heavily invested at Flushing, in Long Island City and in the Rockaways. He is also in several syndicates that hold land in Long Island City and Jamaica.

The Theatre of Activity.

LONG ISLAND is attracting investors, speculators and operators to an extent never equalled in the history of real estate developments.

The door of opportunity is open to everyone to double and treble his money within the next 12 months by making judicious investments in well-located property before the Spring advance in prices will be made.

The comprehensive scheme of the Long Island Railroad for electrically equipping its system has created a new order of things on the island.

The $100,000,000 which is being expended by the Pennsylvania R. R., the Belmont Traction System, and the City of New York on Tunnels and Bridges will revolutionize things generally on Long Island, and result in an increase in land values to figures that can only be guessed at now.

Every dollar spent in these gigantic developments means an advance in the value of the property we have improved at

Floral Park

On completion of the Pennsylvania R. R. Tunnel this famous town of flowers will be but

20 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY.

To tell you what a delightful town it is seems superfluous, because it has been known for 25 years as

THE GARDEN SPOT OF LONG ISLAND.

The town enjoys every advantage and convenience for all-the-year-round residential purposes. It has all city improvements, several good hotels, and a number of excellent stores.

Its churches comprise the leading denominations. Its Public School is one of the finest on Long Island, and its Fire Department a model of its kind.

Every Dollar Invested Now

at Elmhurst Square will add many times to its value. There is a new era of prosperity dawning for Queens Borough. Lack of adequate transportation facilities will no longer depress prices, and prices have been depressed for so many years that the public mind has not yet grasped the situation fully—What the new tunnels and bridges and railroad development will do in establishing a higher range of values throughout the whole of Long Island. Bear in mind, however, that the further you get from the city's centre the less likely you are to share in the general advance. The ratio of profit is always greater along the main arteries of Rapid Transit.

ELMHURST SQUARE

is almost under the shadow of Herald Square, sixteen minutes from Thirty-fourth Street, approached by seven transportation lines—fare five cents. It is restricted and fully improved with sidewalks, curb and gutter—the only addition in the Borough with sewers and paved streets. Convenient to churches, schools and stores. Healthful surroundings and every essential of a high class residentail suburb. Buy now—if you wait until the completion of all the improvements it will cost two or three times as much. Call or write for Transportation Booklet No. 6, with a bird's-eye view of Greater New York, maps and views.

Douglas Manor

Over a century ago Douglas Manor was laid out as a private park on the same plan that has created the famous old private parks in England. Many hundred rare trees, brought from all over the world, were then set out and are now equal in size to the magnificent native forest trees.

In its beautiful trees and grand shore front of over a mile on Little Neck Bay, gradually rising to an elevation of over a hundred feet, nature has combined in Douglas Manor ideal conditions for a home, which will be carefully preserved by the restrictions and plan adopted for the sale of lots.

By this plan every lot owner will become a part owner in the shore front and parks, receiving with the deed for each lot purchased one share in the Douglas Manor Association, a membership corporation which will own the parks and entire shore front.

Douglas Manor is within the limits of New York City, and only two blocks from the station at Douglaston. The completion of the Pennsylvania tunnels will bring it within 20 minutes of Broadway with frequent electric trains like those in the Subway.

The property will be placed on the market April 1st. Applications for lots will be entered in the order received. Send for maps, beautiful colored views and free tickets.

LONG ISLAND

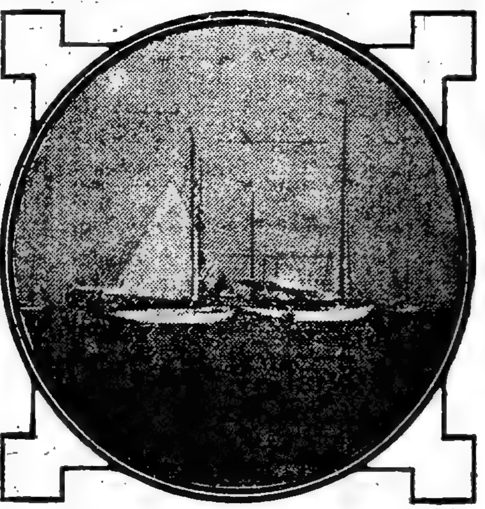
"THE ISLAND BEAUTIFUL"

LONG ISLAND



THE natural attractions of Long Island, possessed by no other location, combined with the excellent transportation facilities, make it a home section absolutely unequaled.

THE advantages of Long Island readily explain the enhancement of real estate values, which have increased more rapidly than in any other section near New York.

THE HOMELAND

IDEAL HOME SECTION

IF New York had nothing else to mark its advantages of location over other cities, it could take pride in the possession of beautiful Long Island, with its 250 miles of coast line, where may be found beauty of landscape, and all the varieties of nature that appeal to man.

The North Shore, bordering on Long Island Sound, is wooded and hilly, and indented by numerous bays, fine harbors.

On the South Shore the Great South Bay, and Atlantic Ocean whose waves surge a never ending symphony upon the beautiful white beaches.

The Central Section a delightful rural country, with running streams and charming little lakes.

Right at the door of the metropolis, with pure air—pure water, from artesian wells fed by subterranean streams, and unexcelled conditions for surf and still water bathing—a territory unequalled for yachting, canoeing, fishing, hunting, golfing, riding and driving (600 miles of macadam roads.)

Modern schools, churches of all denominations, libraries, social, athletic and golf clubs are to be found in all parts of the Island.

For a Summer Home it cannot be surpassed, as it is cooled by the prevailing southerly breezes direct from the ocean—for a permanent home it is ideal, as it is warmer in Winter and cooler in Summer than New York City.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES

THE Long Island Railroad is reached by elevated and surface cars from all parts of the city. The Company also operates an annex service from the foot of Wall Street, to better accommodate the business men in the downtown district.

From the Brooklyn station at the junction of Flatbush and Atlantic Avenues, nearly 200 electric trains are operated, the service extending to Jamaica, Hollis, Queens, Rockaway Park, Valley Stream and points on the Far Rockaway branch.

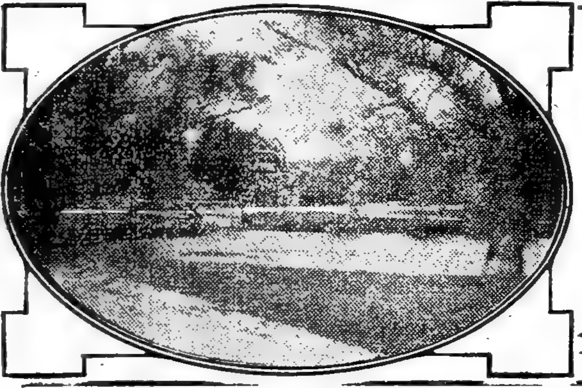
When the tunnel from the Battery is completed in about a year, there will be direct connection between Flatbush Avenue Station and the City Hall, New York, when the entire journey from Jamaica will be made in the brief space of 28 minutes.

Other branches of the railroad will be operated by electricity in the near future.

More express trains are now run than ever before and a new schedule with greatly increased train service, including additional express trains, will take effect about May 14th.

The Company will also begin to operate the steamboat lines at an earlier date this year.

The equipment of the Long Island Railroad is first class—vestibule express trains, Parlor Cars, roadway protected by block signals—ballasted and laid with heavy steel rails.



Long Island offers exceptional opportunities for industrial plants seeking a location—also many excellent sites for hotels—possessing attractions varied to a striking degree.

Are You Saving Any Money?

Many men and women earning a fair salary do not save A PENNY. How much do YOU save?

Have you ever stopped to consider what you have earned in the past year and what you have to show for it? Have you put anything away for a rainy day? Probably not! Now, you may ask, "How can I save?" A Savings Bank pays you only 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. a year, and your money can be withdrawn too easily, consequently your savings grow very slowly, if at all.

Is the Stock Market a safe place for your savings? Far better attend the races, and lose your money that way; you will at least have the pleasure of seeing the horses run. Ask any of your friends who have gambled in the Stock Market or on the horses, and see how many can truthfully tell you they are ahead of the game.

On the other hand, how many has it ruined?

Is Life Insurance a safe way to invest your money? Read the daily papers for the past few months and you will have your answer.

But you will ask, "How can I place my money where it will be a good investment and yet perfectly safe?" We answer you without hesitation,

PUT IT INTO REAL ESTATE

This is an up-to-date town of 6,000 people, with stores of all kinds, schools, churches of all denominations, and beautiful homes. Amityville is situated directly on the Great South Bay, and is an ideal Summer resort, with its numerous hotels and facilities for sailing, bathing, and fishing. One of our properties is located on the famous Merrick Road, and extends direct to the water. There is no other water-front property on Long Island that can compare with this in location or price.

Our new section is located five minutes from the Depot, and every lot is high, dry, and level. Our terms will be made to suit our customers, and any one can afford to buy from us.

You absolutely take no chance in buying from us, for in case of death we will deliver a deed without the payment of another penny. We charge no interest or taxes.

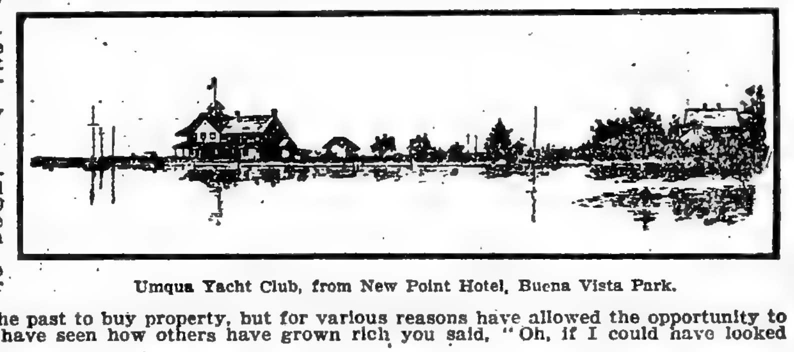
At the present time Amityville is only and when the tunnels are completed—which will be very soon—the railroad time will be shortened from 15 to 20 minutes. There is not a better or more progressive town on Long Island than Amityville.

To-day there are more houses in the course of construction than in any other town on the South Shore.



Umqua Yacht Club, from New Point Hotel, Buena Vista Park.

Many of you have had chances in the past to buy property, but for various reasons have allowed the opportunity to slip through your fingers, and when you have seen how others have grown rich you said, "Oh, if I could have looked into the future!"

Now, the whole thing in a nutshell is this: If the Pennsylvania R. R. thinks well enough of Long Island to spend millions of dollars making improvements, are you not willing to invest a few dollars?

Surely this does not require much thought. There is no room for argument. Now is the time to take advantage of this great opportunity, before prices advance on completion of tunnel.

LONG ISLAND

HUNDREDS OF BUYERS INVADE LONG ISLAND

Successful Development Projects Along the North Shore.

ACREAGE VALUES DOUBLED

In the opinion of many brokers and operators, Long Island offers to-day one of the best speculative real estate markets in the United States, and that there has been no hesitancy in acting upon this opinion is best shown by the vast amount of capital that has been put into Long Island property during the last year.

Even six months ago it was almost impossible to get any one to consider buying in Long Island City. Since that time over $10,000,000 worth of property there has changed hands. About half of the city has been purchased by keen business men, and is being offered for sale at lower prices than those at which original holders will now sell.

"Long Island City," predicts one prominent operator, "will be the greatest factory and tenement house community around New York within five years. In three years at the most the Belmont tunnel, Blackwell's Island Bridge, and the Pennsylvania tunnel will be completed, and Long Island City will be less than five minutes from the centre of Manhattan. To-day there are comparatively few buyers. A year from now there will be many who will pay twice to-day's prices. When the improvements are completed there will be thousands who will pay five times the present figures. It is possible to-day to buy lots from $1,000 to $2,000 each, and the choicest property ready for builders of apartments may be purchased for $3,000."

The Pennsylvania Railroad is spending many millions on its equipment, which will give the best possible facilities. The road from Brooklyn to Far Rockaway is now operated by electricity, and the line will probably be finished this year to Port Washington, which when the East River tunnels are completed will bring the whole North Shore into quick communication with Manhattan.

ALONG THE NORTH SHORE.

The North Shore of Long Island has many advantages, among them being its magnificent drives and Summer homes and its close proximity to Long Island Sound. This section was first brought to notice by the development of the Bankers' Mortgage Company at Elmhurst, on Flushing Bay, and also by that at Louona Park, all the acreage in this section now being worth $5,000 an acre. These undertakings were followed almost immediately by the sale of nearly all the land around Flushing, Murray Hill, and Broadway. The greater part of this section is now held at from $2,000 to $3,000 an acre.

At Bayside the Bellcourt Land Company has developed and sold nearly 100 acres. Lots there have sold at from $500 to $1,000 each. Acreage property at Bayside to-day is bringing from $2,000 to $3,500 an acre.

In Douglaston and Little Neck land is bringing $3,000 an acre. Title has just been taken to the Douglass homestead of about 180 acres by the Douglass Manor Company. This property, which has a mile of water front, will be subdivided immediately and developed on an extensive scale.

Great Neck, Manhasset, and Port Washington, just outside of Greater New York, offer property of a different class surrounded by the homes of many wealthy men. The properties around Great Neck station are held in large parcels by the Country Investment Company, the Desmond Dunne Company, Stuard Hirschman, the Finlay-Rickert Realty Company, and the estate of ex-Mayor Grace. One of the greatest drawbacks to this section has been the lack of water supply. Pipes are now being laid by the Cord Meyer Company, and will be completed before July 1, when many of the properties will be developed. Land is held in this neighborhood at about $2,000 an acre.

At Manhasset there are several large tracts in the "millionaire section," ranging in price from $1,000 to $2,000 an acre. A new territory is about to be opened with the sale of the Mitchell and Willets farms. The property is surrounded by W. B. Leeds's estate and Plandome Mill Pond, and has a most advantageous water front. It is about half way between Manhasset and Port Washington stations, which are three miles apart, so that a new station to be called Plandome will probably be established on the property.

NEW LONG ISLAND SUBURB.

Opening of Douglas Estate Tract Long Famous for Its Natural Beauty.

One of the most important moves in the development of Long Island residential property was made last week when the Rickert-Finlay Realty Company began the improvement of Douglas Manor, at Douglaston. The new owners of this property will make improvements on the old Douglas estate which will cost more than $200,000. These include the paving of streets and the construction of sidewalks, more than seven miles in lengths.

Douglas Manor consists of 188 acres and is the largest water front property on the north shore branch of the Long Island Railroad. It is a peninsula, surrounded on three sides by water, giving it as much shore front as a thousand acres would have under ordinary conditions, and bring have under ordinary conditions, and bringing almost every lot within two or three blocks of the water. A large part of the property is covered with magnificent native forest trees, and since 1819, when the old manor house, still standing, was constructed, constant improvements have been made, and for many years the famous estate has been renowned for its natural beauty.

This property, consisting of 2,500 lots, will be placed on sale on April 1, and the construction of many residences will be begun immednately. While restrictions have been placed on the cost and character of buildings, the prices that will be charged for the property will not be prohibitive. Douglas Manor is now within twenty minutes' ride of Long Island City, and when the Pennsylvania tunnels are completed, will be reached from Broadway in that time.

The Rickert-Finlay Realty Company is one of the largest of concerns operating in real estate around New York, E. J. Rickert and C. E. Finlay, who is President of the Aetna National Bank, having been actively engaged in the development of several other tracts, including Bellcourt, at Bayside.

NEAR GREAT SOUTH BAY.

Amityville Prominent Among Long Island's South Shore Towns.

One of the most attractive towns on the south shore of Long Island is Amityville, on Great South Bay. The town now has a population of nearly 6,000 people, and is growing rapidly. There are now in course of construction about forty new houses, which will be completed this Spring. Well located lots are now selling at $150 each.

The Federal Land and Improvement Company has been prominently identified with the development of Amityville in connection with its properties known as Federal Hill, Buena Vista Park, Amityville Heights, Cedar Brook Grove, and Great Neck Terrace. When the company offered Amityville Heights and Cedar Brook Grove for sale, those tracts were sold in less than four months.

Within the last week the company has sold thirty-three lots in Amityville for a total of $3,161.

New Long Island Developments.

The Carrollton Realty Company, which has successfully handled several Long Island developments, has opened two new tracts. The first parcel at Ormonde Park, Rosedale, contains 1,205 lots, fourteen miles from the city, offering excellent transportation facilities, electric lighting, and other improvements. The second parcel is located twenty-six miles out and contains 2,000 lots. They front upon the Merrick Road and upon Great South Bay. The company intends to build cottages to order upon these properties.

College Point has 25,000 enterprising people there, increasing its population at the rate of 5,000 a year, which means in five years there will be 50,000 people centred there.

To-day houses are being erected on every block. Business structures are going up on every street corner. Factories are being constructed along the shore front and along the railroad. It's one busy hive of industry. Two thousand people are obliged to live elsewhere on account of the want of room in College Point. Land is going up at the rate of 25 per cent. advance every six months.

With all these facts we have recited could there be anything better to place your hands on than right at College Point?

MARCH 1906

UNDERLYING CAUSES OF QUEENS ACTIVITY

Borough's History One of Defective Transit Facilities.

CITY'S ONE-SIDED GROWTH

Expansion of Four Miles to the East as Against Twenty-four to the North and South.

It is a well-established fact, and one to which there has never been an exception, that population spreads from the city's centre along the lines of least resistance. The elements which constitute this resistance are time, trouble, and expense, so that the transportation line along which population can be conveyed in the shortest time with the least trouble and the least expense is the line along which population will settle most rapidly. Thus the easterly part of Manhattan Island was first populated, owing to the fact that the old Boston Post Road leading up the Bowery and Third Avenue was the best-built road on the island, and therefore most convenient to travel. Later the line of boats established on the East River, by plying between the Battery and the upper east side, increased these facilities of transportation, and likewise increased the development of the east side of the island.

The building of the Manhattan elevated road in 1878 gave accessibility over the Sixth and Ninth Avenue lines to the westerly side of the island, and dating from the completion of that road the west side began to be built up. Population continued to push northward along these transportation lines, until the west side of Central Park was occupied, and later Harlem as far as 155th Street. In 1891 the Third Avenue elevated road was extended across the Harlem River into the Bronx. Dating from that event the Bronx began to gain rapidly in population.

In 1883 the Brooklyn Bridge was completed connecting with the various transportation lines leading eastward into the Twenty-sixth Ward. During the next few years people poured into this section of Brooklyn until it soon became densely populated. In 1895 the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines were extended to Brighton Beach and Coney Island, leading to the remarkable activity in Flatbush and the territory beyond. To such an extent did these lines influence the flow of population that real estate values increased during the period from 1890 to 1900 throughout the entire Flatbush section, comprising the Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth Wards of Brooklyn, to the extent of 340 per cent., or an average of 34 per cent. a year.

While this development has been going on north and south, the section lying to the east has lain dormant owing to its inaccessibility. It is a remarkable fact that within a circle having Greeley Square as its centre, and taking in the Second Ward of the Borough of Queens, known as Newtown, is an area of over 5,000 acres in use for market gardening purposes. The extreme limits of this territory are no further from Greeley Square than is 160th Street northward or Prospect Park southward. The closer lying sections of this market garden territory are no further from this same centre than 100th Street in Manhattan on the north, or the City Hall on the south. That the city should expand for a distance of twenty-four miles north and south with an easterly expansion of less than four miles would appear very remarkable until a careful study of transportation facilities is made.

From time immemorial the only means of reaching this eastern district has been by car lines on the Manhattan side, by ferry across the East River, and by car lines on the Long Island side, necessitating three fares and three transfers, while a single fare, without change of cars, will carry a homeseeker to the northern limits of the city or to Coney Island on the south. Transportation interests in the City of New York have sufficiently awakened to this condition of affairs to cause them to begin improvements in the way of bridges and tunnels, leading directly into this eastern territory and costing in the aggregate over $150,000,000. Much of this work has been in progress for years, and with its completion it will be possible to go from the business centres of Manhattan into this territory without change of cars for a single fare and with the expenditure of not more than ten minutes' time. It is the realization of these facts that is to-day attracting the attention of multitudes of investors to his territory. It is now possible to buy well-located and fully developed lots in the section of Elmhurst or Woodside at from $300 to $1,000 each. Lots located the same distance north in the Borough of Manhattan are selling at from $15,000 to $100,000 each, and the same distance south in Brooklyn at from $5,000 to $100,000 each.

These 5,000 acres of undeveloped land in Newtown will provide 80,000 lots. The 80,000 lots will provide home sites for a suburban population of 250,000 persons. It is estimated that 150,000 are added to the city's population yearly, and 60,000 are dispossessed every year to make room for business structures, public buildings, bridge approaches, railroad terminals, public parks, &c.

With the completion of the bridges and tunnels now under way, with great numbers of homeseekers pouring into this section through these newly created channels, the Newtown section of Queens Borough promises to produce one of the most rapid and marvelous developments the city has ever witnessed. Real estate values throughout this ward have increased fully 75 per cent. within a year.

STATION IMPROVEMENTS.

Transit Commission Will Have No More Iron and Glass Kiosks in Subway.

The Rapid Transit Commission has decided to construct no more of the iron and glass sidewalk kiosks in building the new Subway stations. Entrance to the stations will be through adjacent private property. In many instances it may be necessary to buy the property outright, razing the building and reconstructing it after the underground work is completed.

It is the intention to construct many of the new stations after the plan of that at Fulton Street and Broadway, the station extending from one street to another, with entrances at both ends of the station in the side streets. The engineers have also virtually agreed to separate the two downtown from the two uptown tracks by a wall of concrete, which will greatly facilitate ventilation, causing the air to follow the trains. After the present Subway was built it was found that where trains run in both directions in a single tube the air is simply stirred up, but it is believed that if the tracks are walled in the fresh air will rush in at the station entrances and follow the trains in one direction.

NEW JERSEY

JERSEY CITY — GREENVILLE — JERSEY CITY

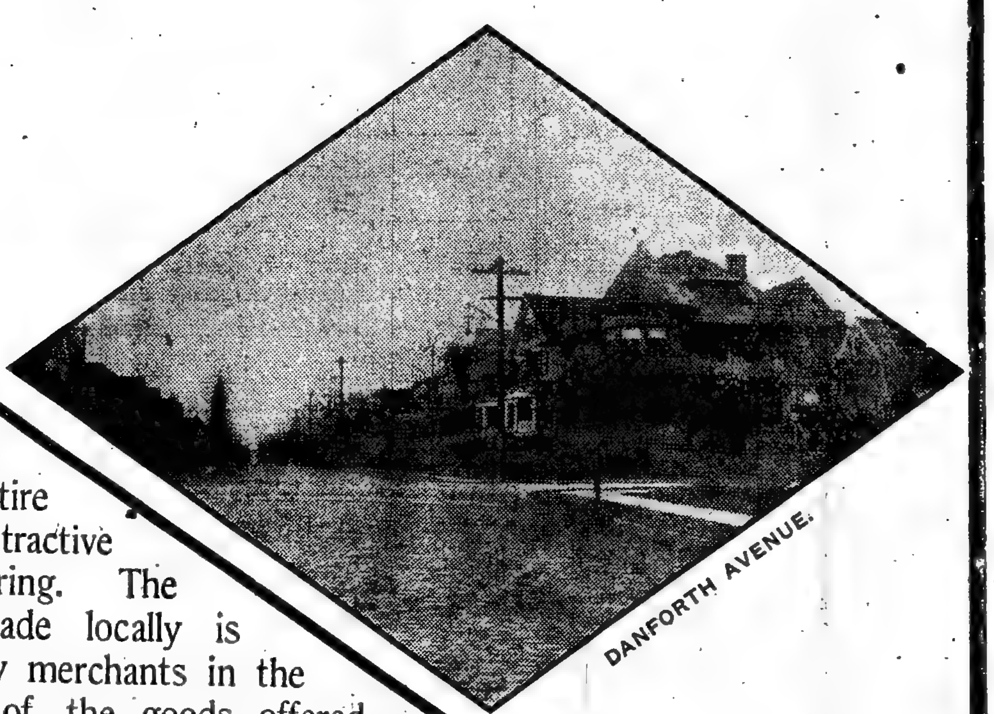
GREENVILLE SECTION

GREENVILLE BANKING AND TRUST CO.



DANFORTH AVENUE.

Forms the South-Westerly part of Jersey City and is located on a ridge between Newark and New York Bays, affording a pleasant, healthful situation. Can be reached in 20 minutes from Liberty Street and in 30 minutes from West Twenty-Third Street, Manhattan, by the main line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. There are two stations with seventy-two trains daily (commutation $4.00). Also two trolley lines from the Pennsylvania ferries, which in the near future will connect with New York via the Cortlandt and Christopher Street tunnels and transfer to the subway system. Combines the advantages of a suburb with the conveniences of a City. Has an unsurpassed water supply from the new $7,000,000 works at Boonton, N. J. Three modern public and several private schools, city fire department, police protection, churches of every denomination, all lodges, various clubs, a thoroughly equipped banking institution and two parks, with many miles of fully improved Streets and Avenues, well lighted by electricity, which, together with the Hudson County Boulevard traversing its entire length, make it particularly attractive for driving and motoring. The incentive to trade locally is furnished by merchants in the character of the goods offered and their thorough business methods. Many thriving industries on the outskirts offer inducements to manufacturers desirous of locating plants with water front or railroad connection. These features make an ideal location for home seekers and offer exceptional opportunities to investors and speculators. A thorough conception of this portion of Jersey City can be formed only by personal inspection, as travellers on the diferent railroads, which all pass on the outer edge, get no adequate idea of the location generally, and the numerous improvements made, and those now in course of construction.

NEW JERSEY SUBURBS GROWING IN POPULARITY

Tunnel Prospect and Improved Railroad Facilities Attracting Many Residents—Inadequate Supply of Houses In Some Sections.

Wholly independent of the anticipated benefits of the tunnels now building under the Hudson River, the New Jersey suburbs this Spring are attracting an unusually large amount of attention from those who like Broadway for business purposes, but who are more than willing to have it out of sight and sound over night.

One reason for the popularity of the New Jersey territory is that the railroads leading into it are not deferring all hope for improved transit until the completion of the tunnels, but are steadily improving their facilities with the means now at their disposal. Train schedules are being improved, both as to the amount and speed of service, and with modern ferry equipment and uptown terminals on the Manhattan side many of the objectionable features of a trip to and from New Jersey have been overcome.

The comprehensive plans of the McAdoo interests for connecting their Morton and Cortlandt Street tubes with the Erie and Lackawanna Stations will increase manyfold the utility of the tunnels, and will place their advantages at the disposal of a much larger territory and a much larger number of people.

The entire range of suburban territory in New Jersey from Hackensack and Englewood on the north to the region of Plainfield and Bound Brook on the south is experiencing a greatly increased amount of inquiry from prospective residents, and reports from several localities indicate that the supply of houses is, if anything, below the demand.

GREENVILLE'S POPULARITY.

Jersey City's Suburb Growing Rapidly in Favor with New Yorkers.

Jersey City enjoys the reputation of being a thoroughly progressive community and one whose growth has been, and is, of the most substantial character. This is due to numerous causes, no doubt, but its close proximity to New York City has been a great factor in its development. A half a century ago the city was but a small town. In 1890 it had a population of 163,000, which number had been increased to 206,000 in 1900, and it is estimated that at the beginning of the present year it was the home of more than 230,000 people.

Among the numerous suburbs of Jersey City, one of the most ideally situated and generally attractive is the Greenville section. This district has shown remarkable growth during the last few years, and has become the home of progressive and altogether desirable people, who have been followed by business houses and establishments of all kinds.

Representative of this growth is the Greenville Banking and Trust Company, with a capital and surplus of $150,000 and deposits aggregating $1,250,000. A modern banking house and up-to-date methods have contributed largely to its prosperity and in this prosperity is reflected the energy and thrift of the people, as well as the advantages of the locality.

The coming real estate season will without question be the most active in the history of Jersey City, and particularly of Greenville. The fact that men employed in Manhattan can travel to and from their business in twenty minutes of comfort adds greatly to the section's popularity with New Yorkers. When the various tunnels are completed, Greenville, in everything except name, will be more than ever part of Greater New York.

"GREATER HACKENSACK."

Consolidation Likely to Follow Town's Rapid Growth.

Hackensack, the county seat of Bergen County, with a population of about 12,000, is to-day one of the most progressive towns in New Jersey. The older generation, of Holland Dutch descent, has passed away, and the more active and progressive American element has taken its place, made up largely of New York business men. This element having been used to all the conveniences of the city, the town has had to provide itself with the highest class of improvements.

The population has nearly doubled since the last census, and will undoubtedly double again within the next decade, if not sooner. To-day there is more building going on than ever before in the history of the town, especially in the northern section, which, from the lay of the land, is the most desirable for residences and is carefully restricted. One large tract of about fifty acres, which had been held for years by an estate until it had been completely surrounded by handsome houses, has recently been acquired by a New York capitalist, and is being opened up with all the latest modern improvements as a residential section.

F. B. Ross of 150 Broadway, New York, who has charge of the development of this property, and who knows the town's possibilities, predicts that in the near future Hackensack will be a large city, absorbing the boroughs of Maywood on the west and Cherry Hill on the north, and possibly Bogota on the east, across the Hackensack River, making a Greater Hackensack.

BUILDING IN BOUND BROOK.

Supply Behind Demand in Popular New Jersey Suburb.

The year 1905 was a notable one for building in Bound Brook. During the year about sixty houses were built there, ranging in cost from $2,500 to $10,000, the greater demand, of course, being for moderate-priced houses. The unusual railroad facilities at this point are attracting many homeseekers who are desirous of living in the country, and houses which can be rented at from $25 to $80 are always at a premium. Lately there has been an increased demand for more expensive houses which could be rented for from $30 to $50 per month. The tendency of all recent building has been toward the better class.

Already plans are under way looking to fully as much, if not more, building this year than in 1905, the only possible obstacle being the increasing cost of building material.

Several of the houses recently built were erected by a construction company, backed by prominent citizens, so that the company has been able to carry out its operations in the most approved way, and the buildings which it has put up would be a credit to any community. This in itself is attracting others to enter the same field, and while at the present time there is not a house to rent in Bound Brook, it is expected that before long the demand may be reasonably met.

ON THE PALISADES.

Rural Surroundings Combined with Proximity to the City.

Residents of and property holders in Leonia, on the western slope of the Palisades, expect that with the construction of the four new tunnels under the Hudson River their neighborhood will be closer to the City Hall, by way of ordinary travel, than the Bronx. As it is, Leonia might be fifty miles from the city, although only five miles from the centre of New York's population, for all the indication given of its actual proximity, yet by suburban and urban travel it is but fifteen minutes from Harlem and three-quarters of an hour from lower Broadway. Though separated from New York, Leonia has all municipal improvements, such as gas, electric lights, sewers, and macadamized streets.

Considering the short distance between it and New York, as the crow flies, Leonia has a climate radically different from that of the big city. Its elevation makes the air invigorating, and in the Summer season its lawns and shrubbery are a relief from the asphalt streets of town. By express trolley service to the 130th Street ferry, the shopping centre of Harlem may be reached in fifteen minutes, where the Subway is accessible to all who may want to travel downtown. Leonia is being developed by the Leonia Heights Land Company. Lots are sold subject to the restrictions of a high-class residential section.

PLAINFIELD'S NEW SUBURB.

Residential Development Progressing Rapidly at Highland Park.

Highland Park, consisting of 700 lots in Plainfield, N. J., is undergoing a development which promises a large permanent residential class for that section during the coming Summer. The property is located on the north side of the Netherwood Station at Plainfield. The location of the city is healthful, and at the same time attractive, having an elevation of 150 feet above tidewater, with a dry climate similar to that of Lakewood. The time from New York is 44 minutes, and from Philadelphia 75 minutes, there being fifty-six trains each way daily.

An improved sewerage system has recently been installed, and the water supply is from artesian wells. The Central Railroad of New Jersey runs through Plainfield, and the Lehigh Valley through South Plainfield. The city is protected from the north and northeast winds by the Watchung Mountains, making the climate mild in Winter and also affording a pleasant atmosphere in Summer.

The Home of the Country Gentleman.

With the opening of the new North River tunnel Maywood, near Hackensack, will be accessible from New York in fifteen minutes. Situated on a sharp elevation of ground, it offers many inducements to suburban residents. Maywood's streets are macadamized, and it boasts of more motor cars in proportion to its population than any other locality within a radius of fifty miles. The residents of Maywood call it "The Home of the Country Gentleman," and it maintains several clubs devoted to outdoor sports.

PLAN TO SEIZE COAL IN EVENT OF STRIKE

Railroads in the West Preparing for Emergencies.

CONFLICT BELIEVED CERTAIN

Soft Coal Miners in at Least Eleven States May Quit Work Next Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 25.—Preparations for the impending strike in the bituminous coal fields took on an activity to-day which demonstrates that both operators and miners are convinced a conflict is inevitable.

With negotiations practically at an end and peace hopes all but abandoned only six days remain in which to get ready for an enforced shut-down of the mines. The miners under the old agreement are bound to work no longer than next Saturday. On that day, unless something occurs to extend the limit, the strike threatens to become effective in the soft-coal collieries of at least eleven States.

While the storing of coal against a famine has been in progress since early in December, the big operators attending the conference here said to-day that many large concerns, half expecting some sort of a settlement, had neglected to husband adequate supplies, and that within the next few days there would be an unparalleled rush to hoard as much coal as possible.

The first move in this direction is expected to be taken by the railroads. In Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, in particular, the roads are planning to confiscate every ton of coal they can lay hands upon. Under the Inter-State Commerce act the railroads claim the right to pursue this course, in order to prevent interruption of trade.

The wind-up in the negotiations is looked for to-morrow. In this event the mine workers' convention will probably be called together on the following day and plans laid for the conduct of the strike. The executive board of the miners will have general supervision over the strike, and President Mitchell under the constitution of the organization will have powers in its general management.

PITTSBURG, March 25.—Throughout the Pittsburg district to-day there were held many meetings of miners' locals, and to-night from the reports gathered the inference is drawn that the miners here do not want any stoppage of their work, and that if the Pittsburg Coal Company shall, as it has promised, offer the advance in spite of what the operators outside the district do, they will vote to a man to accept it.

It is understood from an authoritative source that President Robbins of the Pittsburg Coal Company has been quietly informed that the miners of the district will stick by him if he gives the advance, even if by so doing it is necessary to break away from the United Mine Workers. This information has also been given to President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers.

MAHANOY CITY, Penn., March 25.—Mine foremen in the Schuylkill region have received orders to hurry up the measurements in all inside work, so as to have them completed by next Saturday. This is taken as an indication that the anthracite companies expect a general cessation of operations after March 31. It is said the bosses have instructions to be prepared to hoist the mules from the mines in the event of settlement not being reached by that date.

$1.20 A TON MORE FOR COAL.

That Is the Operators' Estimate of the Cost of the Miners' Gains.

Owing to inquiries as to the cost to the consumer if the demands of the anthracite miners were granted a statement was issued yesterday on behalf of the operators declaring that the consumer would pay $1.20 a ton more than the present price of anthracite if the demands were granted. The statement says:

"The method of reaching this result will be apparent from the following facts: The demands of the miners provide for a threefold increase of wages:

"First—An increase of 10 per cent. to all miners engaged in cutting coal or other men engaged in contract work.

"Secondly: The establishment of a minimum day wage for each class of labor. This minimum day wage, in many instances, is 100 per cent. greater than the rates now being paid.

"Third: The establishment of an eight-hour day, instead of a nine-hour day, without any reduction in a day's pay."

The statement then says that, by careful calculation from the pay rolls of the operating companies, the effect of these three increases is to add an average of 21.64 per cent. to the actual labor cost for a ton of coal. This is equal, it says, at the present labor cost of $1.55 to an increase of 33.68 per cent. for a ton on all sizes of coal which are mined.

The so-called steam sizes of anthracite which are a by-product of the industry, it says, come into direct competition with bituminous coal, and must, therefore, be sold at a price regulated by soft coal. The result is that all the added labor cost of the entire industry must be borne by the domestic sizes, which comprise 65 per cent. of the entire output.

The labor cost of each ton of coal sold to the domestic consumer would be raised by the new demands by 51.8 cents a ton, the operators say. They also say that "it becomes necessary, therefore, to push up the price of coal until the net share of the operator is sufficient to pay the 51.8 cents."

ADOPT OUR MOROCCO PLAN.

Delegates at Algeciras Agree—Correspondents Prepare to Leave.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 25.—Among outside observers more or less in touch with the leading delegates to the Moroccan Conference the belief that to-morrow's meeting will be decisive is so strong that nearly all the French newspaper correspondents have resolved to start for Paris together on Tuesday morning, leaving to a few of their colleagues who will remain the tedious task of describing the settlement of minor points and the drawing up of the final protocol.

Among the German correspondents—and the fact is perhaps significant—we hear of no such hurried exodus.

It is to be hoped that the sanguine anticipations may prove correct, but it will be well to refrain from confident predictions till we know the result of to-morrow's meeting.

Happily there is one big fact of good omen. Germany for the moment has abandoned her Fabian tactics, and the Austrian delegate, with Germany's assent, will submit to the conference a revised version of his famous Casablanca project. It is said to be a great improvement upon its predecessor, as it combines the police and bank questions.

In such a way, it is hoped, a settlement will be reached by mutual concessions, Germany yielding on the police question and France in respect to the bank.

ALGECIRAS, March 25.—The delegate of a prominent neutral power in outlining the procedure for to-morrow's sitting of the conference said to-day that an agreement had practically been attained beforehand, and that the American proposition relative to a mixed police force was destined to serve as the final arrangement, it being introduced by the Russians in the form of an amendment to the Austrian scheme.

Mr. White, the head of the American delegation, it was added, from the first did not intend to present the American proposal to the conference, his desire being to provide a feasible exit from the deadlock; but, having pointed out the way, Mr. White left it to the delegates to utilize or disregard the American scheme, according to the necessities of the case.

CURRY VICTIM OF TREACHERY.

Pulajanes Had Surrendered and Then Attacked Americans.

MANILA, Monday, March 26.—According to advices received to-day, the recent fight at Magtaon, Samar, between the constabulary and Pulajanes, was caused by treachery on the part of the natives. Thirty Pulajanes were killed, and sixteen of the constabulary were killed or wounded.

A dispatch received from Capt. Jones of the constabulary at Magtaon says that on March 23 Gov. Curry, Judge Lobinger, and Superintendent of Schools Hoover arrived there and camped over night near the Pulajanes. The presence of the officials was made known to the rebellious natives and their leader announced that he would surrender his force the next day. As a result of this promise the Americans returned to the town of Magtaon, accompanied by Col. Aguilar, a Pulajane chief.

The next day, Saturday, four chiefs of the Pulajanes, with over 100 men and fourteen guns, appeared at Magtaon and lined up in front of the constabulary barracks. Between the barracks and the Pulajanes stood the group of American officials.

One of the chiefs expressed a wish that his party be photographed in the act of surrendering, and Superintendent Hoover, in compliance with the request, was adjusting his camera when the Pulajanes' leader blew a whistle and gave an order to advance.

The entire party of natives thereupon rushed upon the American officials, who escaped to the Magtaon River and swam to the opposite bank. When the treachery of the natives was apparent the constabulary immediately opened fire, and a fierce fight ensued, in which the constabulary gained a decisive victory. The Pulajanes were chased to the mountains, but the pursuers lost more guns than they captured.

The American officials were later found, with the exception of Gov. Curry. He was last seen being chased by Pulajanes, and it is now believed he is hiding in the dense brush in that locality.

Three hundred constabulary are now on the trail of the fugitive natives and searching for Gov. Curry.

RUSSIA VERY HARD UP.

Estimates Recalled for Reduction—Little Hope of a German Loan.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 25.—It is officially announced that the estimates have been recalled for reduction. This is another proof of the Government's financial straits.

Retrenchment, however, cannot provide the $500,000,000 which must be found this year. Revenues are coming in very slowly, and the prospects of a loan in Berlin appear once more to have been extinguished.

Persistent rumors are again circulating that Premier Witte and Minister of the Interior Durnovo intend to resign so as to enable others to replenish the Treasury.

MAN'S BODY IN A TRUNK.

He Is Believed to Have Been Put in It While Alive.

STOCKTON, Cal., March 25.—A baggage man at the Southern Pacific Station last night found the body of Albert N. McVicar jammed into a large trunk. Officers assert that the man was placed in it while yet alive.

The victim had been employed in the Rawhide Mine, at Jamestown, Tueolumne County. The police are endeavoring to find Mrs. McVicar.

YONKERS FIRE DAMAGES THE HAWTHORNE MSS.

Blaze Partly Destroys Home of the Author's Son.

FIRE SMOLDERED TWO DAYS

Mss. of "The Scarlet Letter," "The Blithedale Romance," and "The Marble Faun" Saved.

Fire partly destroyed the home of Julian Hawthorne, 759 Warburton Avenue, Yonkers, yesterday soon after noon, and damaged several of the old Nathaniel Hawthorne manuscripts and a good deal of old furniture which had been in the family many years. None of the manuscripts was totally destroyed.

Julian Hawthorne is the son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, and his home is built upon the bank of the Hudson. The front part of it is of four stories and the rear portion of six stories. It is built in Queen Anne style, of brick and wood. The house is owned by Alfred Ogden. It was damaged about $15,000. The damage done the contents could not be estimated yesterday with any degree of accuracy.

Julian Hawthorne has been in Washington for some time. Mrs. Hawthorne has been in Westchester, at the home of a married daughter. Two servants and Clifford Smythe, a son-in-law, had been the sole occupants of the house for two days. About 12:30 o'clock Hilda Anderson, one of the servants, smelled smoke. She traced it to the second floor. She saw the walls on fire, and, racing out along the road, she found Henry Hanson, steward of the Corinthian Yacht Club, whose clubhouse is very near the Hawthorne home. Hanson sent in a fire alarm, and then started in to help get things out of the house.

Miss Mary Logan, a young woman who happened to be passing at the time, rushed into the burning house and did valiant service as a fire fighter and as a saver of old treasures. Edward Chamberlain of 769 Warburton Avenue was another volunteer. Frederick Hawthorne, youngest son of Julian Hawthorne, also arrived in time to help save some of the most valuable manuscripts and old pieces of furniture.

A Chippendale desk that is said to have been in the Hawthorne family for three centuries was brought down from the third floor. It was slightly damaged by water. A painting of Nathaniel Hawthorne and one of his wife, Sophia, which were in the parlor, were damaged by water, but they were brought out at least whole. They are seventy-five years old, the servants said.

Young Hawthorne knew where the Nathaniel Hawthorne manuscripts were kept. All of them were saved, though water made somewhat pulpy masses of several of them.

Among the manuscripts that were damaged were those of "The Blithedale Romance," "Twice Told Tales," "Septimius Felton," "The Scarlet Letter," and "The Marble Faun."

Clifford Smythe, who married a daughter of Julian Hawthorne last August, left the house two hours before the fire started. Most of the marriage presents sent to the Hawthorne home went up in smoke yesterday afternoon.

The firemen said that the blaze had been starter two days before by a defective flue. They believed that the fire had been smoldering and slowly burning between the first and second floors. It went through the house from top to bottom and burned off the roof before the firemen could check it.

$25,000 Damage Done by an Evening Fire in His Home.

Paintings, rugs, bric-à-brac, and furniture valued at several thousand dollars were destroyed by fire at 47 West Seventy-fourth Street, the home of William H. Page, Jr., the lawyer, last night. Mr. Page could not estimate the loss he sustained, but believes it will exceed $25,000. The Police and Fire Departments put the damage at $3,000 to the house, but did not attempt an estimate of the injury to its contents. The fire started on the second floor.

Following its discovery there was a panic among the servants, who fled across a fire escape to the home of John I. D. Bristol, at 45 West Seventy-fourth Street. Blanche, Mr. Page's 6-year-old daughter, was being bathed by a nurse on the third floor when the alarm was given. The nurse wrapped a bathrobe around the child and rushed to the window, where Albert Turner, a son-in-law of Bristol, carried the little one down the fire escape to safety.

The blaze had smoldered in a pipe recess for some time. When it burst out it spread to the reception room and library. Mary Fay, a maid, called a policeman, who sent in an alarm. When Battalion Chief Devanney arrived he saw that the fire was between the ceiling and the floor on the second story. He got the hook and ladder companies at work ripping up the floor, and after an hour's battle the flames were checked. The fire was confined to the second and third floors.

Mr. and Mrs. Page were out when the fire started. They returned to find the firemen at work tearing up floors and ripping the ceiling away.

Mr. Page said later that some of his paintings were by well known artists, and several had probably been injured by smoke and water, but he had not been able to make a close investigation to see just what damage had been done.

THE OHIO GOES TO CHINA.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Word reached the Navy Department to-day that the battleship Ohio, the flagship of Rear Admiral Train, had left Manila for Shanghai. It is supposed that the Admiral is aboard the ship, though the dispatch to the department does not indicate whether he is or not.

The battleship Wisconsin, which also has been stationed at Manila, preceded the Ohio to Shanghai by one day.

These movements, the officials of the Bureau of Navigation say, were not ordered by the department, being probably incidental to the approach of warm weather, whose influence is beginning to be felt in the Philippines.

ROCKEFELLER'S AUTO BALKS.

Its Owner Still in Lakewood—His Gift of Fuel to a Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 25.—Mrs. John D. Rockefeller and her sister, Miss Lucy Spellman, went to the Baptist Church in a coupé instead of the Rockefeller automobile this morning. This gave rise to a report that Mr. Rockefeller had taken the automobile and gone to New York. It was learned, however, that the machine was in the stable at the Rockefeller home, and that the chauffeur was trying to find out what was the matter with the carburetter. This information was given cheerfully enough, but John, the valet, balked when asked by reporters if Mr. Rockefeller was still in Lakewood. John really did not know, and he did not know that anybody would be likely to know.

On the Rockefeller place, behind the stable, are cords and cords of wood which has been cut into stove length and carefully piled up. There is more wood there than Mr. Rockefeller could use in the next ten years, but workmen nevertheless keep adding to the pile. None of it is for sale.

There was a pile of stumps and roots such as would make fair fuel near the neatly piled wood. Mr. Rockefeller had his workmen load them into a wagon one day last week and take them to the home of Mrs. Johnson, a widow, who lives a mile east of the Rockefeller place. She formerly lived in a house on the Rockefeller place, but had to move when the property was acquired by the Rockefellers.

The only person who left the Rockefeller home this afternoon was the milkmaid. Mr. Rockefeller has a pedigreed Jersey cow, which supplies the Rockefeller household with milk and butter. Charlie Gardner, the greens keeper on Mr. Rockefeller's private links, used to do the milking, but this year a milkmaid was employed for this special purpose.

BESSIE BRADLEY WAS ILL.

Missing Woman Writes to Her Brother She Is in London, with a Fever.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, March 25.—According to a letter received by Henry Bradley of Dobbs Ferry last night, his sister, Miss Bessie Bradley, who disappeared on Dec. 26 while on her way to take a steamship for England, is now ill with fever in Liverpool. Miss Bradley left Dobbs Ferry for New York on the night of Dec. 26, and she was traced as far as the Grand Central Station, where detectives learned that she had claimed her trunk and suit case, but after that all trace of her was lost.

The letter received by Mr. Bradley is dated March 15 and is very short. It reads:

Dear Brother: I know you have been anxious to hear from me. I have been ill in a hospital here with a fever. I will be back home to you soon. Lovingly, your sister,
BESSIE.

Mr. Bradley says he expects his sister home almost any day, but he cannot account for her strange disappearance.

A young woman resembling Miss Bradley until a few weeks ago lived in a dilapidated cottage at Rosedale, near Mamaroneck. She gave her name as Mrs. Duncan. A young man who she told the neighbors was her husband visited her frequently. He was a traveling salesman representing an English firm.

The woman went away from Mamaroneck in February, leaving a part of her furniture behind. She resembled Miss Bradley, even to the filling of the teeth and the gaiters she wore when last seen, but her landlord, L. S. Mosher, says that he doubts that she was the missing woman, because she spoke with a decided German accent. Miss Bradley is an English girl.

ONE MAN DIGGING A CANAL.

His Work Keeping Alive a Niagara Power Company's Charter.

Special to The New York Times.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., March 25.—While the officers of the Niagara, Lockport and Ontario Power Company profess to have no fear of the bill which Albany dispatches say Assemblyman Foelker will introduce this week, revoking the charter of the above company and the Love Power Canal charter, it is believed generally here that the bill will succeed in its purpose. The grounds for revocation of the charter of the former company—namely, failure to take advantage of their permission to tap the Niagara River for limitless amounts of water—are considered here as well founded.

The Niagara, Lockport & Ontario Power Company's charter would have expired May 1, 1904, if the Westinghouse interests controlling it had not begun actual work on the power canal from the Falls to this city. A large force was employed for eighteen months in digging the power canal near Hodgeville. Meantime the charter, thus kept alive, was used to acquire a right of way and build a transmission line down the State for carrying 180,000 horse power of Canadian-made electricity of the Ontario Power Company. The line is now nearing completion.

For the last six months only one man has been at work on the power canal construction, to keep the charter alive. He is John Leonard, an old negro, who receives $40 a month.

TO BE A BARON'S BRIDE.

Miss M. L. Magee of Pittsburg Engaged to an Austrian in Rome.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 25.—The announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Margaret Louisa Magee, daughter of the late Fred Magee, an attorney of this city, and a niece of the late Senator Christopher Lyman Magee, to Baron Reidl de Ridenau, an Attaché of the Austrian Embassy at Rome, was announced to-day. Miss Magee is now at the home of her aunt, Mrs. C. L. Magee, in Rome, but will leave for her home in this city the first of the month. The marriage will be celebrated in this city in June.

Miss Magee, before she went to Rome a few months ago, was reported to be engaged to the younger son of E. H. Jennings, the banker and financier of this city. There were objections to the marriage by both families, and Miss Magee was hurried off to Rome to visit Mrs. C. L. Magee, who, since the death of her husband a few years ago, has made her home in that city.

GOVERNMENTAL RATES IMPERATIVE---CARNEGIE

Also Would Limit Railroads' Right of Appeal to Courts.

TO PROTECT SMALL SHIPPER

Senator Tillman Will Move to Set a Day for a Vote on the Hepburn Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—"Governmental control of railroad rates I consider imperatively required," says Andrew Carnegie in an autograph letter printed in The Washington Post this morning. He also declares that the interests of small shippers should be protected in the matter of appeal to the courts.

The letter is written from Hot Springs, Va., in response to a request for an expression of his views on the Rate bill. As an expression of the views of one who was probably the greatest shipper of freight in the country, the letter attracted much attention in Washington to-day. It reads:

"Hot Springs, Va., March 23, 1906.

"Dear Sir: In reply to your inquiry regarding the rate bill: The trouble with appeals to the courts lies in the fact that railroad companies have their permanent legal staff. It matters little if appeals be freely handed over to it, which will always retard, and sometimes may defeat justice.

"The great shippers who could afford to fight appeals are those who benefit by secret rates or rebates. They are quiet, and wish no change.

"The small shippers must suffer, especially if appeals can always be taken. They can spare neither the time nor the money it would require to obtain justice.

"The best remedy, as it appears to me, is to allow appeals only when a proposed change of rates affects the railroad to not less than $— per annum. The amount should be what may be considered high by uninformed parties, but it is a trifling change which does not entail loss to a railroad company of $100,000 or even $200,000 per year.

"The commission should be trusted to decide trifling cases fairly, while the railroad companies should be entitled to the judgment of the courts when their revenues are seriously impaired.

"Government control of railroad rates I consider imperatively required. Other nations have found it so. So shall we. Yours truly,

"ANDREW CARNEGIE."

The rate discussion in the Senate has run along now to the point where several of the Senators are beginning to think of arranging a time for a vote. Senator Tillman, in charge of the bill, is particularly interested in that possibility, and intends some day this week to ask for an agreement. He will ask that a day within two weeks be set, and if the Senate thinks that will be too early he will then ask for a day within three weeks. If he is unsuccessful in that he will keep at it until he can get the voting day settled.

There are still several amendments in pickle that have not come out in the open, including the much-talked-about proposition drafted by Senator Spooner, covering the court review and the deposit of money by the railroads on appeal from the commission's order, to cover the excess rate paid by shippers when the ordered rate is suspended. Senator Culberson also has an amendment which will come out before long.

The end of the speech making is by no means in sight. Several Senators, including Knox, La Follette, and Elkins, are preparing now to speak, and others will follow. Tillman's chance of getting an early day for voting does not seem to be very great.

BURNING STEAMER HIT ROCK.

Had Reached St. John's After Weathering Gale and Snowstorm.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., March 25.—After being in peril from fire at sea and managing by desperate efforts to reach this port in the midst of a gale and blinding snowstorm, the British freight steamer Titian struck a submerged rock in entering the harbor late last night, had a hole torn in her hull, and to-day lies fast on the beach, where she was run to prevent her from sinking.

The fire in the 'midship hold is still burning fiercely, while in the vessel's forehold the water admitted by a jagged cut in the hull has reached a depth of nine feet, despite the continuous working of the steam pumps. The Titian is in no serious danger on the beach, but it is probable that before the fire amidships can be extinguished the 'midship hold will have to be flooded. This will make the work of floating the vessel much more difficult. It is believed that the greater portion of the cargo has either been burned or ruined by water.

The Titian sailed from New York March 18 for Manchester. Early yesterday she was reported afire off Sable Island and endeavoring to make this port. Despite her distress and the thick, rough weather, however, the steamer managed to make the outer harbor, where she picked up a pilot. The ship had barely got under way again to proceed to an anchorage when she struck the rock.

TWO-MILE RUNAWAY.

Just Tore Himself Loose from Mr. Hone's Carriage and Ran.

A runaway horse caused a stampede of carriages and automobiles on Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. The horse ran for two and one-half miles through the heart of the borough before being caught.

The horse was one of a team drawing a carriage owned and driven by Charles F. Hone of 944 President Street. At Eastern Parkway and Nostrand Avenue it became unmanageable, and, breaking the traces, bolted down the parkway. Mr. Hone prevented the other horse from following.

The driveway was filled with carriages and automobiles, and they scattered wildly to give the runaway a free course. The horse galloped across the Park Plaza, and down Flatbush Avenue to Fulton Street, several times narrowly escaping a fall into the Subway, which is being built in the avenue. At Fulton and Duffield Streets the horse was caught.

Subway Third Rail Cover Afire.

The wooden covering on the third rail in the Subway just south of the Columbus Circle station got afire early yesterday morning. A few buckets of water put the flames out before the fire engines arrived. Trains in both directions were held up for fifteen minutes.

HIT BY LIGHTNING IN PULPIT.

CARSON, Iowa, March 25.—While preaching to his congregation to-day the Rev. J. B. Lentz, pastor of a Latter Day Saints Church, was killed by lightning. The bolt descended during a hard thunder storm, and was communicated to the preacher by a chandelier hanging directly above his head. The shock threw him to the floor, while many persons in the audience were stunned. After nearly every one had fled from the building, Lentz was carried out.

The church took fire, but the flames were soon extinguished.

FIRE IN J. P. MORGAN'S HOUSE.

Mrs. Morgan Discovers It in Time and Saves Cragston.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N. Y., March 25.—Cragston, the country seat here of J. Pierpont Morgan, was threatened by fire last night.

Mrs. Morgan, who arrived from New York yesterday to spend a few days, discovered dense smoke in the main hallway of the house, and summoned the servants. There is a complete fire apparatus on the premises, and with that the blaze was quickly extinguished.

The fire was confined to a partition wall and some flooring, and the damage is slight. It originated in one of the flues leading from a hot-air furnace.

LONDON, Monday, March 26.—The Times's insurance correspondent says:

"There will very probably be a ghastly disaster to the Atlantic passenger trade if the derelict Dunmore is not speedily blown up. She has just been reported to have been passed on March 16 in latitude 41.28 north, longitude 45.36 west, right in the transatlantic homeward-bound route.

"This derelict of 3,653 tons has been frequently reported recently, and the reports agree regarding the danger in her continued existence. If the Admiralty would send a destroyer and put a torpedo into the Dunmore a great danger would be removed from the North Atlantic."

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 25.—Gov. John M. Pattison's condition took a turn for the worse to-night, following a day which had continued to give encouragement to his physicians, family, and friends.

The sudden change to-night is attributed to restlessness, and, while his temperature remains normal, the pulse is more rapid and respiration higher. Two physicians will remain all night.

SCOTTY IS ARRESTED.

Death Valley Miner, Turned Actor, Held for Assault.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—"Scotty," the spectacular Death Valley miner, who is now an actor in a melodrama, was arrested late last night charged with complicity in an assault which resulted in the dangerous shooting of "Scotty's" brother. "Scotty" obtained bail.

It is charged that Scotty planned an ambuscade at Wingate Pass, and that through an accident his brother was shot instead of an Eastern mining expert. The theory is that Scotty did not want the experts to see his Death Valley mine, and that the only way to stop them was to wound one of the party, compelling all to return to civilization.

BRIDGE PLATE FELL OFF.

It Came from the Williamsburg Structure and Some Folks Are Worried.

A ten-pound metal plate fell from the Manhattan end of the Williamsburg Bridge yesterday afternoon and missed by a few inches the head of Policeman Bernard McQuaid of the Delancey Street Station, who was walking along Goerck Street. McQuaid carried the plate to the station, and the bridge officers were notified.

With the falling of yesterday's plate the residents in the neighborhood began right away to tell about many other pieces of the bridge that have been falling within the last two or three months. They have figured it out that the passing of cars so shakes the huge structure that the bolts holding plates together at certain points are being speedily worn to the breaking point.

Whether yesterday's accident was just a rare happening or is one of many the police haven't been able to ascertain.

MOTHER DIES WITH CHILD.

Mrs. Horner Broke Through Ice Going to Daughter's Rescue.

HARTFORD, March 25.—Mrs. Robert Horner and her 12-year-old daughter, Helen, were drowned in the North Branch of Park River, which runs past the rear of the Horner home, this afternoon.

The little girl was returning from Sunday School, and intending to take a short cut home, had started across the ice-covered stream when the ice gave way beneath her. Hearing her screams as she sank the mother rushed from the house and started across the ice from the opposite bank of the river. She, too, broke through, and both were drowned. The body of the girl was recovered early in the evening, and that of the mother late to-night.

Mrs. Horner leaves a husband and three children.

SHIELDS'S WORK TO HANG BESIDE MUNKACSY'S COPY

Two "Death of Mozart" Canvasses for the Metropolitan.

TARDY JUSTICE TO BE DONE

Shields Says His Was First, the Dates Seem to Sustain Him, and Sir Purdon Clarke Will See Fair Play.

For the first time in the history of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, two pictures, dealing with the same subject and strikingly similar in the posing of the figures, are to hang side by side in that institution. Their juxtaposition will be due to the sense of fairness of the new Director, Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, who seeks to do justice to an American artist, although this justification is at the expense of a canvas among the largest and most celebrated in the museum.

One of the pictures is by the late Hungarian artist, Michael Munkacsy, and is called "The Last Moments of Mozart"; the other is by Thomas W. Shields of Brooklyn. Both canvases deal with the death of Mozart, with his friends about him. When the two paintings are placed on the same wall a man prematurely old will have achieved his ambition to show the public that the idea was first his, and that his painted conception of it was exhibited before the canvas occupying the position of honor in the museum was first touched with the brush, the signature on Munkacsy's painting being dated after the exhibition and photogravure for popular sale of the Shields canvas.

The Munkacsy panting in the museum, representing the composer with right hand raised, conducting his famous requiem, while his heart was beating its last strokes, was loaned to the society by Gen. R. A. Alger. The Shields painting, showing the same scene and telling the same story, now holds an important place in the museum of the Brooklyn Institute of Sciences and Arts. It has been shown in many American cities, in Munich, and at the Paris Salon.

The story of how the two artists happened to choose the same subject and achieve a similarity in the posing of the figures may justly be called extraordinary. Mr. Shields has lived for many years in a fine old house in Brooklyn, in a neighborhood once exceedingly exclusive. His only companions are a cat and a dog, together with his canvases in the studio, which is at the rear of the house. Yet Mr. Shields is perhaps the most popular person in the neighborhood.

Mr. Shields has rarely talked of his grievance against Munkascy, avoiding the topic altogether since the Hungarian's death, until people in art circles began to say that his chief work was the inspiration of another, and that he got his idea from the man who taught him how to paint. He stood this as long as he could and then went to Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke to lay before him the evidence in his possession that the master copied from the pupil. He was charitable enough to say that his idea had fascinated Munkacsy, and that he thought the Hungarian, believing no American could do the subject justice, had been tempted to think that he should disregard proprietorship in ideas, that art might be the gainer.

Sir Purdon, after careful investigation, decided that it was only fair to the American artist that the two pictures should hang side by side. That of the American artist can not be removed for a month, as it will for that time be in charge of the Brooklyn Institute. Then it is to be taken to the Metropolitan Museum.

Mr. Shields was reluctant yesterday to talk about what he said would be a story best told when the two pictures, with their dates, were placed so that the public could decide for itself, through date of signature and the dates of their different exhibitions, with whom of the two artists the conception originated. At length, however, he consented to state his case.

"When I was a lad," he said, "I remember hearing my father tell of a man named Mollenhauer, who was the 'cellist in those days at the old Metropolitan Theatre. He was also the leader of the orchestra. At the conclusion of the performance he had called his orchestra about him to explain that an absent member among them was dying and that he had sent word that he would not be afraid to go away if the old friends would but come to his room and play for him his favorite music.

"It was late at night and the men were weary after two performances, but they went in a body to where their comrade was dying, and there played until dawn, when the musician passed away, smiling upon his friends. The story made a vivid impression on me, and I thought of it again and again, so that I used to picture the scene.

"I showed some aptitude for art and a longing to be an artist, so that my parents gratified my wish and sent me to Europe, where in time I became one of the pupils of Munkacsy. There were several of us jovial friends, working hard, and in our spare moments making sketches of what we hoped to make masterpieces when our time came.

"The idea of a dying musician came to me often, and one afternoon I pictured what had been in my mind for so many years. I sent this to my uncle in London, Charles Williamhurst, whom I knew to be wise and to have a keen appreciation of the beautiful. He sent the copy back to me, with a letter of approval, but urging that I study the libraries of Paris to see if there had not been some famous musician who had died under similar circumstances. He said that if it had happened to an obscure player in an orchestra, the chances were that the same emotions and wishes would have led to the same thing with one of the great composers.

"Acting on this suggestion it was not difficult to learn that Mozart had died under exactly these circumstances, I made another sketch, which is practically that of Munkacsy, now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

"When this seemed worthy to be shown to my master I took it to him. His wife was by his side at the time. I was fearful of his verdict, but was delighted when he grasped it and looked at it eagerly for a few minutes. He seemed to hesitate and then said: 'I will keep this. The idea is good, but you are not strong enough for that work.' His wife said something, in Hungarian I think, which I now believe to have been that I could make nothing out of it, and that in time he could do it. I made many other sketches, showing them to him, but he kept putting me off, saying, 'Try again.'

"Now, the first impression is the best one. My first was the best sketch and arrangement of characters. I grew to love the idea of the picture so much that I could think of nothing else. We young fellows had formed a school of our own, and all urged that I paint my own picture. I hired a studio, and was well on the way with my work when I received word from my mother that my sister, whom I dearly loved, was failing, and that if I did not come home at once I might never see her again. I started at once and took the unfinished painting to a studio in the old University Building in Washington Square.

His Work Finished.

"Thomas B. Clark and others took the deepest interest in my work and Mr. Clark gave me a commission for a picture, a small one dealing with a musical subject. I finished my work. It was exhibited here in the National Academy in 1882. My first sketch, which is reproduced in the Munkacsy picture, was made in 1878. The picture was exhibited in Chicago, Philadelphia, Munich, and the Paris Salon of 1884. My picture was known two years before the date on his.

"He came over here in 1886 and saw my picture. He even called on me, and the next year brought over his picture to exhibit it in this country. He was in charge of Seidelmeyer, the Paris art dealer, since dead, upon whom I called and asked that the pictures be shown side by side. The only satisfaction I could get was a refusal, with the statement that it would cause too much 'competition,' as he put it.

"The difference between his picture and my first sketch, which he retained, was that he cut out the musicians back of the singers and placed a child back of the dying man, which I did not regard as a betterment. He also added a man looking at the dying composer from behind the piano, which I then acknowledged, and now acknowledge, added to the effectiveness of the grouping.

"The only reason for reopening this wound to my artistic pride and sense of justice is that recently in art circles there has been a rumor that I had nothing to show that I was the one who designed that picture. At this late day there will naturally be to me a keen appreciation and delight in seeing the two side by side, so that the American people may know that it was an American artist of English descent who was responsible for the creation of one of their popular works of art."

Michael Munkacsy was a Hungarian historical and genre painter whose real name was Michael Lieb. He was born in 1844 and died in 1900. Among his best works was "Milton Dictating 'Paradise Lost.'" This is in the Lenox Library. His world-famous work was "Christ Before Pilate," now in the possession of John Wanamaker, in Philadelphia. His "Christ on Calvary" created the widest interest, and was followed by the disputed picture.

His subsequent works were "Apotheosis of the Fine Arts," for the Art-Historical Museum of Vienna, and "Arpad Taking Possession of Hungary," for the new Parliament in Budapest. The strain of this last work brought on a mental disorder which ended with his death.

FOUND DEAD—WOMEN HELD.

Pottery Worker Meets Death on River Bank After Drawing Pay.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio, March 25.—Frank Smith, a pottery worker of Wellsville, Ohio, was found dead this morning with his head partly submerged in the Ohio River and his body lying on the river bank. His coat and hat were found on top of the embankment.

Irene Adams and Pearl Russell, who live near the place where the body of Smith was found, were arrested.

Smith, after drawing his money yesterday, was seen in saloons a block away from where his body was found. This was the last seen of him until he was found dead. The police believe he met with foul play. Deep cuts were found in his head and over his eye, and his leg was cut. No valuables were found on him.

WEIGHT STANDARD FOR EGGS.

Iowan Tries to Break the Historic Measure of Hens' Labors.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 25.—The House late yesterday afternoon passed a bill containing a provision that one dozen hen's eggs must weigh a pound and a half.

Representative Freeman of Oakland is the author of the measure. How he would conduct a campaign of education among the hens he will not say. He will not take that responsibility, in fact, merely saying that if a dozen eggs fail to weigh up to the standard more eggs must be added. Mr. Freeman is a farmer, banker, and stock dealer. His bill fixes the weight of a bushel and other articles ranging from sand to grass seed.

MAY QUIT THE MUTUAL TO STOP THE ATTACKS

Gillette Admits He and Grannis Are Considering That Step.

SEES BUSINESS ON NEW TACK

Day of Lavish Expenditures Seems Past, He Says—Jerome Expected to Decide on a Plan.

Developments in the insurance situation this week will probably include the resignation of Dr. Walter R. Gillette and Robert A. Grannis as Vice Presidents of the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Dr. Gillette said to a TIMES reporter yesterday concerning the report that he and Mr. Grannis were going to resign:

"It is true that we are contemplating such a step. I cannot tell you anything further."

Asked regarding the reasons leading up to the proposed action, Dr. Gillette said:

"I have come to the conclusion that if some of us who have served the life insurance companies a lifetime and now are being attacked by the newspapers in return should disappear as factors of the situation, the attacks would cease because there would be nobody to hit. That would be a great blessing to the insurance interests and to the general public, and it is those interests, not my own, that I have at heart. No one individual should be allowed to place himself in the way of achieving that end."

Dr. Gillette said that if he concluded to retire from active participation in the Mutual's affairs the act would be voluntary. His resignation had not been asked for by the present management, nor could he serve any selfish end by getting out.

"I have nothing to conceal, nothing to be ashamed of," said the doctor. "Everything I have done in thirty-five years as a member of the Mutual's administration has been done with the single purpose in view of promoting the interests of the policy holders, and contributing to the building up of a strong and sound institution.

"It seems to me that, judging from ordinary human standards, we have succeeded pretty well. But we have been judged by an ex-parte process before the Hughes Committee where we had no opportunity for cross-examination, and were cut short when we tried to explain—that is why we are reaping the whirlwind now, and the general public before long will share in the harvest unless the clamor now going on is speedily brought to a close.

The Damage Done.

"Now that this outcry against the administration of the insurance companies in the press has gone about as far as it well can go, it seems to me that the public should see the other side of the situation—the enormous damage that is being done to the insurance interests by these continuous and ill-advised attacks.

"This public clamor has cost the companies some $125,000,000 in lapsed policies and in new business, and the small companies have been the worst losers. The situation is really becoming critical. What little new business is coming in at the top of the barrel is but a drop when it comes to fill the void created by what is flowing out through the spigot. These institutions have been referred to as indestructible, but it is well to remember that there isn't a thing built up by human hands that cannot be torn down. The time has come to sound the warning."

Dr. Gillette said he wanted to contradict a report that he had obtained his place in the Mutual through saving the life of Mrs. Richard A. McCurdy, Mr. McCurdy having promised to make him General Manager in case he could save his wife, who was critically ill and had been abandoned by other physicians. The doctor said:

"This is as much of a falsehood as though they had accused me of picking pockets and even more discreditable. I have been a physician in this city and in the United States Army for twenty-four years, and I should not be represented as making a dicker by the bedside of a patient to save a human life. As a matter of fact, I never knew of Mrs. McCurdy having been seriously ill. I resent this falsehood, not only as implying that I should have forgotten my oath as a physician, but as an insult to my old profession."

Dr. Gillette said that if he was to be made a co-defendant with the McCurdys in any of the seven suits which it is reported will be brought by the new management of the Mutual this week he was not aware of it.

The McCurdy Suits.

One of these suits will be an action in equity against Richard A. McCurdy, one will be a suit against Richard A. and Robert H. McCurdy jointly, there will be one action in equity and one at law against Robert H. McCurdy, Louis A. Thébaud, and Charles H. Raymond, jointly; separate suits against each, and another against Charles H. Raymond & Co. as a firm. All of these proposed actions are the outgrowth of the disclosures made regarding wasteful management and syndicate participations.

"It is true," said Dr. Gillette, "that with the flood of prosperity that has swept the country during a period of years, men of large affairs have been apt to lose their bearings and become lavish in business expenditures. But this condition has not been confined to the insurance companies. Everybody, corporations, private business concerns, and individuals, who all have had their share of the prosperity, have erred in the same direction, if error it be.

"To conduct business on a large and lavish basis is the American idea of doing things, anyhow. The men at the head of the insurance companies have been condemned for doing merely the things that up to quite recently were accepted as in line with good American business methods. Now the idea seems to be that we should go on the other tack, and perhaps that is as well."

Dr. Gillette testified before the Armstrong Committee that he had "O. K.'d" vouchers for as much as $100,000 in one year without inquiring the purpose for which the money was used. He also testified at length regarding the contributions to political campaign funds made by the Mutual, and that these amounts had been charged up as "legal expenses," too.

"But I never approved any expenses," he said yesterday, "that had not previously been passed upon and authorized by the Finance Committee. My 'O K' on a voucher merely signified to the cashier or whoever had to pay out money on it that it had been considered and approved by the proper authorities."

That the proposed Mutual actions will be bitterly contested by those against whom they are to be directed, and that in the course of the litigation the McCurdy interests would contend that others besides the defendants involved had benefited at least indirectly by syndicate participation, was the opinion in well-informed circles.

Jerome and Perkins.

When District Attorney Jerome returns from his home in Lakeville this morning it is expected he will have decided on a way out of the dilemma in which he has been left by the instructions of Judge O'Sullivan to the Grand Jury, when the court ruled that the District Attorney was wrong in getting that body to ask the court to tell whether there had been behind the political contributions made by insurance companies the intent that would make them grand larceny.

It has already been intimated that Mr. Jerome's plan will be along the lines indicated by him when he asked Judge O'Sullivan to issue a warrant for the arrest of George W. Perkins and sit as a committing Magistrate in a case to test the entire question involved.

It is almost certain that Mr. Jerome will make deposition either before a Magistrate or a Justice of Special Sessions, embodying the admissions by Mr. Perkins before the Armstrong Committee that he had paid out $48,000 of the New York Life Insurance Company's funds to Cornelius N. Bliss as Treasurer of the Republican National Committee.

With the warrant signed by a Magistrate, Mr. Perkins will be asked to surrender himself. On his waiving examination, he will be held for the Grand Jury, while his lawyers at once will sue out writs of habeas corpus and certiorari in the Supreme Court, where the question of intent on which the culpability hinges would be thrashed out. Through successive appeals to the Appellate Division and the Court of Appeals, either by the District Attorney or by Mr. Perkins, depending on the decision of the lower court, the whole matter will be settled.

The New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants sent out copies yesterday of their memorandum submitted to the Armstrong Committee and the committees on insurance in the Senate and Assembly, upon the alleged defects in the forms of statements now required of insurance companies by the State Insurance Department. The memorandum declares that any commercial company that tried to make up its accounts on the basis required of the insurance companies would be unable to arrive at even an approximate idea of its earnings for any stated period. It also says:

"It is difficult to see what there is in the nature of the insurance business which would in any way necessitate, or even excuse, such a misleading statement of the results of the year's operations as that now required. If a company wishes to make an exceptionally favorable showing, it is only necessary for it to postpone the payment of its obligations, at the same time making a special effort to collect everything possible, as the report deals only with the actual cash paid out or collected without regard to the obligations incurred or revenue accrued.

"Any transactions, moreover, which the company does not wish to disclose, but which must necessarily affect the surplus, can be so manipulated through the 'Non-Ledger Assets and Liabilities' as not in any way to affect the 'Ledger Assets,' and so will never be disclosed in the annual statement."

Charles E. Hughes said last night that a sub-committee of the Armstrong Committee would confer with him to-day on the various recommendations made for amendments to the insurance bills.

He said the sub-committee would return to Albany to-morrow, and that the amended bills would probably be ready this week or early next week.

CHEAPER CENTRAL FARES.

Not Yet, but as Soon as the Suburban Lines Are Electrified.

The New York Central Railroad, through its General Counsel, Albert H. Harris, has written to the State Railroad Board, promising a cheaper fare schedule from Yonkers to the Grand Central after it has electrified its road. The Central's letter was in reply to a letter written by Mayor Coyne on March 5 to the State board, in which he asked for a fifteen-cent fare from Getty Square to 155th Street, instead of 25 cents, as at present, on the Putnam Division. The Central's letter says:

"The charge now made between these points [Getty Square and 155th Street] is the same as has been in effect for many years, and the fare which Mr. Coyne refers to is that charged for single rides. As the board knows, the company is now engaged in preparing to electrify its lines within the suburban districts tributary to New York.

"That work is well under way, and it is hoped that, unless it is delayed for reasons over which the company has no control, it will be completed within a comparatively short time. You can readily understand that with this change, which will radically modify the suburban service, a readjustment of rates in the territory affected must be made, and the company intends to make such readjustments as soon as the electric service is inaugurated.

"We do not wish at this time to take up a certain instance like the one referred to in your letter, but prefer to leave it to be considered and, if proper, to be readjusted in connection with the readjustment of fares in the whole area affected. It does not seem to us proper to take up one case and not another, and we cannot readjust rates so as to increase the volume of the passenger traffic now coming into the Grand Central Station in advance of the completion of the improvements and enlargements which are now under way, because with the restrictions incident to the doing of the work an increased volume of business cannot be handled at the terminal.

"While the rate complained of is between Getty Square and 155th Street, still it will necessarily affect the rate to the Grand Central Station, and for the reason which I have already stated we prefer not to make any changes in the rates now and for years in effect within the territory mentioned until the matter is taken up as a whole, which, as I have stated, will be when the electric service is inaugurated.

"It is the intention of the company to meet the question of rates of fares in the suburban districts in a broad and businesslike way when the change in motive power is effected, but we hope that it may be allowed to rest in abeyance for the present."

Three Children Burned to Death.

OXFORD, Fla., March 25.—Three children of Julius Bacheris were burned to death in their home near here last night in the absence of the parents. One was 5 years old, one 2, and the other an infant.

COOPER UNION HEARS A TALK ON LEGAL ETHICS

Learns That Names Oft Printed Are Not Always Great.

PRAISE GIVEN TO JEROME

By F. W. Hinrichs of Brooklyn, Who, However, Does Not Agree with His Insurance Case Views.

Lawyer F. W. Hinrichs of Brooklyn talked of "The Moral Standards of Lawyers" to the People's Institute at the crowded Cooper Union meeting last evening. For some reason or other Director Charles Sprague Smith would not let the audience get at Mr. Hinrichs after the address. He explained that the hour was late—too late for the usual questions. So Mr. Smith framed what he said he divined to be in the minds of the audience. The question condensed was substantially this:

"It has been found that when great questions of public import arise, which have a legal phase, it is difficult for the people to get first-class lawyers. They are usually enlisted by the other side—the side of the corporations or of corporate interests. May we look forward to a day when a first-class lawyer will have the courage and the public spirit to represent the cause of the people, with some sacrifice of personal interest?"

Mr. Hinrichs answered this question at some length.

"The question who are first-class lawyers would first arise," he explained. "Some men are daily in the papers because they are allied with certain interests. They are, therefore, constantly before the public, which naturally becomes imbued with the idea that they are at the very top of their profession. Now, lawyers know differently. They know that there are very competent lawyers who have not got great newspaper reputations. the great lawyers of newspapers are sometimes tricksters. So the people may have a great lawyer defending them when they think that the other side has a better.

"In this connection the question also arises whether a lawyer can accept a retainer from both sides. To this question I answer, No. And yet there can be found lawyers who defend this practice. It is, for example, well known that a gentleman who is serving the Rapid Transit Commission is also serving the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. When this was pointed out, the Rapid Transit Commissioner stated that he would not be asked to decide questions which had any relation to the Pennsylvania Railroad. But most of us find it rather difficult to be satisfied with this explanation."

In the course of the evening Mr. Jerome came in for a good deal of attention. Director Smith obviously alluded to his recent utterances at the Delta Upsilon Society when he called the criticisms of some publications as "hysteria" and the word "treason" as too strong a word to be used in connection with the United States Senate.

"Hysteria is too superficial a word," said Mr. Smith, "to the feeling of resentment which some of us feel against some injustices. Surely a man who betrays his trust to the people is guilty of treason."

Mr. Hinrichs said that, in his opinion, the present District Attorney of New York and the District Attorney of Brooklyn were the two best incumbents of those offices that the two boroughs had ever had.

"You will remember that District Attorney Jerome said in his recent campaign that, while he was in the District Attorney's office, any private citizen could come into his office at any time and get promptly any information that he desired to get pertaining to the office.

"I had occasion to test that assertion the other day. I wrote him to send me the names of the lawyers who had been convicted of crime, or had been indicted. I received an answer within twenty-four hours giving clear and detailed information on the point."

Mr. Hinrichs read the names of some of the men from the list. They included George E. Mills, Robert E. Ammon, Thomas P. Wicks, Abraham H. Hummel, and others still fresh in the public memory.

"I disagree with Mr. Jerome on the insurance question, however," Mr. Hinrichs added.

The general trend of Lawyer Hinrichs's argument with regard to the morality involved in a lawyer's pleading was that the lawyer might hold a view on a public question as a citizen and still find it possible to go before the court and argue for the opposing side.

"It is my belief, for example, that the Rapid Transit Commission has no right to extend the subway lease the additional twenty-five years upon the fifty allowed to it," he said. "I could find it possible, however, if retained, to argue on the other side of the question.

"There is no likelihood, mind you, that I will be retained. I merely mention this to show that a lawyer has no right to throw his personality upon the court. He should present the law and the facts to the court and get a verdict upon them."

RUNAWAY GIRL HOME AGAIN.

Elizabeth Frey Tells of Her Adventures in New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 25.—Elizabeth Frey, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Frey of Byram Shore, returned to her home last night after having been missing for two weeks. She had been found in New Haven.

"I made up my mind in the morning that I would go and earn by own living, and started off," she said to-day. "I think my mind was not right from overstudy. In fact, I didn't know my name after I left home for several days, and then did not dare to tell it. I was tired of being away from father and mother, and was ready to come home last week, but was urged to stay where I was, and when mother came after me last night I was so glad to see her that I cried.

"I wrote to mother just before I boarded the noon train at Port Chester that I left because I didn't want to be confirmed. I had $23 with me, and went to New Haven, a place I had never been to. Getting there I followed some boys toward the Durant Hotel, and took rooms there. I didn't know my own name, but heard the name 'Reynolds,' and thought that sounded familiar, so took it. On March 13 I sent to the Woman's Exchange looking for a place, for I can do housework. I was directed to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and consider myself lucky to have fallen into such good hands. I served as waitress in the Y. W. C. T. U. at 568 Chapel Street. Last Thursday night I had but $3 left, and two of these were stolen from my room."

A LIVELY SUNDAY AT CONEY.

Women's Swimming Race and a Runaway on the Programme—50,000 There

Life was not without incident at Coney Island yesterday. Fifty thousand people went down there, the police said. About two o'clock Mrs. Alfonse Munger and Mrs. George T. Herring, the wife of the proprietor of the Sea Gate Beach Hotel, tripped down to the water in front of that establishment and started off on a swimming race. They were trying to decide a wager made by their respective husbands. Each man had backed his wife for a box of perfectos and a pair of gloves.

Both women are expert swimmers, and the cold water did not seem to bother them a bit. They raced for about 200 yards. Mr. Herring refused to tell reporters the result, so possibly it is Mrs. Munger who is wearing the gloves today.

Earl Ackerman of 581 Park Place, Brooklyn, took Miss Emma Nelson of 537 Clinton Street out for a drive. On their way to Coney Island they stopped for some light refreshment at Donovan's Hotel. Miss Nelson was the first to get into the carriage again, and she had hardly taken her seat when the horse bolted.

The wagon was soon lost to sight, and Ackerman was frantic with anxiety until an automobile appeared on the scene. In it was Herman Epstein, a Williamsburg bank President, of 618 Marcy Avenue. He had found Miss Nelson lying in a ditch at the roadside.

Ackerman got in the machine, and the party went to the Coney Island Police Station. The woman was still unconscious when they arrived. Sergt. Sheehan worked over her for nearly an hour, however, and brought her to. She was all right except for the shock and a few bruises.

Then should be mentioned an attempt by a Chinaman to obtain single-handed a free concession from Senator Reynolds to operate some sort of an Oriental side show at Dreamland. The Chinaman was Tuy Wing, and the Senator had never seen him before, nor had Sheriff Buttling, who is to manage the resort this Summer.

Wing followed the two men about all the afternoon, trying to get them to listen. His talk flowed smoothly until money was mentioned. Then he would change the subject. When the Chinaman was not engaging his attention Senator Reynolds talked about the new show that is to be put on at Dreamland.

It is to be called "The Break of Dawn," and will take up the history of the world where "Creation," last year's show, left off. The opening day is scheduled for May 12.

WOMAN FELLED BY FOOTPAD.

Miss Mead's Cries Scared the Mount Vernon Thug Away.

Within the shadow of the Church of the Ascension and opposite the home of William H. Martens, Commissioner of Public Works, in Park Avenue, Chester Hill, a fine residential section of Mount Vernon, Miss Anna Elizabeth Mead, a young woman prominent in local society, was knocked down by a highwayman on Saturday evening. She is now said to be in a serious condition. Miss Mead is the sister of Mrs. Edmund E. Kemble, wife of Capt. Kemble of 115 East Lincoln Avenue.

The assault was in a thickly populated section, but Miss Mead would have probably been robbed had her screams not frightened away the footpad. Miss Mead was on her way to the home of her sister, where she lives. She was walking leisurely through Park Avenue when, in front of Commissioner Martens's house, a man sprang out from behind a hedge and slipping up behind her struck her a blow on the right side of the head.

It felled her to the sidewalk. It is believed that the highwayman used either a piece of lead pipe or a hammer, as a cut two inches long was made in her scalp.

Miss Mead managed to rise and, screaming for help, hurried to her home a block away. There she fell in a faint.

Miss Mead said that the man ran across the lawns toward the New Haven Railroad tracks. The police think that the footpad mistook Miss Mead for some wealthy woman. The assault was one of the boldest in Mount Vernon in years.

CALLS UNIONS A CURSE.

Member of the Iron League Vigorously Opposes Eight-Hour Law.

The proposed Rock eight-hour law, the methods of the labor unions and their leaders, and the labor unions themselves were strongly denounced in a letter sent by E. F. Milliken of Milliken Brothers, members of the Iron League, to Assemblyman Thomas Rock, who is responsible for the bill, and read at yesterday's meeting of the Central Federated Union. The reading of the letter caused a sensation.

"The labor unions," wrote Mr. Milliken, "are a curse both to the employers and to the employes." England, which he said is the most trades-union-ridden country in the world, had been a prey to labor unions for years, destroying many industries, and this country seemed to be threatened with the same thing.

He said that he wrote feelingly, as his firm had more than its share in combating the vagaries and the crimes of labor leaders. The late Sam Parks was the delegate in the structural iron industry with whom for some years the firm was obliged to deal. He continued:

"We are having a strike in our industry since the first of the year, and for the character of Parks's successors in leadership we refer you to the daily press. These conditions entailed on us for three years a fight which cost us individually between $75,000 and $100,000 directly, and cost the building industry in this city millions."

Men in the learned professions were often making less now than the mechanics, continued Mr. Milliken. The average annual income of competent practicing physicians, as shown by statistics, was less than $600 a year, while mechanics working eight hours a day were getting from $1,200 to $1,500. They required no education, and all that they had to do was to follow the instructions of a gang boss. Yet in demanding shorter hours or more pay the unions seemed to consider labor a fixed commodity, whereas, Mr. Milliken wrote, only exceptional prosperity had enabled the public to keep up with the enhanced cost of building.

"We are opposed, root and branch, to anything and everything favorable to the unions as they are and have been conducted, because they are illogical and impracticable and very largely hurtful in their aim and essence, and vicious and often criminal in their practical working out."

TRY AGAIN TO KIDNAP BOY.

Young Bozzuffi Escapes the Three Italians—One Arrested.

Another attempt to kidnap Antonio Bozzuffi, the 15-year-old son of a well-to-do Italian banker, was made last night by three Italians. They tried to make him a captive in front of 330 East Sixty-third Street, where the lad was talking to a group of girls. A young man who said he was Vito Galanti of 326 East Sixty-third Street, was arrested as a suspicious person after the bo yhad called the police.

The three walked up to Bozzuffi and told hi mhis father wanted to see him around the corner.

"My father is in church," the boy replied, "and I guess I know what you are up to."

"You had better hurry," they told him, "as your father sent us around. He is waiting for you now."

The boy then cried out at the top of his voice. The men triad to clap their hands over his mouth to smother his yells, but the lad struggled hard and broke away. Then they tried to seize his arms, but he managed to get out of their grasp, and started for his home. His cries attracted Policeman Bosler, who ran up in time to see three men running through East Sixty-third Street. The policeman overtook Galanti. He was taken back to young Bozzuffi, who identified him as the youngest of the trio who had seized him. Galanti had nothing to say.

Several weeks ago Bozzuffi, whose father a banking establishment at 1,440 Avenue A, was kidnapped, he says, by a band of Italians, who held him a captive in a room in Fifty-ninth Street, between First and Second Avenues.

There, at the point of a revolver, he says, he was compelled to write letters to his father and mother, declaring that if $20,000 was not paid to his captors, his life would be the forfeit.

The banker and his wife appealed to the police to recover the boy. The mother wanted the money paid to get her son's release, but Bozzfi and his friends refused to do this, believing that the kidnappers would not dare kill the lad.

Several days later, the boy says, he managed to escape from the house and make his way home. A few days after that two Italians were arrested and held on a charge of being in the conspiracy to get $20,000 ransom from the banker.

The boy identified the men as those who had been at the house where he was held captive. Later he identified the body of an Italian, who was murdered in Newark, as the man who had guarded him all the time he was a captive.

FIGHT IN A POLICE COURT.

Tammany Man Hit a Reporter, Escaped, and Was Arrested.

John F. Curry, Tammany leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District, took it into his head in the West Side Court yesterday, that a reporter, who had expressed a fervent wish that "they would keep politicians off the bridge," had insulted him. He asked Magistrate Breen to give the reporter a "talking to." The Magistrate requested Curry to step down from the bridge.

Curry told John F. McCann of 551 West Fifty-seventh Street, one of his henchmen, that his dignity had been injured. McCann stepped up on the bridge and struck the reporter in the face. Then just as the Magistrate was ordering McCann's arrest, he was passed out through the side door by his friends. The court policemen stood by like statues while he escaped.

"What good are you when you allow a man to escape who has committed a crime before your very eyes?" said the Magistrate, addressing the policemen. Then he drew up a warrant for McCann's arrest, and when the latter was arraigned before him announced that he would do his best to have him indicted. McCann was held in $500 bail for examination to-day.

NEW TRAFFIC PLAN.

Changes in Regulation of Times Square and Herald Square Travel.

New traffic regulations will be put in force this morning at Times Square and Herald Square. The new plan was tried yesterday morning for a while in the two squares, the men being rehearsed in the new order of things. Deputy Police Commissioner Waldo and Inspector Flood, with forty policemen of the week-day squad, gathered at the squares yesterday morning to put the posts in proper place and handle such traffic as came by. It did not take the men long to understand their new duties.

In Times Square Forty-second Street is to be open east and west, Forty-fourth Street and Forty-fifth Street east and west are to be closed. In Herald Square Thirty-fifth Street is to be closed for westward traffic, and Thirty-third Street and Thirty-fourth Street are to be open.

GARDNER MUSEUM TO OPEN.

Boston Woman Not Resentful Over Forced Payment of Duty.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 25.—Although Mrs. John L. Gardner has paid the duty on art works she brought from Europe and has the right to exclude the public from her museum, she will admit art lovers to Fenway Court to-morrow.

The museum will remain open from 12 o'clock to 3 o'clock each day except Sunday until April 7. Visitors must present tickets, which can be purchased at the customary place.

At one time it was feared that Mrs. Gardner would close her museum, but it is said that she holds no resentment over the forced payment of duty, and will continue her practice of other years.

SPECIAL SALE OF WEBER·PIANOS USED BY THE OPERA ARTISTS

THE most important event in New York's piano trade is the Annual Sale of Pianos used by the great stars of the Conried Metropolitan Opera Company during the operatic season. From the very nature of the case such a sale can occur but once a year, and the 1906 sale is announced to begin Monday, March 26, at Aeolian Hall.

The Weber is the piano of the Opera. Upwards of fifty Uprights and Grands are required to supply the needs of the Opera House itself and the various artists in their New York residences. The company is now on its annual tour of the country and all of these pianos have been returned to us. We have put them in perfect order, and now offer them to the public at

IMPORTANT REDUCTIONS IN PRICE
These Pianos Are Guaranteed Equal to New in Every Respect.

The Weber is one of the very few pianos the prices of which are absolutely stable. It is not possible to buy a new Weber for a dollar less than the advertised price. This "Opera Sale" is therefore an exceptional opportunity to secure a good Weber, used for only a few months, at a substantial saving.

Notwithstanding the reduced prices, the pianos have an added value in the estimation of many people by reason of their distinguished associations. Each instrument will be plainly marked with the name of the opera artist who has used it, the original price and the special sale price. Included in the collection are the Weber Upright which Caruso had in his 57th Street house and the Weber Grand which Mme. Sembrich played so delightfully in the "Barber of Seville" on the Opera House stage.

The usual liberal terms will be extended to all persons desiring to make purchases on the monthly payment system.
Pianos of other makes will be received in part payment.
The manufacturers' complete guarantee covers each instrument exactly the same as entirely new pianos.

Inasmuch as these pianos were the personal choice of the great artists whose names they bear, there is an additional reason why this sale should appeal to all persons who wish to secure a really fine specimen of the craftsmanship of the celebrated Weber factories.

Because of its rich, sympathetic tone-quality, the Weber has for years been the choice of the greatest artists the world has known. And this special sale presents an exceptional opportunity to secure the identical instruments that the Metropolitan Opera House stars selected for their personal use.

The Weber Piano Company, AEOLIAN HALL, 362 Fifth Avenue, near 34th St., New York.
Now united with the Aeolian Company, also controlling the manufacture and sale of Steck, Wheelock, and Stuyvesant Pianos.

WOMAN'S STRANGE TALE OF TROPIC KIDNAPPING

Vast Estates, Papers Thereto, and a Tall, Dark Man Appear.

ALL IN CUBA 37 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Coumbe Now Seeks Information, but Fears Influence Which Silenced Mrs. Falala and the Rest.

A story involving the identity of a handsome woman and brimming with adventure and mystery, came out through the appearance yesterday of this advertisement in a New York newspaper:

> CUBAN WOMAN, who ten years ago asked colored lady in Baltimore to help find child of fine family she helped kidnap and bring to America 37 years ago, will find lady she helped wrong as a child by addressing Bonita Fernandez, care Descartes, 281 Clifton Place, Brooklyn, New York.

The author of the advertisement is Mrs. Jessie Coumbe of 281 Clifton Place, Brooklyn. As she sat in her home yesterday awaiting an answer to her advertisement she told to the reporters the story of her life.

Mrs. Coumbe is the principal in the kidnapping mentioned in the advertisement, and, although she says she has spent a lifetime trying to find out just who she is she has been unsuccessful. Twice she has advertised, and on each occasion, she says, just as some one was about to reveal her identity, some "mysterious influence" has appeared which has made the narrator mute.

She says she has been told she is the daughter of "Lord Woolton" and a Cuban actress named Fernandez; that she was kidnapped in Cuba and removed to Florida, where she was educated in a convent, the expenses being paid by a man who visited her once every three months to pay her bills. She isn't clear about it all yet, and wants more information. But she tells a tale that would be worthy of the elder Dumas.

Mrs. Coumbe is a handsome, dark-haired woman about 40 years old. She told her story yesterday fluently.

"The first thing I recall," she said, "was my life with my mother. I was then about four years old, I suspect, and can remember nothing except that we lived in luxury, in a hot country. Mother used to hold me in her lap and sing to me, and I remember that frequently a tall, dark man was there. He wore a military uniform.

"The next thing which comes to my mind is an awakening in pain. I looked about and found that I was being carried on the back of a huge negro. My arms hung over his shoulders and he clasped my hands in front and pulled down on them to hold me. The pain was great and I began to cry.

"'I want to go home to mother,' I sobbed.

"'It's all right,' he replied. 'We're going to mother, and I'll take care of you.'

"We passed through a forest in which was a hut. My carrier took me within and dumped me upon a rude cot. Then he turned me over to a negress, whom I remember by the name of Harriet Gibson. The man disappeared, and soon afterward the woman took me away and we got on a railroad train. It was the first railroad I had ever seen. We rode for a while and then alighted, and the first person I saw was the man with the uniform who had called upon mother.

"I clapped my hands for joy when I saw him, for I thought I was safe.

"'Take me home to mother,' I pleaded with him.

"'Yes, darling,' he replied, 'we'll go home to mother soon.'

"Instead of taking me to mother, however, he talked to the woman for a long time. Several times I heard them mention Havana. A few moments later the woman bundled me up again and the next thing I realized, through my tears, was that we were boarding a steamboat. It sailed at once, and I will never forget it because the trip we took made me deathly ill.

"Finally, we got off at a place which I afterward knew to be Fernandina, Fla. Harriet took me for a long walk, and after a while stopped at the cabin of a mulatto woman. There I lived for several weeks in squalor and pain, and it was only on visits to Mrs. Susan Falala, a white woman, that I was relieved of the torture of my daily suroundings. The mulatto woman, Harriet, and Mrs. Falala used to have long serious talks about me, but their exact nature I could never ascertain. At length Harriet Gibson died, and one of the women of the cabin, named Catherine, attempted to carry me off, but Mrs. Falala interfered.

"'She's mine,' the negress said, 'and I have a right to take her away.'

"'It's a lie,' retorted Mrs. Falala, 'you shall never have the girl while I live. I have the right to her. The papers are in my posession, and I demand her.'

"The result of all this was that finally I went to live with Mrs. Falala. When I was taken into her house I continued to cry for my mother, and Mrs. Falala consoled with me. The woman with whom I had been living had struck me with a sharp stick several times, and Mrs. Falala dressed my wounds. She was good to me. Just then Dr. Billings, another mystery, appeared upon the scene.

"'I have a right to the girl; give her to me,' he declared, dramatically. 'Give me the papers, they belong to me as well.'

"'Never,' replied Mrs. Falala, obstinately. 'The girl and the papers are mine, and I will keep them.'

Dr. Billings went off in pique, and that was the last I saw of him. After that Mrs. Falala took me to Jacksonville, where we lived in comfort, but whenever I asked her to take me to my mother she changed the subject. Once I heard her crying to herself and talking about me.

"'He has taken all,' she moaned. 'He has the papers and all the documents. Possession is nine points of the law, and we are lost.'

"I had become old enough to understand things by this time, and questioned her. But she didn't offer a satisfactory explanation. Shortly after this I ran away from Mrs. Falala and got a place as stewardess on a boat. They brought me back and put me in a convent. Then at times I lived with Mrs. Falala's daughters.

"They didn't like me, and used to call me 'the Little Grandee' and abuse me. The convent people inquired very closely as to my identity, and they must have learned something in detail, for they treated me with the utmost deference.

"Soon after I quit the convent I got a job as a tobacco stripper. Then I found a colored woman who knew something of my parents, and asked her about it. She named a policeman in Jacksonville who would tell me, and I went to him and pleaded on my knees.

"'I know, and Mrs. Falala knows, who you are,' he said in frightened, whispered tones, 'but a cast-iron oath inviting death if it is violated, stands between me and the secret. I cannot tell you.'

"'Can't you give me some sort of clue,' I begged.

"'Yes,' he replied. 'Have you noticed that once every three months you are removed for a day. Well, on that day a man comes here to give money for your support. His name is Dr. Porter. Find him and he will tell all.'

"I never found Dr. Porter, and when I was 22 years old, discouraged and practically resigned to the mystery, I got married at Jacksonville.

"Since that time," continued Mrs. Coumbe, "several things have developed. I am convinced that about the time I was sent to Florida I was to become the heir to vast estates. I believe that the place from which I was taken was Aguacarte. I wrote to Mr. Steinhart, the American Consul at Havana, about it, and he replied that he had heard a great deal, and would tell me upon his next visit here.

"He told me later that Bonita Fernandez, a beautiful and famous actress in Cuba, had been murdered in Havana, leaving a small girl, whose disappearance had never been traced. Mr. Steinhart told me to see a certain man in New York who could tell more, and the man promised to do so. Just as he was about to relate all the facts, however, a strange and powerful influence visited him, and he stopped short. He will not tell me a word now.

"Soon after that, I advertised in the newspapers. A colored woman named Morton answered my notice. She told me a great deal also.

"'You are the daughter of Lord Woolton,' she declared. 'Your mother was a French nurse and my sister knew her.' There were several inconsistencies in her story, however, and these I discounted. However, she showed me the counterpart of a miniature gold spoon I had worn about my neck since a small child. She was about to tell me more when the same strange influence appeared again and sealed her lips.

"Then I received a letter telling me to write to Richard Woolton at Trinidad, Col. I wrote and found that he had lived there, but was dead. More recently I found that Shirley Woolton had been an attaché of the British Legation at Havana during the time of Bonita Fernandez.

"Last January I advertised again, and a woman named Burton, who was a traveling missionary of the Afro-American Methodist Episcopal Church, came to me and said that ten years ago she had talked with a negro woman in Baltimore who was concerned about the fate of her soul. This woman had confessed to the missionary that she had helped to kidnap a beautiful child from Cuba at a time correspondng wth that of my disappearance.

Just as she was about to tell more the mysterious influence closed her mouth. She would talk no more.

"Since then," concluded Mrs. Coumbe, "three attempts have been made to poison me, and I can't find out who has made them. I receive anonymous letters threatening my life, and I can't trace them, either. The case is a sad mystery. I have advertised again to find who I am. I want to know who my father and mother were, and I want my rights. I appeal to any one who knows to inform me."

The British peerage does not contain the name of "Lord Woolten" or any closely resembling that.

JAPANESE GRATEFUL TO US.

Situation in Famine Region Better, but Many Still Suffering.

TOKIO, March 25.—Misery and suffering in the famine region have been slightly relieved by the prompt and liberal aid from foreign sources and by the abatement of the rigors of Winter. The local authorities are trying to provide work for the able-bodied, but the extent of the work is inadequate, and thousands are still on the verge of starvation.

The liberal contributions from American sympathizers are already effective, and the relief, in the form of food and clothing, is received with the heartiest appreciation.

Many parents are parting with their children, sending them to the already crowded Okayama Orphanage. Several children arrived yesterday at the Uyeno Railway station in this city. Among them was a girl 6 years old, who was found treasuring a package of dirty old newspapers. On examination the package was found to contain a postal card with the address of the parents of the child, who had been told to mail the card upon her arrival at her destination.

The severity of the suffering undergone by the children is clearly shown in the faces of those who are compelled to leave their homes, where the food consists of flour mixed with straw and weeds. The mixture is beaten fine, forming a paste which contains only 25 per cent. actual food value. The Government has remitted taxes in the famine district, but this will not afford immediate relief.

Another appeal for aid is presented by the sufferers from the recent earthquake in South Formosa, thousands of whom are homeless. The local Government is busy providing food, caring for the injured, and recovering and removing corpses, several hundreds of which are buried under débris.

SACRED CATTLE FOR AMERICA

Coming from India—Are Immune from Pleuro-Pneumonia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The Government has undertaken to superintend the introduction into this country of the sacred cattle of India for breeding purposes. Last week Secretary Wilson sent one of the best bio-chemists and veterinarians of the Department of Agriculture to India, in company with a prominent Texas stock man, who intends to buy 100 sacred bulls and a number of cows, in order to establish the breed in the Southwestern States.

The reason why these cattle are desired by cattlemen is that they are immune from pleuro-pneumonia, which has caused such heavy losses through infection by cattle ticks. The ticks, it is asserted, cannot work on the sacred cattle. Experiments have been carried on for years to demonstrate this fact.

The introduction of one-eighth of sacred blood in the ordinary American cattle is said to be enough to obtain immunity. Secretary Wilson, with his usual care not to bring in any form of disease now unknown in this country, agreed to afford facilities for the importation of the Indian cattle, but on condition that a Government veterinarian should examine every beast before it was bought and give his approval to the purchase. The expenses of the veterinarian are paid by the cattlemen.

HIPPODROME RIDER'S ESCAPE.

Dragged Under Water When His Foot Caught in the Stirrup.

"Danny" Newman, a rider, narrowly escaped serious injury in the big water tank at the Hippodrome early yesterday morning at a rehearsal of the act of the plunging horses, which is to be a part of the "Society Circus" this week.

Newman was riding Ginger, a fiery mustang, and plunged into the tank with others behind Miss Adele Von Ohl, who is the leader. When Ginger got into the water he threw Newman, who went under with a foot still in the stirrup. Newman was struggling under the water when Miss Von Ohl saw his predicament and hastened to his rescue.

Just as she got to his side, however, the rider freed himself, and in an exhausted condition was dragged to the stage, where Dr. W. E. Young attended him.

Missing Edward B. Fitts Found in South Carolina.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 25.—Edward B. Fitts, a well-known farmer of Lebanon, N. Y., President of the Lebanon Grange, and prominent in town affairs, who was reported missing on the arrival of the steamship Kansas City from Savannah last week, has been found in Lebanon, S. C., where he had wandered while temporarily deranged.

Fitts had been in the South for his health, and was to have sailed on the steamship on which he had engaged passage. His baggage was found aboard the steamer, and immediately inquiry was begun. A brother, John Fitts, traced him to Lebanon, S. C., to which the missing man had been directed.

Top & Overcoats for Men
NINE NEW SPRING MODELS
at $15.00 to $40.00

Let it be understood that by models we mean radically different forms, not merely fabrics.

All nine reach the mark of distinctiveness through expressive tailoring and draping rather than upholstering. Graceful curves instead of angles; all the innovations upon which high authority has set its sanction, instead of arbitrary kinks.

Does all that satisfy you? No need to worry about the prices. They are as modest as we can afford to make them.

Three New Form Defining Models of gray mixtures and herringbone weaves, fly-front or "button-through," with long centre and false side vents, welted or flap pockets.

Two New Paddock Models, fly-front or "button-through."

Two Dinky Box Models of covert or vicuna.

Two Conservative Models, silk lined and faced.

SPECTRE OF REACTION NOW MENACES RUSSIA

Fear That the Government May Abandon the Path of Reform.

ARMY RELIED ON ONCE MORE

Believed to be Faithful and Ready to Crush Revolution—Witte on Verge of Breakdown.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 25.—The Associated Press is able to give the results of a conversation with a high personage regarding the situation in Russia. Neither the name nor the position of this personage can be indicated, but his competency to speak upon the situation can be vouched for.

The conversation, which covered a wide range, left the distinct impression that the assembling of the National Parliament would bring a crisis, but not the one anticipated abroad. The Government evidently is absolutely convinced that an armed revolution or a general uprising which would menace its life is no longer possible. It believes that the danger now is, not that the Government will be overthrown, but that it will be driven to abandon its path of reform.

"The guerrilla warfare which the revolutionists at present are conducting," said the personage referred to, "cannot succeed. Acts of terrorism doubtless will continue; vengeance may be wreaked upon Governors General and police masters; Count Witte and Minister of the Interior Durnovo may be assassinated; banks and buildings may be blown up, and there may even be riots here and there, but attempts to produce widespread risings in the cities or a repetition of the railroad strike are doomed to failure. The Government has a firm grip, and every measure to prevent excesses will be taken.

"Besides, the situation has been completely altered since last Autumn, when practically the whole of the urban population joined the protest which led the Emperor to grant the manifesto of Oct. 30. The Government then was unable to cope with the extreme revolutionaries. The army in European Russia was at a low strength and filled with reservists bordering on mutiny, owing to their anxiety to return to their homes and rejoin their families, and new recruits everywhere were prevented from joining the colors. Since then all is changed. The reservists have been discharged and the recruits have been drilled and have joined the ranks. Regiments which then consisted of 400 men now have 2,000 men. Two army corps have returned from Manchuria, and more regulars are arriving daily.

ARMY FATAL TO REVOLUTION.

"No matter what is said to the contrary, it is certain that the army is faithful to the Emperor. There may be individual cases of disloyalty, but the reliability of the army as a whole is unquestionable. The weight of troops alone renders a revolution impossible.

"The Emperor is sincerely and honestly desirous of meeting the wishes of his people, and has given them his word to this effect. But a reactionary party exists. It is composed of the aristocracy, with a powerful backing in high places, and, above all, it enjoys the support of the military faction, which, in a country like Russia, is an immense factor. The military is naturally reactionary. An officer pefers to serve a Napoleon rather than a Parliament. After thirty years as a republic, a strong royalist faction still exists in the French army.

"Should the Parliament attempt to depose the Emperor and destroy the whole fabric of government, the new régime might be overwhelmed with disaster. A large element of the population, especially the masses who had no share in the revolution, and who reverenced the Emperor as a God-given ruler, might be aroused to action by the reactionaries, and the Emperor, seeing the revolutionaries on one side attempting to go too far and in face of what would seem to be a popular demand for the restoration of the old régime, might—I will not say he would—yield to what he considered the wish of his subjects."

"What would specially be deemed an act on the part of the Parliament threatening such a catastrophe—a demand for the convocation of a Constituent Assembly?" was asked.

"Certainly that would be equivalent to an attempt to refer the form of government to the decision of the people. It would not be tolerated; it probably would result instantly in a summons to the Preobrajensky or other Guard regiments to disperse the Parliament with bayonets."

THE JEWISH QUESTION.

"And the Jews?" was asked.

"Recent developments," was the reply, "have undoubtedly prejudiced their position. The Emperor wanted to see justice done, and the public sympathized with their demand for equality before the law, but, unhappily, the attitude of the Jews since the Emperor's manifesto has alienated much of the sympathy for them. It is undeniable that they have been guilty of excesses everywhere; that they were on the firing line in the revolution, and no longer contented themselves by asking for equality with the Russians, but insisted on the complete downfall of the Government. This result provoked a hostile sentiment among the Russian people."

Count Witte's steadfast friendship for the Jews has subjected him to constant attacks. His enemies have accused him of being a Jew, of being bought by the Jews, &c. When he discovered the anti-Semitic agitation he came to the front and nipped it in the bud; and he is now issuing daily telegraphic instructions wherever there is the slightest indication of Jew-baiting.

"Of course, it is possible that slight anti-Semitic manifestations will occur during Easter, but as long as Count Witte is Premier massacres are impossible. Nevertheless, in the presence of this state of feeling, the Government cannot assume the responsibility for promulgating a law of equality; the Parliament itself must decide the question of the status of the Jews.

"The most important question, however, and the one on which the future of the country and its prosperity depend, is the adoption of some method for satisfying the land hunger of the peasants, who comprise 80 per cent. of Russia's immense poulation."

In conclusion, speaking of the health of the Premier, The Associated Press was given to understand that Count Witte is almost on the verge of a breakdown. He has been under a constant strain since the Portsmouth Conference, and the personage quoted said that he knew Count Witte would have been glad to relinquish his difficult and thankless post long ago, but that he had stuck to his desk, sometimes when so ill that a man of less will power would have taken to his bed, as he had determined if possible to see the Emperor and the country through the crisis.

A MARCH WIND GAMBLE

And the Exposure of a Junior Get-Rich-Quick Speculator in Wall Street.

The latter part of March going out like a lion because his tail was not twisted by departing February has made "chucking pennies" a tame sport to the messenger boys in Wall Street. The spirit of speculation, induced by youthful imitation of elders, has led them to invent a new game of chance. The stakes are appropriately high. No boy is admitted to the game who will not risk a quarter of a dollar.

The game is played as follows: Having deposited their quarters in a stakeholder's hands, at a given signal the lads line up on the curb. At another they toss their caps in the air. Some are carried high by the March winds. The cap dropping nearest to the opposite curb is that of the winner of the pot.

There were few disputes when the game was at its height on Friday afternoon. Most of the players belonged to one or the other of the companies which furnish messengers and identify them by the numbers on their caps rather than by the freckles on their faces. Trouble began when a rather big boy joined the game.

He won three times in succession, although he seemed to throw his cap to the breezes in the same way as the others. Watching him with ferret eyes was a cripple boy, who sells newspapers and is a friend of the messengers.

"Say," he said to a boy called "Shorty," "I seen him when takin' papes to the printers. He's a printer's devil. Bet he's got a slug or two in his hat."

"Shorty" passed the tip to his friends. Their caps were still circling the air when they pounced upon the broken derby of the newcomer. It had dropped within an inch of the curb. Within the band were two lead "slugs." Then the young gamblers pounced on its owner, and when he fled he was minus hat and plus two black eyes.

"Shorty" borrowing a cap from one of the others tossed it high with the wind, so that it caught an upper current of air that circled it about and then brought it down close to the curb line.

"Fellers," he said, "I ain't a-goin' to live long enough to be a financier. Dat newsy is goin' to be. He watched the way them hats behaved and learned the trick. But that printer's devil, he won't be no financier. He'll be head of a get-rich-quick scheme, and step in line, widout no band, wid er uniformed company, includin' them insurers, and der yaller dog."

BABY ADVICE IN A CAR.

Old Man Got It, 5-Year-Old Gave It, Mother Said, "Shut Up."

A benevolent-looking old man clung to a strap in a crowded Broadway car bound uptown Saturday afternoon. In a corner seat in front of him huddled a weak-looking little woman who clasped a baby to her breast. Beside her sat another child, a girl perhaps 5 years old, who seemed to be attracted by the old man's kindly face, for she gazed at him and the baby with her bright, intelligent eyes opened wide. He smiled at her interest and said to her:

"My! What a nice baby! Just such a one as I was looking for. I am going to take it."

"You can't," declared the little girl, quickly. "She's my sister."

"What! Won't you give her to me?"

"No, I won't."

"But," he insisted, and there was real wistfulness in his tones, "I haven't a baby in my home."

"Then write to God. He'll send you one," said the child, confidently.

The old man laughed. So did the other passengers. But the mother evidently scented blasphemy.

"Tillie," said she, "shut up and behave yourself!"

SERVICE AT THE VENDOME.

Dr. Warren Conducted It and Many Strangers Were Present.

The Rev. Dr. Henry M. Warren, the hotel chaplain, held services last night in the Hotel Vendome, Broadway and Forty-first Street. His meetings are mainly for strangers in the city, and there were many of them in his audience last night. The hotel orchestra furnished music.

The motto of the meeting, as written on the programme, was: "The Lord Preserveth the Strangers." Besides hymns and prayers and a non-sectarian talk by Dr. Warren, there were several musical numbers, including Alletsen's "The Lord Is My Light"; a vocal solo, by Miss Marie Dax; Adams's "Holy City," a vocal solo, by Countess von Boos-Farrar, and a violin solo by Enos Johnson.

The next meeting will be held on the evening of April 1 at the Hotel Marie Antoinette.

Paris Millinery.

ORIGINAL CONCEPTIONS FROM SUCH WORLD-FAMOUS ATELIERS AS REBOUX, GORGETTE, GERMAIN, MAISON LEWIS, ESTHER MEYER, PAUL VIROT ET BERTHA.

EACH DAY adds to our Easter exposition new and distinctive conceptions of the master designers of European fashion centers.

These are copied with equal skill and attention to detail by our OWN expert designers as rapidly as they are received.

IT IS INTERESTING TO NOTE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THEIR PRICES AND THOSE OF THEIR ADAPTATIONS, WHICH IS MATERIALLY IN YOUR FAVOR.

This difference does not in any manner detract from the daintiness and exclusiveness of the copies.

Paris women of fashion pay no more for the originals than you are asked to pay for the adaptations, and value them no more highly. Fully one-half of the cost of a Paris hat is to cover the duty incurred in landing it in this country.

We should like to have you inspect our showing before selecting your Spring millinery and compare the product of the genius of our own designers with the creations from abroad.

INTERESTED REALTY MEN.

The Times's Supplement Widely Discussed and Generously Praised.

The real estate supplement published with yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES was the subject of generous praise among real estate men.

The opinion was very generally expressed that it covered its particular field more comprehensively than had any publication in the past, and that it contained many features of interest, not only to the professional real estate speculator, but also to the owner and small investor.

Its general articles dealt fully with the various phases of the real estate situation in the metropolitan district, and its special articles, notably the one embodying the views of Felix Isman of Philadelphia on New York real estate methods, furnished many topics for discussion among operators and brokers.

NOT A BIBLICAL PAIR.

The Circus Lion and Lamb Lay Not Down Together a Single Bit.

Tody Hamilton, press agent for the Barnum & Bailey Circus, officially reports that the millennium has been considerably deferred. There was a fight in his animal family yesterday between the lion and a lamb.

Now, to maintain the natural balance of things, Mr. Hamilton realizes that he ought to be able to report that the lion vanquished the lamb with ease. Alas! the truth, to which he is unalterably wedded, compels him to say that the lamb almost stove in the ribs of the lion. In an aside he whispers that the "lamb" was actually a formidable ram, called Billy Lun. The lion's name is Georgia.

Georgia and Billy Lun came over from London on the liner Minneapolis several weeks ago. With them came the legend that they literally fulfilled the Bible prophecy—that this King of Beasts calmly lay down beside the lamb; that both had been friends since youth—had eaten off the same platter, had gone to sleep in the same cage, their noses touching. The story was tested at Bridgeport. Billy Lun showed his affection by butting Georgia vigorously in the ribs. They were promptly separated. The affection of the pair was tested again on Saturday; the result was the same. The lamb simply couldn't be peaceful. Yesterday the two were put together again. The lamb behaved unkindly again and went at Georgia. Their Zulu keeper, Gebuza Munga, separated them. According to his official judgment, Billy Lun had the best of it, having got in some solar plexus blows with his head and hoofs on the lion, while the latter was successful only in tearing off a handful or two of wool from Billy Lun.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., ON WEALTH

Not to be Put Before God, but All Right as a Goal for the Ambitious.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., apologized yesterday to the members of his Bible class for having monopolized all the time of the Sunday hour heretofore, and promised never to do so again, unless his subject should be such that discussion of it would not be practical.

"It is better," he said, "that we have a general discussion, and as many of us as possible express our views."

Then Mr. Rockefeller raised a question calculated to give the members opportunity for discussion. He took up the Ten Commandments, and after dividing them into the first five as relating to man's obligations to God and the second five as relating to man's obligation to his neighbor, he said:

"We are so in the habit of following and obeying most of the Commandments that it is useless to take them up. Let us take the First and Fourth Commandments. Let us now consider the First Commandment, and see if we worship only one God. Many of us give our first thought to our pleasures, and it is very frequently the case to-day that our first thought is for worldly possessions. A stranger coming here would say that the God of New York was the God of Wealth. When we think of pleasure or of wealth before we think of God, then we violate the First Commandment.

"I do not mean to say that we should not be moved by ambition or be given to innocent pleasure, but I mean to say that when we put God second to these aims, we are then not worshipping Him as we should.

"When the rich young man was told to go and give all his possessions to the poor, it was because Christ realized that the rich young man was thinking first of his wealth and then of God, and violating the First Commandment.

"In the consideration of the Fourth Commandment, let us try to discover what is the proper way to observe the Sabbath. How far are we justified in violating the restrictions put down in that commandment?"

Several discussed Sabbath observance. Then Mr. Rockefeller said:

"The subject is one that should give rise to general and helpful discussion. Is it right for me to play golf, to ride a bicycle, or go to the country on Sunday? That is what we want to know. We are here seeking truth. Let us think it over during the week and next Sunday be prepared with our views. Then we may reach a just conclusion."

SINGLE TAX TALK IN CHURCH.

Henry George Expounds His Theories Before Baptist Congregation.

Henry George expounded Single Tax theories to an audience of about 300 persons in the Baptist Church of the Epiphany, at Madison Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street, yesterday afternoon. He spoke of the advance in the price of alcohol through the tax upon it, holding that its real value per gallon was about 80 cents, and the tax on it $2.10.

In trying to show that the value of land rose without any effort on the part of the owner, Mr. George asked the Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, the pastor of the church, to tell the value of the land on which the church stands when bought and now.

"It was bought at $80,000 about twenty years ago," replied Dr. Peters. "We would refuse $400,000 for it now."

When Mr. George had finished his talk a man in the audience rose to ask if Mr. George did not think it was dangerous to make a radical change is our system of government. "We have done pretty well," the man said. "Would not a radical change, like the adoption of the Single Tax theories, lead to dangerous disturbances?"

"The Single Tax is a theory of justice, and justice cannot come too soon to suit me," was Mr. George's reply.

DR. PETERS ON THE SUFFRAGE

The Clergyman Is Against Extending the Ballot to Women.

The Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters of the Baptist Church of the Epiphany, Madison Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street, preached the second of a series of sermons upon "The Duties and Responsibilities of Women" yesterday morning. Dr. Peters expressed himself strongly against the granting of the ballot to women, and said that to give women the right to vote would mean a change in the life of woman equal to a revolution. Said Dr. Peters:

"This agitation in our time of giving women an equal chance with men and equal pay for like services if they do the work as well as the men—that is an act of justice and common humanity; but when the question is raised as to the ballot for woman as a cure for wrongs we find that that will be impossible. If woman turns politician, would man look up to her with homage, with chivalry? When the spirit of chivalry, with its generous loyalty to the sex, is gone the glory of the Republic will be extinguished forever. Victoria the mother was higher than Victoria the Queen."

To be Franklin Orator in Paris.

PHILADELPHIA, March 25.—Prof. Albert H. Smyth of the Boys' High School, this city, has been designated by President Roosevelt to make the speech on behalf of the United States at the Franklin Bi-Centenary exercises which will be held in Paris on April 20 in the Trocadero. Charles Emory Smith, who was originally selected to deliver the oration, found it impossible to go abroad at the time fixed for the exercises.

CUMMINS SAYS ELKINS IS A RAILWAY SENATOR

Reiterates His Charges in a Letter to the West Virginian.

TO CONTINUE DENUNCIATION

Not Sorry Now, Because He Thinks Elkins Has Interfered in the Politics of Iowa.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 25.—Gov. Cummins has mailed to Senator Elkins of West Virginia a reply to the Senator's letter, in which he criticised statements made by the Governor in speeches to the voters of Iowa regarding his examination before the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce, when it had under consideration the Railway Rate bill.

The Governor sets forth that the Senator accuses him of falsehood in declaring that his cross-examination was hostile; that an attorney of the railway companies sat at the right of Senator Elkins during the examination; that Senator Elkins appeared to be in communication and sympathy with the attorney, and that the attorney handed to Senator Elkins questions to be asked the Governor.

"If," says the Governor in his letter, "you understand your duties and obligations as Chairman of a legislative committee to be similar to those of an advocate, I have no criticism to make of your conduct, except to say that you were on the side of the railway instead of the side of the people.

"I have thought, however, that as Chairman of such a committee your duties and obligations were more nearly like those of a Judge, namely, to hear both sides patiently, without bias or prejudice, and then to decide impartially without fear or favor. You heard patiently, but it was clearly apparent in your cross-examination that you had decided the case in favor of the railroads and were determined to shatter any evidence if you could.

"The cross-examination shows conclusively that you had made up your mind that the proposed authority ought not to be given to the Inter-State Commerce Commission, and that the power sought to be given was unnecessary, dangerous, and filled with disaster to commerce. It was from beginning to end just such a cross-examination as an attorney for the railway companies would have conducted, and it was unseemly for you to assume that attitude.

"The scene in your committee room is sharply stamped on my memory, and it is impossible that I can be mistaken about it. Sitting squarely at your right hand, just a trifle behind you, sat a gentleman who, as I was afterward informed, is ex-Senator Faulkner. I inquired what relation he bore to the investigation, and I was told that he was an employe of the railway companies to resist the proposed law.

"I do not know whether the other Senators saw him or not, for their faces were turned toward me, and therefore away from him, but I do know that you saw him, first, because he was so close to you that you could not turn your head without seeing him; second, because you were in conversation with him a part of the time; third, because I saw him, with his hand on your shoulder, pass to you questions, which you read and then put to me.

"There can be no mistake about this, for my senses were as alert just then as human faculties can be.

"You may believe that an investigation carried on in this manner is in accordance with fairness and decency. I do not. You may continue in your belief if you like, but I shall continue in my denunciation.

"It appears to me that if you propose to assail all persons and papers and magazines that have admitted your loyalty to the railroads and questioned your fidelity to the people, you should give some attention to the attacks that come from points nearer Washington than Iowa.

"The truth is, Senator, that you have fairly established the reputation of standing for the railroads in the United States Senate. It is most unfortunate that any senator should acquire such a reputation among the people of the country.

"It is in the highest degree important that the body of which you are a member shall enjoy the fullest public confidence. The gravest problems which confront us are those which relate to the regulation and restriction of corporate power. These problems will not be successfully solved by those whose lives have been so molded by corporate thought and corporate influence that they instinctively turn to corporation officers and managers for information and guidance.

"It is with profound regret that I have condemned your course, but my regret disappears and another feeling takes its place when I observe that you are not only persisting in your indefensible attitude, but are endeavoring to reach over a thousand miles of space and advise the Republican voters of Iowa how to select a Governor.

"The burden is too heavy for you; you cannot lift it. The task is too great for you; you cannot accomplish it."

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Senator Elkins said this evening that he had not yet received the reply of Gov. Cummins to his recent letter. He was much interested in what he was told of its substance and laughed at the reiteration of the charge that he stands in the Senate as the friend of railroads.

"What can a man say further in response to a thing so foolish?" he said. "Now, as a matter of fact, I am going to meet that charge presently in the Senate. I have not yet spoken on the rate bill, but I shall do so soon.

"I shall say in my speech that if I were to be governed by my personal interests I should be all against the railroads. I am concerned in a large coal and coke business, and my interests in that are ten times as great as my interests in railroads, all of which are in my own State. As a shipper I am constantly in contentions and difficulties with the railroads, trying to fight my way out by connecting lines to the trunk lines. The mere statement of my personal interests ought to be sufficient to meet this iterated and reiterated charge.

"Take the case of the Tillman resolution. It was the most drastic resolution I ever saw or heard of. But it was held by our committee only long enough to make sure that it was in proper form, considerably less than an hour. Then it was reported unanimously, and immediately passed by the Senate unanimously. That should have some weight in counteracting this false impression.

"With regard to Cummins and all other comers, I have merely to say that I want to be fair to the railroads, but I believe they should be punished for doing wrong just as much as any other wrong-doer. That was my attitude when I framed the Elkins law, and it is my attitude now. Any of the numerous railroad men who vainly submitted provisions they desired to have incorporated in that law, can speak about that attitude."

Boy Killed a Valuable Hound.

Special to The New York Times.

FISHKILL LANDING, N. Y., March 25.—Mrs. Henry Clay Kelley of the Howland place, near here, is mourning the loss of a Russian wolf hound which was killed yesterday by a boy who resides near her place. Several of her greyhounds, frisking about their kennel, playfully chased a dog which was intruding. The puppy joined in the fun, and went on adjoining property, where the boy shot it. The dog, which was valued at $3,000, was the only son ever sold of champion sire Elstri and champion dam Sorva, which were bred by a brother of the Czar of Russia and were purchased by J. B. Thomas, Jr., of New York.

IN MISS ANTHONY'S MEMORY.

300 Women and William M. Ivins Celebrate Her Achievements.

Over three hundred women gathered in the Hudson Theatre yesterday afternoon to honor the memory of Susan B. Anthony. On the platform was one man, William M. Ivins, the recently defeated candidate for Mayor, who read a paper on "Miss Susan B. Anthony, the Reformer."

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the presiding officer, said that there had been no human oppression in the world that had not received Miss Anthony's opposition. The women's suffrage movement had really had its inception with her.

Ella A. Boole said that Miss Anthony had been so prominently connected with other and later reforms that her work in the temperance movement had been lost sight of, but in the formation of the Women's Christian Temperance Union Miss Anthony had had much to do.

Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake, who had been associated for many years with Miss Anthony in her work, told of the time Miss Anthony had been arrested for voting, many years ago, at an election in Rochester, her home. Although the Judge took the case out of the jury's hands and fined Miss Anthony $100, she never paid the fine. She had not been committed to jail upon its non-payment, and years later President Grant pardoned her, Mrs. Blake said.

Mrs. Charlotte Wilbour, Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, and Anna Garlin Spencer also spoke.

Mr. Ivins said that Miss Anthony had been one of the world's greatest good women. Not a woman in history could compare with her in real achievements, he declared.

A 'LONGSHOREMEN'S REST.

Church Temperance Society to Found One on Squirrel Inn Lines.

Because of a letter written to Robert Graham, secretary of the Church Temperance Society, by a 'longshoreman who had heard of the Squirrel Inn in the Bowery, there is soon to be established a "'Longshoreman's Rest" in West Street, near Bank or Christopher Street. The letter detailed the troubles of the stevedore class generally, and told of difficulties under which they have to work, and particularly of the temptations there are toward overindulgence in liquor.

One man high up in shipping interests told the society officers that the 'longshoremen are "pawned up to the eyes with the saloonkeepers," and that something ought to be done for them to offset the work of the cheap grogshops of the shipping districts. There are some four thousand 'longshoremen in New York, and at least 500 of them are to be found daily along West Street.

The women of the Church Temperance Society's auxiliary have undertaken the work. There is to be established a general loafing room for the 'longshoremen as a starter, with plenty of reading matter suitable to the needs of the men.

FLED WITH THE COATS.

Mr. Meyer's Guests Chased Steiner and Recovered All but One.

After a lively chase through the streets of the upper east side, a man who described himself as Frank Steiner of 565 Second Avenue, was locked up in the East Eighty-eighth Street Station on a charge of burglary. When caught by Policeman Gunther he had in his possession, the police allege, half a dozen overcoats, while more were strewn in his wake.

Christian Meyer, of 345 East Eighty-sixth Street, gave a dinner party to about fifteen men friends at his home last night. After the dinner all adjourned to the parlors upstairs. A few minutes later they heard a noise in the lower hallway, and saw a man darting out with every coat that hung on the rack in the hall.

All hands gave chase. The fugitive, seeing that his pursuers were steadily gaining, dropped some of the overcoats to lighten his burden.

Policeman Gunther overhauled Steiner and held him until the diners came up. Every one in the party, except Dr. Louis Wouthman, recovered his overcoat. The physician's coat could not be found.

DOCTOR OPERATED ON.

His Father and Brother Treat Him Successfully for Appendicitis.

Dr. J. M. Pilcher, head of the Fourth Medical Division in Bellevue Hospital, was operated on yesterday at the hospital for appendicitis. His father, Dr. Lewis M. Pilcher of 386 Grand Avenue, Brooklyn, and his brother, Dr. Paul M. Pilcher, performed the operation. It was successful.

Carnegie Aids Stetson University.

DELAND, Fla., March 25.—Andrew Carnegie has consented to give to Stetson University a library building provided that the university raises a sum for its maintenance. It is expected that a portion of the $100,000 offered to the university by Mr. Stetson before his death, and which Mrs. Stetson has promised to give, will be used for the endowment in order that Mr. Carnegie's offer can be accepted.

Falls Dying in the Street.

While walking in Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Eugenia L. I. Munro of 253 Sixth Avenue, that borough, had an attack of heart disease. Her daughter Adelaide, who was with her, helped her into a drug store at Clinton Street and an ambulance surgeon was called, but she died before the surgeon arrived. She was 63 years old, and was the wife of Peter Munro, a school teacher.

Theatrical Man Arrested.

Eugene Wellington, a well-known theatrical man, formerly manager of the Gotham Theatre in East 125th Street, was arrested at 125th Street and Third Avenue last night on a warrant on a charge of defrauding Samuel A. Scribner, his employer, out of about $2,000. Scribner complained that Wellington had collected the money for him and had subsequently turned in false receipts.

PHYSICIANS ATTACK BILL OF OSTEOPATHS

Will Concentrate to Prevent Action by the Legislature.

SAY THE MEASURE IS VAGUE

Recognizes Schools of Osteopathy—These Are Ridiculed by Committee of Doctors.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 25.—Physicians, allopathic and homeopathic, of the State will this week put forth every effort to block the plans of the osteopaths, who are becoming more confident that legislation in their interests will surely be enacted this session.

The osteopaths' desires are summed up in the bill introduced by Senator Hinman. To keep it in committee or cause it to be defeated if it comes out on the floor the whole medical fraternity has joined in an attack on the bill and osteopaths in general. The substance will be put before Senators and Assemblymen.

"The Hinman Osteopathy bill is specious and misleading, and contradicts itself flagrantly," says the Committee on Legislation of the State Medical Society, Dr. Ernest Wende, Dr. A. G. Bennett, and Dr. William C. Krause.

"Under Section 6 of the bill all that practicing osteopaths need to show is that they are graduates of a school of osteopathy, &c., requiring courses of study of two years or longer, with an actual attendance of not less than twenty months, and which now requires a course of not less than three full years of at least nine months each of any three different calendar years, and requiring thorough study in anatomy, physiology, &c., which facts are to be shown by their diplomas and affidavits.

"It is impossible to tell from the reading of this ambiguous section whether the school must be one now requiring a thorough study in anatomy, physiology, &c., or a school which did require these subjects at the time when the applicant was graduated. The strange use of 'requiring' and 'required' makes the object of this section thoroughly obscure.

"Three facts, however, are clear: The applicant need not be a resident of this State, nor a citizen of the United States, nor a person of full age; he need not show that he has ever studied anatomy and the other medical subjects mentioned. All that he is required to show is that he is a graduate of a regularly conducted school, having a two years' course, and which now has a three years' course. The school need not be one approved by the Regents. Any graduate of any regularly conducted school must be licensed on the recommendation of the examining board, provided the school has a two years' course and now has a three years' course.

"Under these various standards the whole question is whether a man has been graduated from any regularly conducted school of osteopathy. What are the standards maintained by these various schools of osteopathy? The Atlantic School of Osteopathy at Buffalo was a leading institution, and during its entire career graduated about 188 students. During the Summer of 1905 it was closed up and driven out of the State by a criminal prosecution, instituted by the Board of Regents. The school has since been declared in an action of law to have been illegal and unlawful.

"The advertisement of a large school at Kirksville, which is a leading American school, shows that in 1892 the Faculty consisted of only one man, the founder; the equipment a small room in a college, and the student body half a dozen men and women. The first class graduate there was graduated in 1894, so that the oldest living graduate of an 'osteopathic institution of learning' has not been practicing twelve years.

"One virtue claimed for the bill is that in any medical subjects applicants must pass the same examination which is prescribed for medical students. A close reading of Section 7 shows that this is not the case. That section, which is loosely copied from the public health law, provides that all the questions to be asked by the Regents must be taken from the list of questions submitted by the Board of Osteopathic Examiners. It further provides that in medical subjects these questions are to be the same as for candidates for license to practice medicine. This is an impossibility, for if the questions are to be taken from the questions submitted by the osteopathic examiners they cannot be the same questions which are proper for the medical examiners."

Fellowship in Serum Pathology.

Dr. Benjamin Taylor Terry of Columbia University, it was announced yesterday, has offered Indiana University an endowment for pathological research. The field of research is to be limited to the general subject of serum pathology. The endowment is to take the form of a research fellowship paying $750 per year.

JEROME PARK HOUSE BURNS.

Old Club Structure, in Centre of Reservoir Site, Afire at Midnight.

What a score of years ago was famous as the Club House at the Old Jerome Park Race Track in the Bronx was destroyed by fire at midnight last night. The building, a three-story frame structure, housed the leading racing and sporting people of two decades ago and it was at this place, at the old famous Jerome Park, since superseded by Morris Park, and still again by the Belmont track, that the well known persons of the 80's congregated.

After the closing of Jerome Park the building was unoccupied for several years, but was obtained by the city when the work of building the Jerome Park Reservoir was undertaken nine years ago. The building was almost in the centre of what will be the reservoir, and when the firemen responded to an alarm they were stopped by the walls of the reservoir and had to wait a long distance away and watch the building burn.

Italian laborers had occupied the building since the reservoir work began. They lost their effects, but no one was injured.

THE BIG STORE A CITY IN ITSELF

"MEET ME AT THE FOUNTAIN"
SIEGEL COOPER CO.
NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER STORE
J. B. GREENHUT, PRESIDENT.

SIXTH AVE, 18TH AND 19TH STREETS NEW YORK

The Public Has Given Its Verdict--
"This Is the Best Millinery In New York."

AS merchants, we must judge ourselves, not on what we think of ourselves, but by what our public thinks of us. It would be of little use to prepare a millinery showing that tickled our own fancy if the public looked at it—and passed on.

We have, for several years, done (as we are told and believe) the largest millinery business in this city. It means something, therefore, when our biggest previous figures have been beaten out of sight this early in the season by the sales from our present showing.

It means that our effort to give everything in beauty and style that is given by the leading milliners of the city—BUT AT PRICES WHICH NO OTHER MILLINERY STORE DARES TO QUOTE AT THIS SEASON—is appreciated by the public as it should be.

During the next two weeks the showing here will be at its largest and loveliest. It will furnish the best opportunity of the year to compare it, beauty for beauty and price for price, with stores that claim much for the first and certainly ask too much of the second.

Hats at $10, $12.50, $15, $22.50.

At these prices we show nearly eight hundred models. We present them as hats on which we are perfectly willing to rest our reputation of producing the handsomest millinery—the most novel and most beautiful—in this city. Whatever the prices that may be extorted elsewhere, THESE ARE THE BEST HATS THAT MONEY WILL BUY. In materials they go to the limit of costliness, employing the finest plumage, aigrettes and feather clusters possible to procure. Women desiring the finer classes of hats will find that these are matched only by productions in the most expensive shops at prices a half to three times GREATER.

(Siegel Cooper Store, 2d Floor, Front, 19th St.)

The Unequalled Showing at $5.

We show more than THREE THOUSAND hats—no two alike—at the one price, $5. In this line no one has disputed our pre-eminence in a half-dozen years. Values, as judged by prices prevailing elsewhere, from $7.50 to $10.

Newest Spring Silks.

All the best and most fashionable weaves, in prettiest colors and shades. Quality for quality and price for price, these values stand alone and are strictly representative of the Siegel Cooper Store.

Stocks are at their very best NOW. The more popular fabrics, like the Crepe de Chines, Messalines, Habutais, Pongees, Taffetas, Brocades and Peau de Cygnes, are shown in especially large assortments.

As for values, judge by these:

Crepe de Chines.
23-inch all silk Crepe de Chines, in all the leading street and evening shades; 60c. grade; to-day, per yard 39c

Messaline Pongees.
23 inches wide; beautiful, bright, all-silk goods; one of the most desirable fabrics in the market for Spring and Summer dresses; black and desirable street and evening shades 39c

Black Dress Taffetas.
36 inches wide, all pure and fine grade silk; a standard make that sells regularly for $1.00 yard; special price for to-day 69c

Lining Taffetas.
Extra fine quality Lining Taffetas, in black, white and all the leading shades; 58c. quality, per yard...... 63c

(Main Floor, Front, 19th St.)

Early Bargains in Shirt Waist Suits.

It is never too early to talk about any class of goods when you can emphasize the speech with such bargains as these. If we offered these suits in the middle of a December blizzard at these figures there would be enough far-sighted women to take all we have in this special lot.

The pictures will give a fair idea of the styles, being drawn, like all our style-pictures, from the actual garments.

There are three groups:

First Group: White Lawn Dresses, with blouse waist, yoke effect of Val. lace and embroidery; three-quarter sleeve and stylish new skirt. This is the gown worn by the girl with her hand to her head in the picture.

White Lawn Dresses, with beautifully embroidered fronts, with lace insertions. Three-quarter sleeves and plaited skirt. This is the gown worn by the girl picking blossoms from the tree.

Two other styles in white lawn, with pretty embroidered panels on front of waist and skirt. Choice of these four styles—they are all straight $4 suits, at our own regular prices; to-day at.............................. 2.50

Second Group: White mull dresses similar in style to that worn by the lady nearest you in the picture. Exquisitely trimmed with Val. lace in circle designs. Full length sleeves, trimmed to correspond. Full sweep skirt with flounce effect. This is a suit that will cost $7.50 in April. Price to-day.. $4.75

Third Group: Dresses of fine white mull in styles represented by the dress worn by the lady with the parasol. Beautifully trimmed with rose embroidery and Val. lace. Three-quarter sleeve. Skirt elaborately embroidered. One month from now this suit will sell at $13.50. Price to-day....... $8.75

Misses' Suits, $15. Value $22.50.

It's a suit for young women—14 to 18 years—and there isn't a Misses' Wear Store in the city of New York that wouldn't call it a good value at $22.50.

It's a jaunty, graceful, sensible suit—distinctive without being conspicuous—that is to say, it's good style and perfect taste.

The material is a first-class quality of chiffon Panama cloth. The general effect can be seen from the illustration. The trimming is of braid, with inlaying of taffeta in collar and cuffs. Jacket is satin lined throughout. Silk vest; circular skirt with girdle. All the Spring colors to choose among.

Colorings at this same price—$15.

C/B a la Spirite Corsets.

New Spring Models.

All the new Spring models of this famous and popular make are here. They can best be described in the single phrase, "A fit for every figure in a corset that will last."

This make is perhaps alone in the honor of being praised with equal enthusiasm by both slender and stout women. That speaks of scientific design and perfect fit as nothing else can.

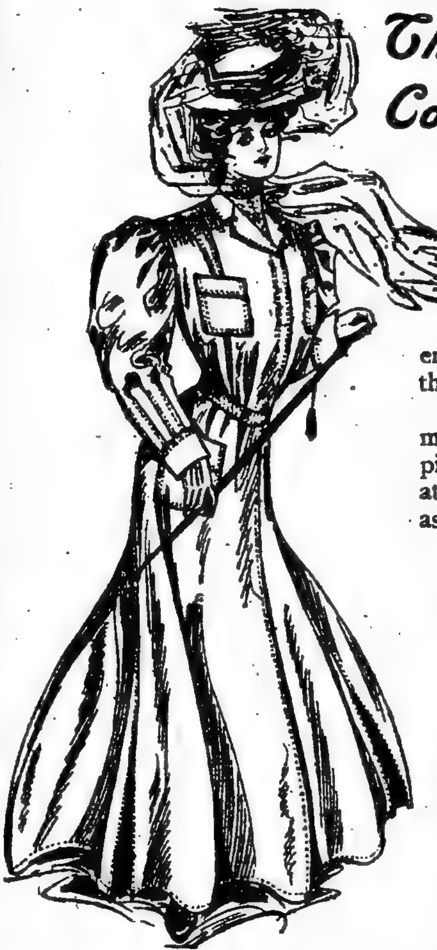
Prices, $1, $1.50, $1.75, $2.50 and up to $4.50.

The workmanship of this make needs little comment—it has been famous for years. Materials are fine batiste and long-wearing coutil, with elaborate trimmings of lace and ribbon.

In fitting these and other corsets we give you all the benefit of suggestions from expert corsetieres, whose advice as to the height of bust and style of hip in the corset you should wear is founded on long experience and training.

There can be no better foundation for the Easter gown than the C-B a la Spirite Corset.

(Siegel Cooper Store, Second Floor, Centre, 19th St.)



This Rainproof Coat $12.75

A new style—exclusive with us so far. The style will doubtless be copied at once, but the price won't be—it's lower than most stores must pay themselves.

The picture shows the model as well as a newspaper picture can. It's a graceful, attractive and "fetching" style as well as

A Value That Can't Be Matched.

Made of the best quality "Garren-tead" rainproof worsted, in light gray, castor, olive, Oxford gray and black. Strapped, semi-fitting style; three box plaits at back; plaited sleeves, notch collar and roomy patch pockets.

(Siegel Cooper Store, 2d floor, 18th St.)

Women's Shoes Values $3.50 to $7

$1.90

These are sample shoes from a manufacturer who leads the country in footwear for women. Some of them would retail regularly at $3.50. But the overwhelming majority are shoes that we would be glad to have in our own stocks at $4, $5, $6 and $7 a pair.

All sizes are represented.

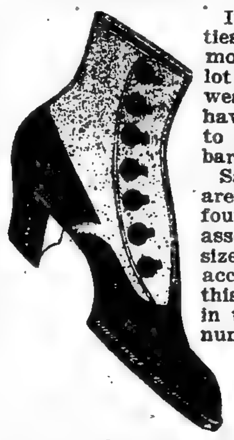
All the Correct Toes and Heels are given.

All the Leathers are here.



It's the daintiest, prettiest, most alluring lot of footwear that we have ever had to offer at a bargain price.

Sample shoes are not often found in a full assortment of sizes. We have accomplished this by filling in the missing numbers and widths from our own regular stock.

We illustrate three of the styles—three out of fully twenty that you will find!

It's the Spring chance in fine footwear at the price.............. $1.90

HADLEY SAYS TRUSTS CAN NOW BE CURBED

No Need of Hysteria, Socialism, or Public Ownership.

HIGHEST COURT POINTS A WAY

Standard Oil Lawyers Concede That There Will Now Be Little Dispute Over Facts in Missouri Case.

Sunday was hardly a day of rest for Attorney General Hadley of Missouri after the success of his effort to prove that the ownership of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and the Republic Oil Company rests in the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. From the time he got up in the morning till he retired last night, there were callers at his hotel who insisted on seeing him. They came to offer congratulations and suggestions as to the part he ought to play in attacking other trusts.

It was not until afternoon that Mr. Hadley slipped away for a breath of fresh air. He took an automobile trip through Central Park with Frank Hagerman, the Standard Oil lawyer from Kansas City; Judge Johnson, the legal representative of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, and Rush Lake, Missouri's Assistant Attorney General. When he returned to the hotel he found a roomfull of persons waiting to meet him, and was kept busy until 7 o'clock, when he went to a dinner of the Pleiades Club.

Mr. Hagerman said that the Standard Oil offices at 26 Broadway were closed on Saturday afternoon, and he was therefore unable to say just how many of the papers, books, and memoranda asked for by Mr. Hadley could be produced.

"We will do the best we can," he said, "as we are not minded to throw any obstacles in Mr. Hadley's way, but the chances are, I am afraid, that many of the documents which he desires are in Missouri."

It was explained by Mr. Hagerman and conceded by Judge Johnson and Judge Priest—who insist in the fine distinction that they are not the representatives of the Standard, but of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company—that there would be little dispute, from now on, as to facts. It will be conceded, for instance, when the issue is raised, that there is a division of trade territory in Missouri, just as the stock ownership question was conceded. The Standard Oil Company will contend, however, that the division is in no way unlawful, and that it is not in restriction of trade.

No Longer a Fight on Facts.

"From now on it is not a fight as to the facts," one of the attorneys said. "It is a fight as to the law."

This attorney was asked the purpose, in the formal admission of stock ownership by the Standard, of the stipulation as to materiality and relevancy. He did not deny that no appeal was possible, except to the Supreme Court of Missouri, which has already held that the matter of stock ownership is material, but said that this decision was by no means final, inasmuch as the court could, upon further consideration, reverse the ruling.

"That's just it," said Mr. Hadley. "The only chance they have is to get the Supreme Court of Missouri to reverse itself."

There is of course the opportunity of throwing the case into the Supreme Court of the United States, but this would have to be done on constitutional grounds, and stock ownership will not figure should such a step be taken.

"If I win my case," said Mr. Hadley, in answer to a question, "there are four remedies which may be applied by the Supreme Court of my State. It may render a decision of ouster and confiscation, taking over all the Standard properties, or it may render a decision of ouster alone, or of restricted ouster. Finally it may inflict a fine."

The Western prosecutor talked optimistically of everything and everybody.

"In the final analysis," he said, "law is simply an expression of the sentiment of the age to which it applies. There is plenty of law in the country now, and there is plenty of interest on the part of the public to insure its enforcement.

The Whole Situation Changed.

"Within the last few weeks the entire situation is changed in the handling of the industrial situation. The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Sugar Trust and the Tobacco Trust cases makes it possible for any public official charged with that duty to see to it that the trusts obey the law. He can make the trusts witnesses against themselves. No better illustration of the statement that law is the expression of the setniment of the age to which it applies could be found than this.

"Two years ago 99 lawyers out of 100, if the proposition had been submitted to them, would have unhesitatingly declared that a corporation could not be compelled to testify against itself—that it was entitled to the same personal privilege, under the Constitution, as the individual. The decision of the Supreme Court puts the corporation and the individual in entirely different positions before the law. It recognizes the sentiment of the age.

"When the Constitution was framed there were no great combinations which violated the law for their own purposes, throttled competition under the cloak of the law, and then sought refuge in the defense that they could not be compelled to testify against themselves. Just as soon, however, as the public awoke to the fact that the trusts were putting themselves above the very law which makes their existence possible, the Supreme Court steps in.

Can Force Trusts to Testify.

"It is now impossible for any public prosecutor to say that he is satisfied that such and such a trust is violating the law, but he can't prove it. Under this Supreme Court decision, which, to my mind, is one of the most important in the history of the country, he can force the trusts which are operating in defiance of the law to convict themselves. In the very nature of things, the trusts are creatures of the State, and as such are subject to the control of the State. The Supreme Court decision makes this perfectly plain, and if the laws are not enforced the people can put the blame where it belongs—on the oficials who fail to see to their enforcement.

"There is no need of hysteria, or Socialism, or municipal or public ownership. The people of this country are fully able to solve the problems which have arisen, and to solve them by the means ready at hand. All that has been needed is the arousing of sentiment. The awakening has come, and we will now see, in my honest opinion, the putting of the industrial combinations in their proper places."

"What about John D. Rockefeller?" Mr. Hadley was asked by a reporter. "Are you still pursuing him?"

"The subpoena is still out," Mr. Hadley replied. Then he said: "I have no objection to making this statement, but I wish that so much prominence had not been given to the Rockefeller matter. I am not in New York to harass or give immunity to Mr. Rockefeller or to anybody else. I am a plain lawyer, trying a plain law suit."

HADLEY AT PLEIADES CLUB.

He Says Lawyers and Judges Were Never More Upright.

Hadley night at the Pleiades Club proved to be one of the most rollicking in the history of that interesting organization. The big dining room of the Hotel Lafayette-Brevoort was filled to the doors with men and women who rose to their feet when the Attorney General from Missouri was introduced and gave him three cheers and a tiger. Then, to show that they meant it, they did it all over again.

It wasn't called Hadley Night on the souvenir menu, which was in the shape of a subpoena. The official title was "Lawyers' Night," but the man from the West was accepted as the embodiment of the profession. With Mr. Hadley came his assistant, Rush C. Lake, and his New York counsel, Henry Wollman. He occupied a seat at the guests' table, with Toastmaster Walter S. Logan, Maurice V. Samuels, Melvin H. Dalberg, Mrs. Dalberg, and Mrs. N. Archibald Shaw.

The toastmaster, in presenting him to the audience, told something of the part that lawyers have played in the history of the United States, and, dealing with the history of the Standard Oil inquiry, instituted by him, said that he had set an example to all men by doing his duty in simple style and without playing to the gallery.

Mr. Hadley complimented the Pleiades idea, denominating it a democracy of achievement, and then spoke briefly of the place occupied on the National stage by the legal profession.

"There can be no denying the fact," he said, "that the spirit of unrest is in the air, and that the people are wider awake than they have been for years. In the storm of denunciation which is sweeping over the country, the bench and bar have not been spared. I want to say to the world that there was never a time in the history of America when there were braver, more upright lawyers and Judges, than there are now.

"We may have no Marshall on bench to-day, but we have no Jeffreys. We may have no Erskine, but there are right in New York, the centre of industrial activity and achievement, members of the bar who for mentality, eloquence, and integrity are the equals of any advocates whose names are revered in the annals of the bar.

"In my very brief career I have been honored by the people of my State far beyond my desserts. I have had few honors, however, which are more acceptable to me than the one you have seen fit to bestow upon me by making me your guest. I meet you as a fellow-worker in the field of endeavor; as a fellow-believer in no rank save that which is won by achievement; as one who is ready to give praise to effort, and the laurel to success. I meet you in that democracy which knows no monopoly, and I pledge you the success of the Pleiades."

Consul General Uchida was another guest who was made much of. He had something to say of the different sphere occupied by woman in Japan, as compared with woman in America.

"In Japan," he said, "the wife is expected to obey her husband. In America the husband is expected to obey his wife. The presence of so many ladies here to-night emboldens me to make this statement."

Mrs. Uchida, who attended the dinner with her husband, led the applause which greeted this declaration.

BREAKFAST FOR 13.7 CENTS.

Teachers College Girls Provide a Fine Meal at Little Cost.

Thirteen and seventh-tenth cents is all one need pay hereafter for a good breakfast consisting of baked apples, cereal, broiled haddock, cornmeal muffins, and coffee. The discovery was made last week by the girls of Teachers College who are preparing themselves for the tasks of the housewife under the direction of the Domestic Science Department.

Experiments in preparing good food economically constitute an important part of their work, but nothing escapes them. When their two years' course is finished, the girls are fully competent to do all kinds of housework, from making tough fowls tender to curing cases of indigestion.

This is the way in which they provide a breakfast for four:

	Weight in ounces	Proteids	Carbohydrates	Fats	Cost
Baked apples	10	.04	1.42	.05	$.06
Sugar for same	2	—	2.00	—	.006
Cereal	3	.40	2.22	.42	.01
Cream for same	7 15-16	.19	.36	1.78	.073
Sugar for same	⅞	—	.87	—	.002
Broiled haddock	6 3-16	1.08	—	.02	.14
Butter for same	1½	.01	—	1.27	.03
Lemon (one)	—	—	—	—	.025
Cornmeal muffins	8	1.55	8.92	1.29	.097
Butter for same	1⅝	.02	—	1.38	.03
Coffee	3¼	—	—	—	.048
Cream for same	2⅞	.07	.13	.53	.025
Sugar for same	3⅞	—	3.87	—	.005
Total	51⅛	8.36	19.79	6.74	.551

The cost of the breakfast, it is explained, might have been reduced considerably if a less expensive article than haddock had been used.

The students are enthusiastic over their work and take great delight in exhibiting their handiwork.

"Do you learn how to darn and sew on buttons?" asked a brother from Columbia, who was inspecting some of the work.

"Darn! I guess not," retorted one of the girl students. "But you ought to taste the biscuits we make. They are simply delicious."

THOUSANDS IN THE PARKS.

Sunday Sunshine Helps to Banish Memory of Last Week's Shivers.

The taste of Winter that made New York shiver last week made yesterday the occasion for a general exodus to the parks and the fashionable avenues. Nor was Coney Island neglected, thousands taking the various routes there for an afternoon in the sunshine at the seashore.

The great parade, however, was on Fifth Avenue, so that in the afternoon it was like Easter Sunday morning when the churches have let out their congregations. There was no evidence of Lenten pennance in the procession up and down the avenue.

Multitudes went to Bronx Park, with its zoological and botanical gardens, and yet other thousands to Central Park. The main attraction there seemed to be the Museum of Art. There were busy times in the police station at the Arsenal, where seven lost youngsters had to be cared for. Only four of them knew their addresses. They were sent home and the other three were later claimed after they had been stuffed with candy by the reserves.

STABBED BY BOY BURGLARS.

Three Negro Lads Also Fire on Police When Detected.

CLEVELAND, March 25.—Three negro boys, Harry Freeman, Joseph Morris, and John Henderson, were arrested by the police here to-day on the charge of committing three burglaries and fatally stabbing a man.

The boys, according to the police, broke into two hardware stores and a meat market on Woodland Avenue, and, while coming out of the latter they saw passing Benjamin Levensberg, an old man, on his way home from work. One, without a word, plunged a stiletto in the man's abdomen.

The police say the boys confessed that they had started out on their raid pledged to kill anybody who interfered with their work. They thought Levensberg had seen them robbing the meat market, and that he would tell the police.

The boys were caught by the police while robbing the second hardware store. They opened fire when discovered, but their shots went wild.

OUR NEW BATTLESHIPS TO RIVAL DREADNOUGHT

Plans Ready for the South Carolina and Michigan.

WILL ASK FOR BIDS SOON

Big Fighters to Have Eight 12-Inch Guns Each—New Turret Construction Planned.

The plans for the great battleships South Carolina and Michigan have been completed by the Naval Board of Construction in Washington and will be mailed in a few days to shipbuilding yards throughout the country for bids. It has been exactly one year since Congress authorized these two ships, and it is certain that never before in the history of the country have plans for battleship construction been so carefully prepared as in the case of these vessels. They are to be the mightiest ever built in the United States and are expected, owing to the arrangements of their turrets, to be equal in practically every respect to Great Britain's Dreadnought, even though the latter ship is 2,500 tons heavier and carries more guns than they will carry.

First and most important are the armaments of the battleships. Eight great 12-inch guns will compose the main battery of each fighter. These guns will be arranged in turrets, two aft and two forward, these turrets to be so constructed that it will be possible to utilize all the guns in a broadside, port or starboard.

These turrets will be placed one behind the other, one pair in the bow and the other in the stern. They will be electrically driven, the arrangement in this respect being the most complete yet devised for manipulating turrets carrying guns of the greatest calibre.

Although it will be stated in the circular that will be sent to the shipbuilding yards that the ships must have a speed of eighteen and one-half knots, the Board of Construction expects that when they start over the Rockland course on their speed trials, two or three years hence, they will be able to make nineteen knots, with the power provided in the specifications.

It is also understood that the builders will be asked to put in bids for the equipment of the battleships with turbines. The Dreadnought is fitted with turbines, and should they prove successful in the case of that vessel when she goes on her trial trip there is little doubt that the South Carolina and the Michigan will be similarly equipped. As for the armor, it is certain that it will be the heaviest yet placed on an American ship.

The Dreadnought is seventy feet longer than the South Carolina and Michigan will be and will carry two more of the twelve-inch guns than they will, yet according to the experts in the American navy, that ship will be much more vulnerable than the United States vessels, her superstructure being much larger and her guns not being so well arranged as it is understood those of the Michigan class will be. The fact that these American vessels can use all of their great guns in a broadside is also considered an improvement over the English ship, and this fact alone makes them, according to men who should know, practically as powerful as the Dreadnought.

The bids will be opened in Washington June 2, next. That the competition between the yards will be unusually keen is certain, as several of them are about ready to deliver ships now in hand. Among the yards that are sure to bid are the Cramps at Philadelphia, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company at Newport News, Va., the Fore River Company in Massachusetts, and the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden.

WOULD HOLD PHILIPPINES.

Gen. Howard Tells Tract Society They Must Be Christianized.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The Washington meeting of the American Tract Society was held to-night in the Luther Place Memorial Church. Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court of the United States, Honorary Vice President, presided. Gen. O. O. Howard, President of the society, delivered the address, and the Rev. Juddson Swift, Field Secretary at New York, made a report.

Gen. Howard referred to "those who at present are clamoring for the United States to give up the Philippines," and said: "We cannot do so rash a thing until we have accomplished for these islands what Providence has intended us to do, namely, Christianize them. This was both the opportunity and mission of our country, and one of the most successful agents in this work was Christian literature."

In foreign lands the need of the hour, pointed out in the Secretary's report, is "Christian literature in the vernacular." There are over one million students in the schools of the East, and many times that number have gone out into active life.

"These young people must have Christian literature," the report suggests, "in order to meet their intelligent unbelief and lead them step by step into the Christian faith. Not less than $1,000,000 is now required to furnish the literature needed. The society's work is wholly dependent upon donations and legacies. The donations should be greatly increased to enable the society to perform the work waiting for accomplishment. An earnest appeal is made to both the Evangelical Churches and individuals for larger offerings."

MUNICIPAL ART SHOW.

Civic Art on a Grand Scale Exhibited in Drawings and Sketches.

Annual exhibitions on the part of the Municipal Art Society of New York, such as that which occupies the galleries of the Arts' Club, are rather recent affairs; they are intended to further the work of the society by encouraging a higher standard of artistic fitness in all municipal work—public parks, avenues, streets, buildings, statues, mural paintings—and show what is being done in other cities where the problems are easier to solve than they are here.

The various departments of the New York City Government have very generally aided this work, and the municipalities of other cities have been responsive. Here we have the largest and most important group of school buildings going up this year, that at Jamaica, in the Borough of Queens; for them the Board of Education sends large colored drawings, elevations, and bird's-eye views. The Aqueduct Commission lends a series of big photographs representing the Croton Dam, lately finished after many years' work. The Street Cleaning Department shows the designs for the new stables, incinerator, and covered dumps. The light from this combustion of city waste will be used to illuminate the Manhattan approaches to the Williamsburg Bridge.

This bridge is exhibited in the drawings of the architect H. Hornbostel, showing the entrances to the Subway. Proposed public baths and gymnasium for the tenement-house district may be seen in the bird's-eye views by Herbert M. Baer and George W. Jacoby, architects. Mr. Meuchardson exhibits an elaborate drawing of the large building at Long Island City which is to serve as a terminal for the ferry and the Long Island railways.

Local wall-painting of a semi-public sort is represented by C. Y. Turner's studies in color for mural work in the Waldorf-Astoria, Manhattan, and Martinique hotels, as well as in the De Witt Clinton High School.

Mural work elsewhere includes Blashfield's and Turner's decorations for the Court House in Baltimore and the former's designs for wall paintings in the Congressional Library, the State House at Minneapolis, the Citizen's Bank in Cleveland, &c. Other designs are by Robert V. V. Sewell, W. de Leftwich Dodge, and J. Mortimer Lichtenauer. Maitland Armstrong exhibits colored sketches for the stained-glass windows in the new St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University.

A novel exhibit consists of a group of pen-and-ink drawings of the city from the top of the Flatiron Building, drawn by Vernon Howe Bailey. Mural work is here in sketches by John La Farge, William B. Van Ingen, Francis Lathrop, Chester Loomis, Mrs. Ella Condie Lamb, and Bryson Borroughs.

Mr. Charles R. Lamb, the President of the society, has a group of large drawings which embody many of his original ideas for the circulation of crowds in congested portions of the city. Here is a perspective of Nassau Street with arcades and an upper promenade for pedestrians; also a footway passing diagonally northeast or northwest through the interior of a block between avenues; also a rearrangement of the car tracks at points like Herald Square and Columbus Circle, designed to avoid many of the switches and track crossings; also an arrangement of the passenger exits of the Brooklyn Bridge at the Manhattan end; likewise a plan for a co-operative kitchen in the centre of a city block.

This is a peculiar little show, with its architectural and other pottery, its sketches of monuments by J. J. Boyle, Israels & Harder, Piccirilli, Herbert Adams, C. J. Barnhorn, D. A. French, and other sculptors; about as different from other exhibitions as it could be. It is art on a big scale.

MOTORISTS CHEW TOBACCO.

Retail Dealer Thinks Snuff Also Might Be Good for Them.

One of the largest retail tobacco dealers in the United States, whose headquarters are in this city, said yesterday that the consumption of chewing tobacco has increased almost 50 per cent. in the last five years. He attributes this increase in no small measure to the automobile.

"You see," he explained, "it is impossible to enjoy a cigar or pipe while whizzing along in an automobile. Not only that, there is always danger of sparks or ashes from the lighted cigar or pipe getting into your own eyes or those of the persons sitting behind you in the automobile. As a result, the chewing of tobacco is becoming general among automobile enthusiasts and chauffeurs.

"If the snuff-taking custom of our Colonial days should ever be generally revived, the automobile fraternity may be responsible for it, as they are beginning to recognize that a sneeze is a good thing for a cold in the head or when the lungs or nostrils are filled with dust."

CHILD ADDRESSES VETERANS.

12-Year-Old Thanks Old Soldiers for Flag Given to Children.

Commander William M. Bates, on behalf of the U. S. Grant Post of the G. A. R., presented a handsome American flag to the children of the Industrial Home in South Third Street, Williamsburg, yesterday afternoon. Many of the school children are orphans, and all of them are very young. There was quite a stir among many of the old veterans who surrounded the flag as 12-year-old William Friedrich stepped from a group of boys and girls and, assuming a dignified attitude, delivered this speech:

"On behalf of the boys and girls of this school, I wish to thank you for the beautiful banner you have presented to us. Dearly as we love our country's flag, we prize this all the more because it is the gift of those soldiers who fought and bled to preserve it in all its beauty."

The boys and girls gave three cheers, and several of the veterans showed that they were affected.

CUSTOMS RUMMAGE SALE.

One on April 3 Will Offer Both Dry and Wet Goods.

The semi-annual rummage sale of unclaimed and abandoned goods imported through the New York Custom House will take place on April 3. The offerings comprise about every known line of merchandise and possess an appraised value exceeding $10,000.

Cigars, cigarettes, wines, liquors, and other alcoholic beverages form an important percentage of the lot, in addition to which there is a liberal assortment of dry goods. The Government does not vouch for the purity of the beverages, nor is the quality of the tobacco guaranteed, but representatives of the Treasury said yesterday there would be no trouble in disposing of every article on the long list. Anybody who cares to bid $25 can become the owner of 500 Cuban cigars (damaged) which an admirer sent to Collector Stranahan. It seems that, although the Collector was duly advised of the gift, he declined to take the cigars and pay accruing charges.

Intending purchasers may view the merchandise in the seizure room at the Appraiser's Warehouse on March 29 and 30.

Texas Pays Honor to James S. Hogg.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, March 25.—Memorial Day was observed throughout Texas today in honor of the late Gov. James S. Hogg, in accordance with the proclamation of Gov. Lanham. In Dallas the services were held in the Majestic Theatre, which was crowded. A eulogy was pronounced by ex-United States Senator Horace Chilton.

This Razor must pay for itself before You Pay me a Penny —and a Postal gets it. I Guarantee to Keep your Blades Sharp Forever Without Charge.

I am the man you hold personally responsible for every promise made in this advertisement.
P. C. SHERMAN.

WILL you let me send you a razor—without a cent deposit?

Then I will keep it sharp and keen for the rest of your life free.

That's my plan—my new plan of selling razors. No other razor makers in the world sell razors this way—because they can't—their razors won't stand it. Mine will—it's the way it's made.

Now, I offer you the only razor in the world that never takes a minute of your time to sharpen—and yet is always sharp.

I don't say "Send me the price of the razor, and if, after you have tried it, you find that it isn't all I claim, I will send your money back."—Not me.

On a "money back" proposition you may feel that there was some chance of not getting your money back if you wanted it—I won't let you feel that way about my razor.

I know my razor will satisfy you—I show my confidence by just sending my razor to any reliable party without a penny down.

Now, simply do this—Send me your name, occupation, home and business address—and in any manner that is convenient or agreeable to you introduce yourself to me.

I'll take all the risk and send, prepaid, a Sterling Safety Razor with 24 blades by express, or an Old Style Interchangeable Razor with 12 blades.

You see the Sterling Razor is so much better than any other razor that I can afford to send one without any payment or deposit.

When you have tested it 7 days, if you find it the finest and easiest shaving razor you ever used, keep it.

Then the razor must pay for itself—that's my new plan.

If the razor don't do all I say, then send it back at my expense and you're out nothing for you've paid me nothing and you owe me nothing.

You see the average man should be shaved at least three times a week—at 15c a shave that's 45c a week for shaving.

So, if you decide to keep the razor, all I ask you to pay me is what you'd pay the barber—45c a week.

Just send me at the end of each week what you'd have paid him for a few weeks until the razor is paid for.

That way I make the barber buy you the razor.

At that my razor doesn't take any more money to pay for itself than you would have to pay out of your own pocket for an ordinary razor.

And I go even farther.

I say to you, if after the 7 days' free trial you do decide to keep the razor and let it pay for itself—then I will see to it that you have no further razor expense for life.

Because I agree to keep your blades sharp forever—free.

With any other safety razor you are always paying out money because you must keep on paying for new blades or re-sharpening as long as you live.

But the Sterling won't cost you a cent to keep sharp because—

All you do is, send me 12 dull blades, at any time, with 10 cents to cover postage, and I return them to you perfectly sharp free of charge.

That's really "no honing and no stropping."

Did you ever hear of anything as clever as this in the razor line?

It's this way—the reason I can make this offer is because there's no razor in the world compared to mine.

My STERLING blades are made of the finest razor steel that money can buy—costs me twice as much as the steel used in any other razor blades.

And mine is the only razor on the market that is made of Sheffield steel—that is not a cold rolled steel.

With my careful, systematic process, each STERLING blade is hardened, tempered, ground and hand honed in oil and then hand stropped—so that my razor must hold an even edge.

And each of my STERLING blades must pass the SHERMAN test, the most rigid test to which a razor blade can be subjected.

No other razor blade could pass this test.

But I must make certain that the temper and cutting edge of every STERLING blade are perfect and lasting.

I cannot afford to pass any but faultless razor blades, because my razor is made to shave with, and not made to sell.

And because of all this I can afford—and am glad—to send you the razor free without any deposit but your name and address. Retailers sell the Sterling Razor for $5.00, but I am willing to send it to you and let it pay for itself.

Now—write me to-day, stating whether you wish the Safety or Old Style interchangeable, and let me send you the razor. State whether you wish to cut loose or medium, and whether your beard is wiry or fine. Don't send me any money—only a postal.

Remember the razor is yours for a week free—then either keep it and let it pay for itself with the guarantee that I must keep the blades sharp forever—free—or return it to P. C. Sherman, Pres., 281 Water St., New York City.

CORTELYOU'S BAN ON 52 FAKE MEDICAL CONCERNS

Hopes to Drive All Such Out of New York City.

BARS THEM FROM THE MAILS

Thirty Offices in Boston and Thirteen in Philadelphia Closed—Amazing Conditions Found.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Postmaster General Cortelyou has extended to the New York and Brooklyn Post Offices his crusade against the fake "medical office." He issued orders yesterday to the Postmasters at those two offices to refuse admission to the mails to the advertisements of fifty-two such concerns in New York City, and to refuse delivery of mail matter addressed to the fictitious names under which they are conducted.

The department has had its Inspectors at work in New York and Brooklyn for some time, and believes that practically all the fake offices are included in the orders issued. The Postmaster General is much gratified at the thoroughness of the work of the Inspectors, and believes that it will result in putting a stop to criminal work of this character in that city. The department regards it as practically certain that if these "doctor" offices can not use the mails or the press for the dissemination of their advertisements and literature they will be compelled to close up.

The action that has been taken at New York and Brooklyn is in line with the efforts made by Mr. Cortelyou in Boston and Philadelphia to enforce the law against this class of criminal concerns. In March of last year, after much work, evidence was obtained which enabled the department to act against about thirty concerns operating in Boston. The Postmaster was directed to refuse the delivery of mail to such parties, and the publishers of newspapers were advised that issues carrying their advertisements would not be admitted to the mails. The publishers immediately excluded all such advertisements.

After the department had succeeded in Boston, Inspectors were put at work in Philadelphia, and as the result evidence was obtained which, in September last, enabled the department to take action against some thirteen such illegal "medical offices."

The conditions developed under the department's investigation in all of these cities have been amazing. It was found that in a large number of instances those engaged in conducting the offices had criminal records and were "dope fiends." In Boston one of the concerns excluded was supposed to have been the office at which was committed the "suitcase murder," the victim being an actress named Susan Geary.

One of the "doctors" whom the department found identified with several of these "offices" in Boston was also connected with the Susan Geary case. The number of deaths that have been caused in these offices can never be known. The volume of business done by these concerns was large. It was said that the income of some ranged as high as $2,000 a week.

The Postmaster General entrusted the details of these investigations to Chief Post Office Inspector Vickery and Assistant Postmaster General Goodwin and their work has been thorough and effective.

Postmaster Willcox was asked last night if he knew of any further measures to be taken against the so-called "medical officers," and whether criminal proceedings were contemplated. He said that the Post Office Inspectors were at work continually on such cases, and that orders barring the mails to fake establishments were issued from time to time. He added: "I have not heard of this particular order, although it may arrive in the morning. I am not aware that any other steps have been taken."

HAD BURGLAR'S TOOLS.

New Boarder in Policeman's Flat and Two Others Arrested.

Ignorant that his host was a policeman, William Miles, 20 years old, hired a room last Tuesday in the flat of Policeman Burke, at 72 West Seventy-first Street. Mrs. Burke, according to her husband, found a burglar's kit in Miles's room Saturday when she was cleaning it. She avows there were "jimmies," skeleton keys, and a pocket battery lamp in the room.

Early yesterday morning Miles knocked at Burke's bedroom door, and when the policeman called to him to wait until he could get into his clothes, Miles and a man who was with him ran down the stairs to the street. Burke says that an hour later Miles returned to the house. He then arrested Miles.

In the West Side Court yesterday Miles was held for further examination, charged with carrying a revolver and having burglar's tools. He declared that the tools and the revolver had been given him by John Anderson, 18 years old, of 358 West Fifty-first Street.

Burke says that Miles told him he was to have met Anderson and two other men at the house yesterday afternoon. Burke stayed at home waiting for the arrival of Miles's friends. Two men inquired for Miles at the house late in the afternoon. Burke promptly arrested them. One of them was Anderson. The other said he was Thomas Graham, 25 years old, of 105 West Sixtieth Street. Both were taken to the West 100th Street Station. The police say they found a revolver on Anderson. He was held for having it, and Graham was detained on suspicion.

Both Anderson and Graham denied that they had any knowledge of the burglar's tools, and Anderson persisted in his declaration that he had not given them to Miles.

So numerous have been the burglaries in the precinct lately that the police immediately determined to question the three prisoners closely.

DRUGGIST'S HEAVY PENALTY.

To Appeal Against Sentence in Wood Alcohol Poison Case.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., March 25.—An appeal to the Supreme Court of Vermont is to be taken in behalf of Almon White, a Richford druggist, who was yesterday found guilty of the illegal sale of liquor in connection with the so-called wood alcohol poisoning cases. Two other members of the White family, who acted as clerks in the drug store, are under indictment for manslaughter, because of the allegation that from the sale of liquor containing wood alcohol three deaths resulted. They will be tried later.

Almon White was sentenced to pay a fine of $2,000 and costs of prosecution, with an alternative penalty of three days' imprisonment for each dollar of the fine and costs. If the alternative should be enforced it would mean imprisonment for nearly seventeen years.

Old Hudson River Traveler Dead.

Florence Donoghue died at his home, 89 West 103d Street, yesterday morning, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. Bright's disease was the cause of death. For forty-five years Mr. Donoghue acted as a purchasing agent, coming to this city daily from his home in Newburg and doing business with many of the big firms. During his career he had traveled 1,700,000 miles and had known many prominent men.

He traveled on the Mary Powell in the Summer and acted as agent for a transfer company. It was his boast that he never lost a trunk of the hundreds he cared for each week. Five months ago he retired and moved here from Newburg. He is survived by a son, George F. Donoghue, editor of the Fishkill, N. Y., Herald, and three daughters. The burial will be in Newburg on Wednesday.

PLAYGOERS WILL BE SERIOUS.

Will Eliminate Outsiders from Every Second Meeting Hereafter.

The Playgoers' Club, meeting last night at the Hotel Astor, unanimously decided to take itself seriously hereafter, despite the impassioned appeal of Murray Carson that it should not take itself too seriously.

Some of the members objected to the last meetings, and St. John Brennan, who declared that he was no satirist and not given to humorous speech, said that the recent meeting which discussed Ibsen was one of the most lamentable affairs he had ever been unfortunate enough to witness.

Hot tears coursed down his cheeks as he praised Ibsen and the power of his pen. The more lachrymose he appeared the more loudly shrieked the members of the Playgoers. He besought them to be serious, and the Playgoers laughed more loudly with every word he uttered.

Amelia Bingham was not present when the meeting began, and none of the Vice Presidents would undertake her job. Mrs. Doré Lyon filled in until Miss Bingham appeared, an hour late, in a stunning pale blue gown. Mr. Bingham came along.

Sticking to the subject of the seriousness of the organization, it was at last agreed by the Playgoers that hereafter every other meeting should be a members' meeting, all outsiders being eliminated. In these meetings the very serious matter of the drama should be discussed.

There were turbulent times at the meeting, for Miss Bingham had a foe in Mrs. John Fowler Trow, who kept nagging her for the way she failed to put motions. Miss Bingham at last went at Mrs. Trow by making a series of remarks from the chair and offering the floor to Mrs. Trow for her objection.

"But I have made no objection," said Mrs. Trow. She was standing at the time, as if ready to make one.

The Playgoers gave her a hearty laugh.

Mrs. Trow had her chance when Miss Bingham declared that she would not make the club a convenience for her friends who wanted to be entertained, and she would not bring a guest twice who did not become a member.

"I have met a lady four times consecutively at these meetings," declaimed Mrs. Trow. "She was not a member and is not now a member of the club. She was a guest of the lady Chairman."

Mrs. Trow sat down solidly and satisfiedly. Miss Bingham joined in the laugh and said that she didn't know the guest referred to.

1 DEAD, 4 OVERCOME BY GAS.

Sad Sight Met Man and Wife When They Returned to Their Flat.

Tony Kunda, his wife, and their eleven-year-old daughter Antoinette left their home on the second floor of the tenement house at 430 East Seventy-first Street, yesterday, to visit relatives. Upon returning home shortly after 9 o'clock last night they found the rooms filled with gas, the one-year-old baby Mary dead, and three of the children and their aged grandmother unconscious.

The baby was lying in its crib, while the children, Tony, 3 years old; Joseph, 4; William, 6, and Mrs. Louise Cermi, Mrs. Kunda's mother, were stretched on the floor of the dining room. Gas was rushing from a tube that had probably been accidentally detached from a stove.

Policemen were hurriedly summoned and an ambulance surgeon called from the Presbyterian Hospital. The three boys and the grandmother were removed to the hospital, and late last night it was said they had a fighting chance for recovery.

When Kunda and his wife and daughter reached the house, there was no light in the windows, and no response to repeated rapping on the door. Becoming alarmed at the odor of gas in the hallway, Kunda hurled himself against the door and forced it open. He and his wife and Antoinette were staggered at the gas that shot out of the room, but fearing for the safety of the little ones and the aged grandmother, who is 72 years old, they dashed into the rooms.

Mrs. Kunda, believing that her baby and the boys were dead, fainted, while Antoinette and the father groped through the darkness until they stumbled over the prostrate forms of the unconscious lads and Mrs. Cermi.

One by one Kunda carried the boys into the hallway, Antoinette taking the baby in her arms and running to the street. Policemen Callahan and Short carried Mrs. Kunda out. She had fainted as she entered the dining room.

TO TRY A LABOR THEATRE.

With Some Misgivings the C. F. U. Sends Delegates to a Test Show.

The Central Federated Union, on the recommendation of its Executive Committee, appointed a special committee yesterday to witness a sort of test performance under the auspices of the Theatre of Labor, which will be given tomorrow evening in the Berkeley Lyceum. Two one-act social dramas, "Poor People" and "The Brotherhood of Man," by Julius Hopp, and "The Choice of Princess Dainty," a comedy, by Ashley Miller, will be given.

The recommendation of the Executive Committee was the result of a meeting of the Executive Committee and Mr. Hopp last week. The report said that Delegates Barry and De Veaux of the Actors' Protective Union attended and declared themselves opposed to giving only legitimate dramas and leaving out vaudeville, the Actors' Protective Union being composed of vaudeville performers. Mr. Hopp explained, according to the report, that legitimate drama was decided on as the best means of showing how much the working people were downtrodden.

It might be a lesson to the capitalists. De Veaux, the report said, replied that the drama of life was sad enough for the working people; they needed comedy in the evening to lighten up their lives.

The report also mentioned that President Sweek of the Associated Building Trades, who is Treasurer of the Theatre of Labor, said he liked the scheme all right, but he did not like his job of Treasurer, because there was no money to take charge of.

TURNS ON THE JANITOR.

The Woman Tenant Goes to War with Bulldog, Pistol, and Club.

Mrs. Madelaine Langlotz, 22 years old, of 156 East Ninety-second Street was locked up in the East Eighty-eighth Street Station last night on a charge of attempted felonious assault. She is accused of having chased the janitor with her bulldog, a pistol, and club. The chase caused some excitement in the neighborhood.

For some time there has been friction between Mrs. Langlotz and the janitor, who is Edward Humphries. It began when the janitor took charge of the house and made complaint to the landlord about Mrs. Langlotz's dog, Pussy.

Last evening Mrs. Langlotz went into the basement and Humphries told her not to throw ashes on the floor. She did so, he says, and then hit him with the box, and chased him and his wife to their rooms, where the barricaded the doors.

According to the janitor Mrs. Langlotz returned in about ten minutes with her bulldog, a revolver, and a club. She rapped on the door and exhibited the revolver. Humphries jumped through a window leading into the areaway and ran up the street shouting for the police.

At Eighty-ninth Street he got Policeman Coughlin of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station, who returned with him to the house.

They found Mrs. Landlotz walking up and down with her dog crying "Down with tyrants."

When arraigned before Sergt. Tabor in the police station house, the Sergeant says she remarked:

"I am sorry I didn't kill him."

Kiley Trouble Deeper

Sale of Property as Bachelor Wil Bother Bigamous Banker.

It was learned yesterday that a large number of legal complications will arise over Kiley's habit of passing himself off as a bachelor. In the last thirteen years, while he has been married, he has bought and sold many parcels of real estate in and around Brooklyn. In order for a married man to pass a good title in real estate to a purchaser his wife must sign off her dower rights to the land transferred. Kiley has in every instance, it is reported, omitted this formality. As a result, Mrs. Kiley will be enabled to recover her third of all the real property sold by her husband since she married him.

FIGHT FOR ASSETS TO BEGIN.

Creditors of Bankrupt Jewelers Will Be in Court To-day.

A legal scramble for the assets of Schickerling Brothers & Co, the bankrupt jewelry manufacturers at 28 East Twenty-second Street, will begin to-day before Judge Holt in the United States District Court. There is also a conflict of Schickerlings' creditors with another set of creditors holding claims against Edelhoff Brothers & Co., who had a retail jewelry store at 574 Fifth Avenue until early in the month, when a receiver took charge.

The two companies, which were practically under the same control, got into trouble almost on the same day, their total liabilities being $330,000. The diamond importers have been amazed to learn how small were the actual assets of the companies to which were intrusted large quantities of precious stones.

James Talcott, a commission merchant, who has a claim for $40,000 against the Schickerlings, H. C. Hardie, who has a claim for $20,000, and Mrs. Elenora A. Schroedor, who has a chattel mortgage for $18,480, have tried unsuccessfully to obtain possession of assets in the hands of Robert C. Morris, as receiver.

A report made by a committee of Edelhoff creditors says that on the formation of the company a year ago, with $150,000 authorized capital stock, Conrad Schickerling, the President of Schickerling Bros. & Co., put in $2,000 as the actual cash capital of the new concern; also his personal notes, one for $98,000 and another for $25,000. The remainder of the capital was in a note for $25,000 signed by Gustave A. Edelhoff, who was designated as the President of the new corporation.

The Edelhoffs went at once into the Maiden Lane district, and with the prestige of a handsomely fitted store in Fifth Avenue, obtained on credit diamonds to the value of $100,000, three-quarters of which found their way to the Schickerlings.

FIRE UNDER ALCOHOLIC WARD.

Patients Scared While the Bellevue Bucket Brigade Works.

Fire frightened fifty patients in the alcoholic ward at Bellevue Hospital last night, although their danger from fire was at no time imminent. For a time they made the ward resound with their shouts and appeals to be saved.

Philip Smith, chief steward of the hospital, discovered the fire in the airshaft of the building on the Twenty-eighth Street side of the grounds, where the alcoholic ward is. Upstairs in the building is a ward devoted to the care of female surgical patients. He did not send in an alarm, fearing that he would arouse the patients in the big institution more than was absolutely necessary. Steward Smith is also head of the Fire Department of the hospital, and at his call the employes formed for fire drill and attacked the flames with buckets of water and extinguishers. The fire seemed to be in the bottom of the airshaft. It is supposed that it started in a pile of rubbish.

All the windows of the alcoholic ward were open and through them the smoke poured into the ward, quickly arousing the patients who were awake. The flames at no time threatened the ward, but they destroyed a wooden shaft which led from the stewards' mess room.

In the women's surgical ward there was no excitement. The windows of this ward had been kept closed, so that none of the smoke got in.

Arrangements were made from the main office for the removal of the patients from the alcoholic ward and the women's surgical ward if the flames should seem to be getting the upper hand. After a brisk fight of twenty minutes the fire was extinguished.

PROF. DOREMUS BURIED.

Many at the Services in the South Church—The Music Exceptional.

Many friends of Prof. Robert Ogden Doremus, among them prominent bankers, jurists, and physicians, attended the funeral services of the chemist in the South Church in Madison Avenue yesterday. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Bridges, who was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Roderick Terry, the former pastor of the church, and the Rev. Dr. Dixon of Vermont. The musical programme was exceptional, fifteen members of the Philharmonic Society, and a choir of twenty-five, assisted by a quartet and a harpist and 'cellist, taking part. Dr. Bridges read a prayer instead of delivering an address.

The altar of the church was banked with wreaths and large floral pieces, among which was one sent by the New York Philharmonic Society, one by the Alumni of the College of the City of New York, one by the Class of 1906 of the College of the City of New York, one by the Faculty, and one by the Bellevue Hospital Medical College.

Among those who attended the services were Cornelius N. Bliss, Dr. E. H. Bartly, President of the Long Island Medical College, of the faculty of which Dr. Doremus had been a member; Justice Davis of the Supreme Court, Gen. Webb, S. F. Abbott, Mrs. John Bloodgood, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Budd, Col. and Mrs. Bacon, John Bigelow, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Brown, Mrs. G. W. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLean, Judge and Mrs. Pryor, Mr. and Mrs. James Ridgway, Mr. and Mrs. James Stebbins, and Dr. and Mrs. Wilkenson.

The interment was in the family vault in Greenwood Cemetery.

MOTOR CAR MISBEHAVED.

Broke Owner's Nose and Upset a Family Party in Brooklyn.

A balky automobile driven by John Carlson of Fifteenth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, Brooklyn, caused excitement on Ocean Parkway and in Prospect Park yesterday afternoon, first breaking its owner's nose and then upsetting a carriage containing a family party, all of whom escaped serious injury.

Carlson, who was alone in the car, was driving rapidly up the Parkway when the car began to snort and act queerly. Then it stopped. Carlson was turning the crank in front of the car, when it flew from his hand and struck him a blow on the nose which knocked him sprawling.

After his nose had been mended by an ambulance surgeon Carlson climbed back into the car and resumed his journey. Traveling up the East Drive in the Park, the automobile again misbehaved.

It ran into a surrey in which were Thomas Maguire of 225 Ninth Street, his wife, and two children, and Miss Tessie Mannion of 487 Hancock Street. The carriage was upset and its occupants were thrown to the roadway. All escaped with slight bruises, and were able to return to their homes. The horse did not run away.

Carlson coaxed his cranky machine back into running order, and set off once more on his twice interrupted trip.

UNION VOTES FOR NEW PARTY.

Brooklyn Body Would Form a State Labor Organization.

The Brooklyn Central Labor Union decided at its meeting yesterday to go into independent politics, in accordance with the policy outlined by President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. The union passed resolutions which embodied the statement of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to President Roosevelt and Congress to the effect that the enactment of labor laws showed a disregard of the interests of the laboring people. The resolutions also instructed the union's Legislative Committee to draft a circular and forward a copy of the same to "all central bodies of this State, with a view of forming a State organization for political purposes and the election of officials who will represent the interest of the people in preference to the interests of corporate wealth."

"The New York Moyer-Haywood Labor Conference having read your proclamation, hereby accepts the invitation contained in same and will select a delegation to hear Orchard's and Adams's statements of the facts implicating Moyer-Haywood and Pettibone in the murder of Steunenberg. We promise that our delegation will make a true and impartial report of such statements and that we will lay such report before all labor organizations of the country. Please advise us of the date."

TRINITY'S SHORTCOMINGS.

Criticism of the Manner in Which the "Mother of Churches" Is Administered

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement in a recent editorial to the effect that "business men are wanted in Trinity Corporation" is borne out by statistics gathered by myself on a recent visitation to the parish church and her chapels. Trinity Church had a congregation of 276, Trinity Chapel 26, St. Luke's (Hudson Street) 81, St. Chrysostom's 66, St. Paul's 109, St. Augustine's 107, and St. John's 74. The galleries in each chapel were entirely empty. There were fifteen clergymen at the chapels, or one to every fifteen in the congregation.

When a man "with a message"—like, say, Dean Robbins—preaches, the parish church is nearly full. A comparison of the year books of Trinity with St. Bartholomew's puts the former in a very bad light. The latter church reaches more people than the former and all her chapels combined. The number of communicants connected with the parish church is given as 1,600, estimated. Why estimated? Because an actual count, I believe most firmly, would prove that she cannot show half that number. The clergy of Trinity Chapel give 750 estimated communicants, and I find a congregation of 26 persons, 11 of whom were strangers. The vicar of St. Paul's, who gives 700 as the estimated number on his books, says "it seems impossible to reduce it to definiteness." With 12 clerks and 2 bookkeepers, it would be an easy matter to reduce all these estimated numbers to actual ones. But as doing so would dim the prestige of the self-styled "Mother of Churches," we are given numbers that are "estimated." The last time I attended St. Paul's when the holy communion was celebrated the number of communicants was 39. Give any business man the names and addresses of these estimated communicants, and I will warrant he will reduce them to definiteness.

The number of Sunday school scholars in connection with the parish church is given as 365. They attend the parish church once a month at the 3:30 service, and I have counted the attendance on nine different occasions, and it has never reached the 100 mark. Possibly 365 is the estimated number.

If the business men in the corporation were in a majority and Trinity had not so much money that "she did not know how to spend it" we would have long ago seen the following amalgamations: St. Chrysostom's with St. Mary the Virgin, Trinity Chapel with the Church of the Transfiguration, St. Luke's with St. John's, and St. Paul's with Trinity. The money received from the sale of the sites of St. Chrysostom's, Trinity Chapel, and St. Luke's might build and endow churches and parish houses at the Bronx, where, according to Bishop Greer, they are badly needed.

St. Paul's should always be kept as a memorial to the "Father of His Country," having it open every day, as at present, for "rest, meditation, and prayer." But why pay three clergymen to administer to a congregation of 109 and 39 communicants? You can buy in the church a photograph of Washington's pew, but as the vandals who "restored" the interior removed all the old pews the purchaser of such a photograph is deceived. He is paying for a photographic lie. When the "restorers" did their work they might have removed the old-fashioned stoves (that have blackened the walls and ceiling round them for about ten feet) and put in a modern heating apparatus.

A Bishop of the Episcopal Church stated in a Church paper that the value of the property owned by Trinity Corporation was only $15,000,000. At only 4 per cent. they have an income of $600,000 a year, yet on Page 26 of the year book we read that "the Vestry appropriated $98,579.51," leaving a surplus from one year's income of over $500,000. We are given on the same page an itemized account of the appropriations made by the Vestry for parish objects. Why not one of the appropriations without the parish? We find on Page 24 a list of "other churches maintained, wholly or in part, by the corporation," but whether these churches received $5 or $500 each is not stated. Why this indefiniteness?

Indefiniteness seems to be a pretty extensive commodity in the parish. A writer in a well-known monthly some little time ago stated that "as religious property was exempt from taxation, a law ought to be passed compelling those in authority in each church to give an itemized account of their finances every year." This is reasonable, surely, but would the balance sheet of the "Mother of Churches" show that she had made full use of the "ten talents" that her Master has given her? QUILLER.

CITY BREVITIES.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has received $10 from "G. M." for Mrs. Mary McDermott and $10 from J. Sonnentheil of Galveston, Texas, for Asher Spielfogel.

Members of the Seventh Regiment are making plans to celebrate its centennial. Gen. George Moore Smith, Col. Appleton, and Thomas Dimond have been appointed a committee in charge of ex-members who are serving in other organizations and entitled to wear uniforms.

The Patria Club, composed of men and women, will hold its sixth annual dinner at the Savoy on the night of April 6. Mrs. Philip Carpenter, Clinton Rogers Woodruff of Philadelphia, the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, and Col. Vrooman will respond to toasts.

Notice is given by Commissioner of Labor Sherman that a person who has been selling tickets for a ball alleged to be projected by and for Factory Inspectors has no right to do so.

SILAS STRONG
EMPEROR OF THE WOODS
BY
IRVING BACHELLER

Irving Bacheller's new novel has all the freshness of his first great success—"EBEN HOLDEN." Its bearing on a great problem, its humanity and simplicity suggest Uncle Tom's Cabin. Silas Strong, the "one-word man," is among the most unique and lovable characters in fiction. Some of the maxims in his diary ought to be pasted in every man's hat. He is a droll, amusing and heroic figure. Equally irresistible are:

Sinth, his sister.
Socky and Sue—two quaint children and
Zeb, the bear-dog with a cross-eye and a serious countenance, but a most cheerful disposition.

BENNING MEETING TO-DAY OPENS RACING SEASON

Trains Going South Carry Many New Yorkers to Track.

SPRING HANDICAP FEATURE

Long Island Strings Shipped South Leave Gravesend to Horses Training for Later Events.

The Benning race meeting opens to-day. Every train leaving for Washington yesterday resembled a race track special in the number of turfmen that were aboard. The 8:25 train from Jersey City alone carried almost 400 New Yorkers, all bound for the opening of the season of the Washington Jockey Club.

The Spring Handicap is the feature event. Race King carries the top weight, and Redfern will have the mount. He is the favorite, with odds quoted at 5 to 2 by the knowing one. Bellsnicker, with Brush up, are expected to be coupled as second choice, with Veronese and Warning coupled next. The starters, with their weights and riders and the probable odds that will be laid against them, are:

Horses.	Wgt.	Jockeys.	Prob. Odds.
Race King	117	Redfern	5 to 2
‡Bobbie Kean	116	Burns	6 to 1
Mount Henry	116	J. Jones	10 to 1
*The Cure	113	Bell	6 to 1
Right and True	108	L. Smith	15 to 1
Paul Clifford	107	W. Robbins	10 to 1
†Bellsnicker	106	J. Martin	3 to 1
§Veronese	105	D. O'Connor	5 to 1
§Warning	90	Clare	5 to 1
‡Pater	102	Miller	6 to 1
Royal Window	100	—	30 to 1
†Brush Up	98	J. Johnson	3 to 1

* † ‡ § Coupled.

With the Benning strings off for the course of the Washington Jockey Club, the trainers still on Long Island have settled down to fit their charges for races that come later in the season. From the manner in which the horses are being sent along at Gravesend, which is the principal training ground, there promises to be an early start in many of the stables, and though little of a sensational nature has been reported from any of the training camps, the new crop is a good looking one and coming on in a fine, healthy manner that is eminently satisfactory.

A large force of men was employed by Supt. Dunphy at Gravesend yesterday shoveling the snow from the outside of the track, and shortly after noon the harrows were brought out and the course put in fairly good condition. With anything like favorable weather from now on it will be possible to set the horses down in speed tests within a couple of days.

Among the visitors during the training hours at Gravesend were Newton Bennington, Andrew Miller, Mr. Townsend, and Mr. Keator. They were all much interested in the galloping exercises of the Bennington lot, and for the occasion everything in the stable was under saddle. Judge Post and Conville were sent along smartly for a half in 0:57¼. Blackstone and Easton, working together, stepped an easy three furlongs in 0:43. Sir Toddington had Captain Emerick for a companion in a breezing half in 0:58, and Sugar Pine went the same route half a second slower.

Tiro and Ellicott went along for their three furlongs in 0:42½, and Disaster and Waterbury breezed like a team through the same distance in 0:13. De Mund and Greeno were partners in a romp of a half in 0:57½, and Gold Note was only asked to go along for his four furlongs in 0:59. Paunomok and Waterfall came next in a handy half in 0:57 flat. Grace Ethel, Miss Spooner, and Dollie Dollars breezed three furlongs in 0:44 together, while Clare Duncan, Royal Breeze, and Yankee's Sister were allowed to step just half a second faster.

Of the older horses in the stable Belmere breezed along for a half in 0.59; Marius Caius a half in 0:49; Gold Badge three furlongs in 0:42½. Waterbearer, Cinna, and Edna Jackson stepped a half in 0:58.

SHEPPARD CASE HELD OVER.

Decision of Registration Committee Will Be Rendered on Wednesday.

Melvin W. Sheppard of the Irish-American Athletic Club, who is accused of competing in professional races at Maspeth, L. I., and Philadelphia, will know his fate next Wednesday night. The Registration Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union held a protracted session yesterday at the Wyandot Club, 232 East Fifty-eighth Street, when a mass of conflicting testimony was presented, most of which favored the accused athlete. Several witnesses were examined, but only one, Jake Webber, a professional runner, identified Sheppard as Smith, who won the one and three mile races at the Caledonian sports at Maspeth, L. I., on Labor Day 1904. Webber was confused in his testimony, and failed to satisfactorily describe the man who won the race, and contradicted himself as to the costume worn by the winner of the event.

W. H. Green, Captain of the Star Athletic Club, testified that he attended the Caledonian sports with Committeeman J. Stiel in a semi-official capacity for the purpose of identifying any amateur who competed in the professional races. He described the winner of the race alleged to have been won by Sheppard as being between 27 and 28 years of age, of light complexion, and a choppy, irregular stride. Sheppard is now 21 years old, dark complexion, and runs with a long, easy, swinging stride. He was positive that Sheppard did not compete in or win the race.

The other evidence offered favored Sheppard. The committee postponed final action until Wednesday for the purpose of securing the evidence of W. F. Paul of Trenton, who is said to have won the race in Philadelphia which Sheppard is also alleged to have won. Paul is the Vice President of an athletic club at Trenton, and several witnesses have testified that he, and not Sheppard, was the winner of the race in question. A communication was received from Trenton stating that Paul was in that city and was willing to testify in the case.

Chairman John Boyle said last night that the committee was anxious to do full justice to Sheppard, and with that end in view the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That in view of the evidence adduced, and the testimony submitted in the matter of Melvin W. Sheppard, the Registration Committee withholds its decision as to the amateur standing of said Melvin W. Sheppard pending further investigation, and

"Resolved, That the committee meet Wednesday, March 28, 1906, to render a decision."

COLUMBIA ATHLETES BALKED.

Outdoor Training Has Been Interfered With by Uncertain Weather.

Columbia's crew men hope to get on the water to-day. Three times dates have been fixed to start river training, and each time the clod weather has prevented. The crew as well as the other teams are suffering severely for want of outdoor work, and if there is any possible means of forcing the men it will be eagerly seized.

Lauder and his baseball prodigies are worrying about the question of where they will play when the weather does moderate. South Field is covered with snow, and no attempts have been made to remove it. The authorities state that the field will not be ready for any of the teams before April 7. If the authorities do not open it sooner the nine will have to cancel about four games unless another field can be obtained.

The track team is in as bad a plight as the other teams. Owing to the building of the dormitories at the easterly end of the field the track has had therefore to be made smaller. The original track had five laps to the mile; the new track will probably be six and a fraction or seven.

GOULD WON GOLD RACQUET.

Defeated P. Lorillard, Jr., in Court Tennis Championship Final.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., March 25.—Jay Gould of Georgian Court, Lakewood, won the final round of the Eastern States championship for the Gold Racquet in court tennis to-day at the court of the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club, easily defeating Pierre Lorillard, Jr., of the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2, 6—1. Gould was in excellent form and easily outclassed his opponent. A large gallery of well-known society people who were spending Sunday at the Tuxedo Club witnessed the match.

By winning to-day's match Gould gets a leg on the five-hundred-dollar gold racquet presented by T. Suffern Tailer and becomes a prominent factor for the National championships next week.

Gould opened the first set with a lead of three points, and, playing in splendid form, ran out his score in six innings. The second set was a repetition of the first, Gould winning handily. Lorillard went to pieces in the third and deciding game, and Gould found no difficulty in making it three straight.

Before the championship match T. Suffern Tailer and C. Ledyard Blair defeated George J. Gould and Benjamin Nicholl in two straight sets, 6—4, 6—3. Summary:

FIRST SET.
Gould	3 0 1 1 0 1—6
Lorillard	0 1 0 0 1 ..—2
SECOND SET.
Gould	3 0 1 1 0 1—6
Lorillard	0 1 0 0 1 ..—2
THIRD SET.
Gould	3 0 1 1 1 1—6
Lorillard	0 1 0 0 ..—1

AUTOISTS WANT TO KNOW ANNUAL TOURING ROUTE

Paul Deming Has Discussed Plan with Officers in Chicago.

SECOND TOUR CONTEMPLATED

New England Motorists Will Run to White Mountains—No Mt. Washington Climb This Year.

Automobilists are quite anxious for some tangible information regarding the Glidden Cup tour this Summer. The announcement of the new Touring Committee of the American Automobile Association, which will have entire charge of the contest, will be made this week, and it is the general impression that Paul Deming, the Chairman, will call an early meeting. Mr. Deming was in Chicago last week conferring with President John Farson and Secretary Sidney S. Gorham, and it is believed that the various suggestions that have come to the front from time to time were carefully discussed. When Mr. Deming calls his committee together, he will have something practical to lay before them, and with the definite selection of the route prospective competitors will be enabled to make proper arrangements.

Few serious complaints have been made against a Western city for the starting point except from New England autoists. Those who believe that a Western tour will be a big aid in stimulating the popularity of the automobile and bringing about needed improvements in respect to roads and reasonable legal regulations are anxious to see some of the present suggestions adopted. The differences of opinion are hardly expected to be so great as to cause any loss of entries. Those motorists who enjoy long tours through a new territory will enter, no matter where the route may be.

"I would be only too glad to enter my car in a motor run that would lead through an entirely new touring country," said a member of the Automobile Club of America yesterday. "We Easterners are so much in the habit of making an auto run through New England whenever we get a week for a little outing that it probably would do us all good to turn our attention to another part of the country. What are automobiles good for if they can't be used over the ordinary roads of the land? We don't want to ride over asphalt all the time. Automobilists now don't go into these annual tours so much for the purpose of ascertaining the serviceability of their cars as for the sake of seeing something new, studying different conditions, and meeting a new set of autoists. The tour, therefore, becomes not only one for endurance, but for mutual enjoyment, and I would be glad to see the committee take us through part of Canada and the West."

The discussion has occasioned one benefit, at least. It has directed greater popular attention to automobile touring, and will probably result in a second tour being arranged for New England autoists and others who may be unable to take part in the larger event.

President Louis R. Speare of the Bay State Automobile Club, Boston, and a number of his associates are pushing this scheme energetically, and they have secured the indorsement of a number of New Yorkers. If the tour is held, it will be planned solely for pleasure. No system of points will be kept and no awards will be made. The tour will probably start jointly from this city and Boston early in July. It is planned to have the New York and Boston delegations meet at Lenox. From the Berkshires the tourists will travel to Lowell, and the following day go to the White Mountains, where a week will be spent in side trips to various resorts. A climbing contest up Profile Mountain or Mount Agassiz is contemplated as a special feature. Leaving the White Mountains, the autoists will run to Poland Springs, then to Portland, stopping at Old Orchard Beach on the homeward run to Boston.

The Mount Washington hill-climbing event has been abandoned this year as too dangerous. More difficulty was encountered last year than had been looked for in conducting the contest successfully, and many of those who did take part have refused to do any more Mount Washington climbing.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

The New York Motor Club has decided to hold its National economy test this season on June 18. The second Orphans' Day automobile run, which was instituted by the club last year, will be repeated this season on June 6. Plans have already been prepared by the Runs and Tours Committee of the club, and more machines are expected to be in line than was the case a year ago.

A meeting of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association will probably be held this week to discuss routine matters and get in shape for the more important meeting to be held immediately after the arrival of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who is due on April 3.

The economy test that is being planned by the Automobile Club of America will not be limited to the members, but will be open to all automobilists. If proper arrangements can be made the test will probably be held in May or June.

Several new prizes have just been offered to the Atlantic City Automobile Club for the beach races to be held there on April 25, 26, and 27. In all there will twenty-four events. The approaches to the beach track are being improved and the grand stand will be enlarged.

Word has just been received of the winning by an American automobile of the biggest track race ever held in Australia. The trophy offered is the J. R. Crooke Cup, valued at $500. The race is a three-mile handicap event, and it was won by a ten horse power Pope-Hartford car.

A Parisian daily devoted to the automobile has donated $3,000 to the Automobile Club of France. It will be used to promote the work of the Touring Committee and for other improvements.

A number of manufacturers do not share the opinion of some motorists that the two-cylinder car is virtually a thing of the past except for the strictly runabout types. President Budlong of the Electric Vehicle Company claims that there are many sound reasons for favoring the two-cylinder opposed engine for cars from ten to twenty horse power. One of the three Columbia gasoline cars made by his company has this type of engine.

GIANTS SHUT OUT MEMPHIS.

New Yorks Took Memphis Seriously and Played Real Baseball.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 25.—With snap in every department of their game the Giants seemed to strike their stride to-day, and as a result 3,000 loyal followers of the local Southern League team, under the management of Charles Babb, a former Giant, were compelled to witness their favorites' shut out. Warm weather and an abundance of sunshine acted as a tonic to McGraw's men, who took the Memphis team too seriously.

Memphis had but one chance to score. In the last inning Babb was on third and Carey on second, with two out, but Taylor disposed of Cooley.

The Giants lined up in regular order for the first time. George Browne arrived from Los Angeles, and played right field. Wiltse pitched the first four innings, allowing one hit. Taylor followed and Memphis did not get a hit until the final inning, when Babb and Carey cracked out singles. Mertes, in the fourth, cleared the bases with a triple, and scored himself on a wild throw to catch him at third.

Trainer Harry Tuthill left to-night for New York, stating that he had severed connection with the Giants. The score:

TENNIS FUND GROWS SLOWLY.

Some Apprehension Felt About Sending American Team Abroad.

Contributions to the fund which is wanted to defray the expenses of the American challenging team abroad for the international contests for the Dwight F. Davis Lawn Tennis Cup have come in so slowly and from so few as to somewhat discourage the committee. Less than a quarter of the $2,500 has been subscribed, although promises have been made by a number of the organizations and clubs in the various cities throughout the country. In a measure Frederick G. Anderson, Chairman of the committee and a member of the Kings County Lawn Tennis Club of Brooklyn, which immediately subscribed $100 as soon as the fund was begun, ascribes the failure of the clubs to respond to the fact that many of them are waiting until the holding of their annual meetings to take action. This is a matter of regret to the committee, which includes Dr. James Dwight, President of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, and Raymond D. Little of the West Side Lawn Tennis Club. The failure to make quick and ample response toward sending the team abroad, which was unanimously urged at the annual meeting of the National Association held at the Waldorf-Astoria Feb. 5, has handicapped the work of the committee to no small degree. Unless adequate support is manifested during the next few weeks it is possible that another method will be put in operation.

In addition to the subscription of the Kings County Lawn Tennis Club the West Side Lawn Tennis Club has subscribed $100, Morris County Golf Club $100, and the Hollywood Golf Club $50. At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association held a few days ago A. L. Hoskins of Philadelphia reported that a number of the clubs of that city would contribute $500. The list is said to comprise the Philadelphia Cricket Club, Merion Cricket Club, Belmont Cricket Club, and others. A similar report was made for the organizations of Boston.

It is not thought probable that anything in the nature of an assessment will be found necessary among the organizations' members of the National Association. In the event of such a plan being put in operation it is said that an assessment of $20 for each organization would more than cover the amount necessary for the expenses of the team. Should the American lawn tennis players be defeated in the challenge matches this year the tardy action of the clubs in suport of a challenging team may lead to complications that will prevent the United States from again issuing a challenge to the English holders of the trophy for several years to come.

HARLEM NAVY HANDBALL.

Unions Defeated Crescents and Won Championship for Third Year.

The Harlem navy handball championship closed yesterday when the Union Boat Club defeated the Crescent Boat Club five games out of six, and for the third consecutive year secured premier honors. The contest for the championship has been a close one between the Unions and the Metropolitans, the latter leading before yesterday's match by two games. A big crowd of oarsmen witnessed the final round. Kean and Morton, the first pair, broke even with Graham and Betts, but the four remaining Union players won their games with ease. Metropolitan secured second place, with Crecsents and Wyanokes third and fourth, respectively. The Atalantas and Palisades dropped out of the competition early in the season.

At a meeting of the league held after the match it was decided to create a junior class next year. The players in this year's championships will be classed as seniors, and the juniors will be classified as such for one year. The individual championship of the league will be played between Lyon and Kean, Union Boat Club, and Cox and Coop, Crescent Boat Club, on the Nassau Boat Club court, April 8. Summary:

Kaiser Offers Another Yacht Cup.

LONDON, March 25.—Kaiser Wilhelm has offered for the race from Dover to Heligoland, the date for which has been fixed for June 16, a handsome silver cup to typify and commemorate the silver anniversary of his wedding.

The hope is expressed that the two American yachts that competed in the transatlantic race, which are still on this side of the water, will again compete—Wilson Marshall's Kaiser Cup winner Atlantic and Henry S. Redmond's yawl Ailsa.

In honor of the Kaiser's anniversary, his yachting friends have presented him with six handsome yacht models in silver, representing yacht development in six stages from the Viking galley to the schooner Meteor.

OLYMPIC MEN OUTCLASS CROSS-COUNTRY FIELD

Frank and Spring Make Fine Showing in Star A. C. Run.

BEAT THIRD MAN 5 MINUTES

Irish-American Athlete Leads Pastime Representative by Fifty Yards—Seven Starters Finish.

W. Frank of the Irish-American Athletic Club and M. Spring of the Pastime Athletic Club, both members of the American Olympic team, finished first and second yesterday in the Star Athletic Club cross-country run. Although the field of starters was small, it included the best distance runners in the metropolitan district. The run, which was over fifteen miles long, was arranged as a try-out for Frank and Spring, and the running of the pair showed them to be in splendid form. Frank covered the distance in 1:48. The roads were in fair condition, and the finish between the two leaders was an interesting one.

It was the first time this year that the Olympic runners had attempted to run a longer distance than six miles. The course was from the Star Athletic Clubhouse along Thompson Avenue to Hoffman Boulevard to Jamaica and return by way of Hoffman Boulevard to the clubhouse.

Both Frank and Spring outclassed the field, finishing five minutes ahead of the third man.

The Olympic pair set out at a fast gait and continued it throughout the run. Of the eight starters, seven finished in fairly good shape, although hopelessly out of the race. The result was a vindication of the American Committee, as it proved that Frank and Spring are the best distance runners in New York.

When the men left the clubhouse Spring went to the front, followed by Frank, with Eddie Carr in third place. Spring kept the lead for about five miles, when he was passed by Frank. Carr in the meantime had dropped back, giving way to Ziegler. Frank and Spring started on the home journey close together, the former being content with a slight lead. As the men neared home Frank spurted and ran away from Spring, finishing fifty yards ahead of the Pastime runner. Ziegler was five minutes behind Spring, with Carr a quarter of a mile further away. Summary:

The cross-country season of the Mohawk Athletic Club was brought to a close yesterday when thirty athletes took part in the monthly handicap run. E. Fairclough, with a handicap of two minutes, won the event by nearly 100 yards from J. Malone, who started from the same mark. The latter, who graduated from the novice ranks last week, made an excellent showing. P. Lorz finished third, the remaining runners being strung out. The finish of the leaders follows:

Short Stop Cassidy Dead.

CHESTER, Penn., March 25.—Joseph Cassidy, short stop of the Washington American League Baseball Club, died at his home in this city to-day. He had been ill for seven weeks with a peculiar disease which his doctors termed purpura hemorrhagia, the blood turning to water. A number of specialists, however, did not agree with the diagnosis. Cassidy, who was 23 years of age and unmarried, resided in Chester all his life, where he learned to play ball. He was secured by Washington in 1904 from the Harrisburg (Penn.) Tri-State League Club.

Harlem Oarsmen on the Water.

The pleasant weather that prevailed yesterday brought out many oarsmen for a spin on the Harlem River. Nearly all the clubs have completed preliminary plans for the Spring training, and the floats at the houses are all in position. The number of oarsmen out was larger than usual at this time of the year. The Harlems, Metropolitans, Nassaus, Nonpareils, Crescents, and Bohemians were busy, and the other clubs sent out a fair representation. Considerable interest was manifested in the Decoration Day regatta on the Harlem, and the President and Captains of the clubs in the Harlem Regatta Association will hold a meeting to-night at Pabst's, Harlem, when business of importance will be discussed.

Scholes, the young Canadian sculler who won the Diamond Sculls at Henley in 1904, has decided to return to rowing. Scholes retired from single sculling after his return from England, and publicly stated he would never row single again. His change of front means that at this year's National championships one of the greatest single sculling events in the history of amateur sport will be contested, with Scholes, Greer, and Shepheard as the leading figures.

The Nonpariels intend to enter an intermediate in the Harlem Regatta on May 30, and it is likely that the crew will be stroked by C. S. Titus, who is an intermediate with sweeps. There is an unusually bright outlook for this event, as the Nassaus intend to have a crew, and there is a lot of material at the Harlem, Metropolitan, Bohemian, and Staten Island Clubs.

Clarence Mase, who won races a few years ago under the colors of the Harlem Rowing Club, has been elected Captain of the Hudson Boat Club.

C. S. Titus and James O'Neill, the Nonpariel's senior double scull crew, were out both morning and afternoon for a spin. Fred Fuessel and Julius Bradley of the Harlem Rowing Club took a three-mile row in the morning. Both crews are entered in the senior double scull race at the Harlem Regatta, which insures a good contest. In former years this event has seldom filled.

The Metropolitan oarsmen made a good showing. Capt. Callahan was out in his new shell. C. Putnam, E. Groden, H. Thompson, and H. Hertel made a promising junior four.

The Argonauts of Canada have been invited to meet the Syracuse University crew again this year in a dual regatta on Lake Onondaga, but will probably not accept. The Argonauts intend to send an eight to the English Henley, and cannot spare the time or expense of a trip to Syracuse at a time so shortly before their trip abroad.

Nearly twenty members of the Nassau Boat Club reported to Capt. Stivers, who expects to have a busy season. With a view to developing crews for the National Regatta the club will enter crews in all the local events. There is sufficient material for three good eights, but the club is weak in singles and doubles.

No change will be made in the course of the Long Island Rowing Association's regatta this year. Although considerable criticism is heard from time to time of the Flushing Bay course, it is the only place available this year. It is expected that the Pelham Bay course will be in existence next year.

Among the oarsmen noticed on the river were Louis Major, Joseph Jatrepalck, Charles Pisveje, Joseph Villam, J. Sedlacek, and J. Kaser, First Bohemian Club; W. H. Hart and P. Kyte, Wyanoke Club; W. A. Kohler, J. F. O'Connor, A. Nichol, A. C. Wieckers, G. F. Weiman, G. B. Hayward, and P. A. Chanut, Nassau Boat Club; W. A. Neal and Warren Graley, Harlem Rowing Club; Louis Rivas, J. Callahan, Andrew Corbett, W. S. Dunn, Robert Graham, C. Putman, and Robert Hardy, Metropolitan Rowing Club; G. Betts, W. Turner, Crescent Boat Club, and others from the Lone Star, Atalanta, and Dauntless Clubs.

LIKE a trip to Paris will be a visit to the Spring opening of our millinery department to-day, March 26th.

We believe that we have ready for your inspection in our new show rooms one of the choicest arrays of millinery that has ever been gathered together.

It contains mostly creations of Georgette, Caroline Reboux, Charlotte and other famous designers of Paris, all chosen personally by our own buyer and imported direct.

No less charming are the original creations of our own French designers. Our stock, therefore, offers a wide range of choice and insures your getting always something individual and distinctive.

The accepted ornaments this season are mainly feathers and flowers. Colorings present almost an unlimited variety.

Whatever is in good form, either in coloring or design, you will find in our display and always worked into materials of unquestioned quality.

Quite as important as the selection of the hat is the choice of veils and other toilet finishings. Never before has Paris given to the world such a variety of effective designs in veils, boas, hand-embroidered neckwear, belts of every description, and hair ornaments.

We can show not a few that we are positive will not be exhibited in any other store in America this season.

We invite all those interested in the rarest selections of Spring millinery to come to our store to-day, March 26th.

WOMAN DEAD, HOME WRECKED

Husband, Said to Have Been Found Intoxicated, Held by Coroner.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 25.—Mrs. John McMahon was found dead on the floor of a bedroom in her home at Centerville, near here, by neighbors, to-day, while her husband was discovered lying on the bed and said to be under the influence of liquor. The woman's body was badly bruised and battered, and the rooms were strewn with broken furniture and crockery. The man was not injured, so far as could be seen.

Medical Examiner Joslin said, after viewing the body, that Mrs. McMahon might have been dead for four days. McMahon, who it is said, was not in a condition to give any information, was held by order of Coroner Mix.

McMahon is about 35 years of age and his wife was about the same age.

Gallops on the Boulevard.

Henry Harris had out Clovercrest, Little Flea, and Winning Hand, and together they were permitted to go along for a smart half in 0:57½. Trainer Dick Miller had three of the Philip J. Dwyer horses under saddle, and they all went along cleverly. Albert F. and Erminie breezed three furlongs in 0:44, and Jennie McCabe accomplished the same task in 0:43½.

Trainer Hueston had three out and gave them plenty of useful galloping, winding up with a smart breeze. Mazienello went four furlongs in 0:58½, while Miss Ogden and Marietta were permitted three furlongs in 0:44.

"Jimmy" Rowe and "Jack" Joyner showed big strings in long slow gallops. These two stables are not hurrying preparation, except in a few of their horses, and until the conditions are more favorable there will be little speed asked.

J. H. McCormick arrived with his string from New Orleans during the day. They all looked exceedingly well after the long trip from the South. In the shipment there were Monet, Emergency, Grenade, and Mary Morris. In addition to his own horses McCormick brought on for Albert Simons, Monterey, Wotan, and a two-year-old. R. R. Rogers's Garnish was also a passenger on the same train. He looked extremely well when unloaded, and it was all his rubber could do to keep him on the ground as he led him off to the stable.

There has been a let-up in the training of the promising three-year-old Voorhees, and he has been sent to George Miller's Jersey farm, where he will be turned out, possibly for the season.

J. H. McLaughlin ran over from Washington yesterday, and had some two-year-olds out at Gravesend. He expressed the opinion that Computer, the colt by Compute, is probably the best two-year-old he saw at Benning.

Tours

A new booklet just issued under this title should be in the hands of every person who expects to make a trip west of the Rockies this year.

It outlines all the routes to the Coast, shows maps of each, contains a large map of the country from the Great Lakes to the Coast and has a great deal of valuable information about side trips, interesting sights, etc.

The booklet is finely printed and handsomely illustrated. Its use will save you the trouble of getting and combining the separate booklets of the many different roads reaching the Pacific.

Your request on a postal, mentioning the name of this paper, will bring a copy by return mail.

APRIL CASH MOVEMENTS

Money Market Conditions at This Season in Past Years.

RATES HIGH IN GOOD YEARS

Surplus Increases in April, but Often Declines in May—Relation of Good Business to New York Cash Holdings.

The prediction that monetary ease will prevail in April has come to be more or less generally accepted in the financial district. Such at all events is the view very commonly expressed by those who have been hoping for a resumption of an upward movement in the stock market and who believe that all that is needed to bring this about is a larger supply of loanable funds at this centre. Special interest, therefore, attaches to the record of the money market at this season in past years and of the fluctuations in the cash holdings of the banks during April and May.

From some points of view the record seems to justify the expectation of an easier money market during April. If this hope is realized this year, however, it may be the result rather of foreign credits extended to this market than of abundance of funds secured from domestic sources. One important factor in considering this year's monetary outlook and in comparing present prospects with the actual record of past years, is the fact that business throughout the country is being conducted on an enormous scale demanding necessarily a large amount of funds at all the commercial centres of the country.

The importance of this factor is emphasized by a comparison with the records for 1901 and 1902, which were years of exceptional industrial activity. Generally speaking, the New York City banks show a large increase in their cash holdings during the month of April. In those two years instead of a large gain there was reported in 1901 only a nominal increase and in 1902 an actual loss.

It is safe to assume that the demands for funds at other points than New York will be fully as great this year as in those two years. In 1902, when the New York City banks reported a loss in cash during April, instead of a gain, the bank clearings throughout the country during the first three months of the year showed an increase of more than 10 per cent. over the clearings for the corresponding period of 1901, which was itself a very active year. This clearly showed great activity in business. Even more striking, however, is the increase in the clearings during the first two months of this year. From Jan. 1 to Feb. 24, the bank clearings this year exceeded those for the corresponding period of 1905 by more than $6,000,000,000, an increase of 27.9 per cent. There is no suggestion that business is decreasing, and, therefore, there is little reason to expect lessening demand for money.

In 1904, a year of temporary depression in business, the New York City banks gained over $22,000,000 in cash during April. In 1905, a better year in business, the gain in April was reduced to about $9,000,000. The question presented is, How far will this year's total differ from that of 1905?

The record of the cash holdings of the New York City banks in the last week of March and the changes in these holdings during April and May are shown in the following table:

NEW YORK CITY BANKS—CASH HOLDINGS

	Last week of March.	Change in April.	Change in May.
1905	$204,144,800	+$9,152,600	−$3,049,300
1904	289,636,000	+22,100,200	−7,305,500
1903	229,845,900	+3,040,400	+5,029,300
1902	248,303,900	−206,200	+912,900
1901	238,941,300	+516,100	−2,889,200
1900	211,790,300	+8,299,600	+7,875,000

An examination of the loan account of the banks in these same years brings out the interesting fact that the two months period from the end of March to the end of May shows a large reduction in loans in both 1901 and 1902, but increases in all other years. At first sight this would appear to be a contradiction of the inferences plainly to be drawn from the record of cash holdings. The explanation, however, of this seeming discrepancy lies in the fact that in both those years very heavy liquidation occurred in the New York stock market during the months of April and May. In 1901 it was the Northern Pacific panic which accounted for a violent selling movement, as a result of which the loans of the New York City banks decreased $58,000,000 during the period from the end of March to the end of May. In the Spring of 1902 occurred another period of heavy stock market liquidation, incidents of which were the collapse of the Webb-Meyer stocks and of International Power. The decreases in loans in these two years seem satisfactorily explained by stock market movements, without reference to general business conditions.

The record of bank loans during the period under consideration for the past six years is as follows:

NEW YORK CITY BANKS—LOANS.

	Last Week in March.	Last Week in May.	Two Mos.' Increase.
1905	$1,109,701,700	$1,111,003,400	$1,301,700
1903	904,599,200	922,975,900	18,376,700
1902	904,074,500	885,592,600	*18,471,900
1901	916,889,900	858,872,600	*58,017,300
1900	742,611,900	792,921,000	50,309,100

*Decrease.

Interest also attaches to the movement in surplus reserves during this period. Each year shows an increase in surplus at the close of April as compared with the close of March. The record for May is evenly divided between losses and gains in surplus. The showing is as follows:

NEW YORK CITY BANKS—SURPLUS RESERVE.

	Last Week of March.	Last Week of April.	Last Week of May.
1905	$6,479,325	$16,665,300	$11,465,800
1904	27,468,800	33,144,200	20,602,300
1903	6,280,900	10,985,400	9,645,100
1902	6,965,500	9,461,000	11,929,000
1901	7,870,500	16,759,700	21,288,900
1900	9,836,100	17,074,200	18,812,300

What the effect of these varying movements has been upon the call money market during April and May is set forth in the following table, which shows the high, low, and average rates for call money in April and May for the past six years:

CALL MONEY RATES.

	Month of April.			Month of May.
	High.	Low.	Av'ge.	High.	Low.	Av'ge.
1905	7	2½	3¼	3¼	2	2½
1904	1¾	1	1⅛	2⅛	½	1⅝
1903	15	2	5½	8	1½	2½
1902	7	2½	4⅝	25	2	7¼
1901	7	2	4⅛	75	2	8⅛
1900	5	2	3⅛	3	1½	2

The May panic of 1901 was marked by an advance in call money to 75 per cent., and the average for that month was 8⅛ per cent. The flurry in the stock market in the Spring of 1902 was accompanied by an advance in call money to 25 per cent. The record for the month of April, which was not to any great extent affected by unfavorable movements in the stock market, offers a fairer comparison than the month of May, especially in those two years. It will be seen that the average rate for call loans in April, 1901 and 1902, was in excess of 4 per cent. Actual ease in the money market in April was recorded in only one year out of the past six, 1904, when the average rate was 1½ per cent. That year, however, offers no safe comparison with present conditions.

How far gold exports have influenced the position of the banks during these two months may be judged from the following figures, which show exports of gold from New York during the months of April and May:

GOLD EXPORTS IN APRIL AND MAY.

	April.	May.
1905	......	......
1904	$19,250,000	$41,000,000
1903	1,000,000	11,337,970
1902	2,518,089	......
1901	4,893,895	10,000,000
1900	1,490,000	10,250,000

The very heavy exports in 1904 are, of course, accounted for by the fact that it was in May of that year that payment was made by the United States Government for the property of the Panama Canal Company. This record of gold exports is particularly interesting in connection with the recent gold imports from Europe, and the prediction of some bankers that these will be largely increased in the near future.

THE STEEL TRADE POSITION.

Pittsburg Reports Output in Excess of New Orders—Iron Market Overstocked.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES

PITTSBURG, March 24.—The quietness of the Pittsburg iron and steel market this week has caused some comment and not a little uneasiness. There has not been a week in many months when matters were so quiet round the mills. True, all mills are running and steadily, but there is lacking the rush and dash which belong to a condition where the orders coming in daily are in excess of the capacity of the mills. A glance at the Pittsburg district to-night assures one of the fact that the output of the mills daily now is in excess of the orders coming in, and that for the first time in a long time there is hope that mills will get caught up with the order books. The orders which are coming in are small, and evidently for but what is needed from day to day by the trade.

The situation would seem to indicate strong hope among buyers that a slump in prices of iron and steel is not far distant, and all seem disposed to wait for it. Just why the slump should come has not yet been made plain, especially when the trade is facing what promises to be the biggest coal strike in history, and should this strike come it will likely be difficult to get iron or steel at any price. Yet the fact is painfully evident that the orders are not coming in to any great extent. In justice, however, it must be said that in most districts, even in the Pittsburg district, some years ago the orders now coming in would be considered as big business, but the Pittsburg mills have been so used to being overcrowded with orders that the present seems to them but a drop in the bucket.

The semi-official announcement made here that the United States Steel Corporation is preparing to run its own mines as non-union affairs in case the coal strike is declared has caused matters to look a little brighter, and the additional information from Colorado that the mines there can supply a certain amount of coal even to the Pittsburg district, in case of a wholesale miners' strike, allows the iron and steel interests to rest a bit more easy, yet the fact remains apparent that a coal strike will cripple the Pittsburg district the same as any other and badly.

The pig iron market is overstocked. The piles are increasing day by day. This is something unusual, and though the trade is putting on a brave front and quoting Bessemer at from $17.25 to $17.50 the buyer who will take a fair order can get it at a good bit less. The United States Steel Corporation during this week has really taken 5,000 tons of Bessemer at $17 flat. The statement is made that there are 80,000 tons of Bessemer pig yet unsold, this amount being almost equally divided between the Bessemer Furnace Association and outside interests. Basic pig is quoted at $17 flat, with but little demand.

In steel the market for the week has been but nominal. There has been little or no demand for this sort of stuff, and the mills are working on old orders. The market is expected to remain about the same—certainly will not go any higher for thirty days. Bessemer billets are quoted at $27, and open hearth at $28, early delivery being guaranteed in each case. Muck bar continues a drug on the market, the quotation being $29, but not a sale of importance was reported during the week. Less than this figure would take a heavy order it is thought. The rumor that the Chesapeake & Ohio Road is looking about for 5,000 cars has caused the plate market to keep up, as it is thought the order will come to Pittsburg. There is open rumor that the correct figures have not been made public regarding the bar market. The rating is $1.70 to $1.75, but those who should know affirm that what sales are now being made are at a figure somewhat below this, and that contracts expiring are being renewed at a low rate.

Largest daily exchanges on record at the New York Clearing House, $686,884,891, on Jan. 3, 1906, comparing with $598,537,409, the previous high record, made on May 10, 1901. Largest daily exchanges in 1905, $591,624,045, on May 2; in 1904, $498,400,787, on Dec. 2; in 1903, $500,430,954, on Jan. 2. The largest weekly New York clearings in 1905 were $2,347,246,026, in the week of March 4; in 1904, $2,299,046,043 in the week of Dec. 3. The largest weekly clearings on record were those of the week of May 11, 1901, when the total was $2,853,085,385. The heaviest monthly clearings last year were those for November, $8,542,670,211, comparing with the high record of $9,325,432,425, in May, 1901. The smallest daily clearings last year were on April 22, $123,636,237, and in 1904, $102,875,701, on April 11. The smallest weekly clearings in 1905 were $1,365,940,578 in the week of Aug. 12, and in 1904, $891,349,718 in the week of Feb. 27. The smallest monthly clearings in 1905 were those of June, $6,735,310,119, comparing with $4,429,805,002, the lowest total of 1904, made in February.

AN OLD-FASHIONED RAILROAD.

The Delaware & Hudson as an Example of Conservatism.

In its report for 1904 the Delaware and Hudson Company carried its mining plant on its books at $800,000. The plant, though without doubt fully maintained during the year, in the company's report for 1905, issued a week ago, was marked down to nothing by charging off $800,000 out of the year's earnings. This feature of the report served to draw more attention than usual to the known conservatism with which the Delaware and Hudson conducts its business.

It has often been said that a dollar for dividends and a dollar for improvements was the ideal method to follow in apportioning a railroad's earnings. The record of the Delaware and Hudson for the past three years shows that on the average it has put aside for improvement and depreciation more than a dollar for every dollar distributed in dividends.

The Delaware and Hudson may justly be called an old-fashioned railroad, with the full measure of encomium which has attached to that phrase ever since the watering of corporate capital came into extensive favor among promoters.

It is interesting to note in detail what the Delaware and Hudson has done during recent years in the matter of charges for depreciation and improvements. The following table shows the total charges of this kind since 1903, with the accounts to which the various sums were credited:

DELAWARE & HUDSON COMPANY.
AMOUNTS CHARGED OFF.

Depreciation of mining plant	$800,000	$1,500,000	$188,634
Equip. account	503,043	......	1,000,000
Coal sink'g fund	250,260	228,006	268,165
Sundry accounts	1,028,148	803,925	2,290,363
New railroad construction	......	......	284,243
Dividends on stock retired	73,325	59,971	41,503
Total	$2,655,376	$2,591,902	$4,072,908
Dividends	2,869,300	2,736,162	2,450,000

The item entitled "Sunday accounts" represents the amount charged off before closing the income account, and therefore before stating the net earnings. The other items were all deducted from the year's surplus earnings. The charges for depreciation and improvements were more than usually liberal in 1903, the year following the great anthracite strike.

Second Trans-Andean Line Planned.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Consul Mansfield writes from Valparaiso that new railroad projects are being considered by the Chilean Government and also by individuals, including another road across the Andes further to the south. The present trans-Andean line has been opened to Juncal, leaving only a thirty-mile gap over the Uspallata Pass, which is traversed by coaches in Summer to the Argentine side, where trains can again be boarded. Work on the tunnel is being pushed.

THE GROWTH OF BRITISH EMPIRE.

The abstract we gave yesterday morning of the larger results of the imperial census of Great Britain presents facts of intense interest to the student of modern history. FREEMAN was fond of saying, in substance, that history was past politics and politics is present history. The record of to-day is history in the making, and such a record as this census offers indicates the lines of development in the near future. An empire embracing one-fourth of the land area of the globe and more than one-fourth of its population, which has made such mighty expansion within a couple of generations, is an element in the evolution of the race almost without precedent. When we take it in connection with the remarkable growth of our own people, speaking the same language and under the influence of closely similar political ideas, its importance can hardly be exaggerated.

The most striking fact about this tremendous extension is that it has taken place with very little set purpose on the part of the people of the United Kingdom by whose Government it has been guided. We are not of those who think that British statesmen have drifted innocently and reluctantly into the control of the vast possessions now circling the globe. The images of the "weary Titan" and the "white man's burden" leave us indifferent and a trifle weary. Certainly from the time of ELIZABETH there have been but brief intervals when Great Britain was not striving, with force and arms, to extend her dominion, or in some struggle of defense, which usually has ended in extension. But it remains true that the great body of the English people, even of that minority taking an active interest in the affairs of Government, have known little and cared less for the general policy that has produced such impressive results. The people of the British Isles are but about one-tenth of the population of the empire, and it is hardly an exaggeration to say that not more than one-tenth of these have even a vague notion of the specific steps by which the British dominion, or jurisdiction, has been pressed in Asia and Africa, which now supply the bulk of the imperial population.

What, then, has been the force that has so long, so steadily, and so effectively exerted this pressure? No answer at once simple and adequate is possible. Broadly speaking, it is the native character of the blended races inhabiting the islands. Energy and self-reliance are the strongest traits, and these have sought and found their chief occupation in sea-borne trade, carrying the British to all shores, and, wherever they have touched, usually they have stayed and advanced. They are not exactly a martial race, and have not sought conquest, save for the protection and extension of their trade. And though their trade has marched often very far under their sheltering guns, it has also made still greater progress by entirely peaceful methods. NAPOLEON sneered at the British a century ago as a nation of shopkeepers. To-day the British Empire, vast and populous as that NAPOLEON conceived in his most sanguine dreams, is essentially a trading empire, while the fabric his ambition sought to found on force lives only in the histories in which British triumphs supply the most brilliant pages.

THE PUBLICITY BILL.

The favorable report from the Judiciary Committees of the Senate and the Assembly on the publicity bills relating to political contributions is an encouraging sign. The advocates of the bill regard it as extremely promising for the final passage of the bill. We cannot quite share this confidence, because we are aware of the great need the party in power is likely to have for campaign contributions in this State at the next canvass and also in the country at large for the Congressional elections, for which the sinews of war come so largely from this State. But even the aversion from practical reform kindled by this need may be overcome by the force of public opinion, and in this matter public opinion is certainly strong, and is being organized, quite without reference to party, in a most energetic fashion by the National association of which Mr. PERRY BELMONT is the leader.

Undoubtedly the New York bill would impose serious restrictions on campaign contributions if it is thoroughly administered. Look for a moment at its chief provisions. Every political committee spending as much as $200 in a campaign is required to keep detailed accounts of all its collections and disbursements, and these accounts must be filed. The statement filed must > in each case include the amount received, the name of the person or committee from whom received, the date of its receipt, the amount of every expenditure or disbursement exceeding $10, the name of the person or committee to whom it was made, and the date thereof; and unless such expenditure or disbursement shall have been made to another political committee, it shall state clearly the purpose of such expenditure or disbursement. If the aggregate receipts or disbursements of a political committee in connection with any election shall not exceed $200, the Treasurer of the committee shall, within twenty days after the election, certify that fact under oath to the Secretary of State.

If any person expends money for political purposes except through an authorized committee, he must file a like statement, save that personal expenses are exempted. Failure to comply with the provisions of the law is made a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment. Provision is made for an inquest by any Justice of the Supreme Court on petition by a prosecuting officer, by any candidate, or by ten electors. Especially important is the prohibition of payments for political parties by corporations, which is as follows:

> No corporation organized under the laws of New York, nor any corporation organized under the laws of any other State or of any Territory or of the United States, and doing business in the State of New York, shall directly or indirectly itself or through another person in any manner or form give or contribute money, property, transportation to any political party or to any candidate for any office or to any political organization or committee or to any individual to be used or expended for political purposes. Any corporation violating any of the provisions of this section shall forfeit and pay a fine of $1,000. Every officer, stockholder, Director, or employé of any such corporation who shall consent to or knowingly participate in any act in violation of this section shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

This bill was prepared by a law committee in which each party was represented by eminent counsel, such as Mr. SHEPARD, Mr. GROUT, and Mr. LAUTERBACH. Clearly it ought to pass.

THE ALBANY CLUB.

We have no desire to criticise the Albany Club's choice of a President. It is a matter for its own decision, and the decision reached on Saturday leaves no room for doubt as to the sentiment of the club. To paraphrase an old saying, if they want a President like Judge HAMILTON he is the kind of a President they want. But the action of the club makes one wonder how far the character and career of Mr. HAMILTON, as portrayed by himself and his associates in the New York Life Insurance Company, are really obnoxious to the community at large. If we are not mistaken, the late Mr. McCALL described the expenditures by Mr. HAMILTON as precluding specific vouchers, and he has himself volunteered the statement, in substance, that if detailed vouchers had been required of him, he should have declined his job. To the strict moralist expenditures that cannot definitely be vouchered do not seem proper for trust funds, and neither the custodian of the funds nor his disbursing agent is, on the plane of strict morality, deserving of confidence or respect. The Albany Club apparently thinks otherwise, and there is no reason to suppose that it is not above rather than below the general level of sensitiveness in such matters.

We have heard much lately of the demoralization due to concentrated wealth. Demoralization plainly there is. It really does not appear to be confined to the managers of corporations.

REGULATING EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES.

There is now before the Cities Committee of the State Senate Assembly Bill No. 1,290, known as the Prentice bill for the regulation of employment agencies. It is presented by the Woman's Municipal League, indorsed by the Child Labor Committee, by numerous philanthropic associations, and by the nurses and hospitals particularly interested in the condition of the unemployed and in guarding them from abuse.

There is also before committees of the Assembly and Senate a bill known as the Lee bill, relating to the same subject. We have received from Miss FRANCES A. KELLOR, General Director of the Inter-Municipal Committee of Household Research—an excellent organization for the study and betterment of domestic conditions—an analysis of the provisions of the two bills which shows the very decided superiority of the one first named. In the first place the Lee bill exempts from the control of the law one extensive employment bureau doing business in this city and in each of the cities of the second class in the State. In the second place the Lee bill, having originally placed the duty of its enforcement in the State Department of Labor, and the Chief of that department having opposed this provision, places the enforcement of the law in the Department of Agriculture. There is no necessity and no excuse for transferring this matter from the city to any State department, and it is simply ludicrous that it should be sent to the Department of Agriculture, especially as no appropriation is provided for the work, which, as estimated by the Department of Labor, would require at least $50,000 a year. This feature of the bill is a cynical admission that its provisions are not to be taken seriously.

There are a number of minor differences in the two bills which would make the Lee bill quite inadmissible, even if it were not to be condemned for the matters we have already noted. Some of these seem to favor agencies, others to oppress them. So far as we are able to judge, the Prentice bill is a very well considered and practical measure. While it is quite right that all interests affected should have a hearing, the Legislature may very safely be guided in the main by the intelligent and well-informed men and women who are backing this bill.

THE PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER.

Yesterday The Philadelphia Public Ledger completed its seventieth year. In connection with that interesting fact it took occasion to reprint from the first number of the paper the editorial article defining the intentions of its founders. These were three young printers who conceived the notion that an independent paper at one cent could be established profitably in Philadelphia in 1836. When we consider that this was the last year of the Presidency of ANDREW JACKSON and the eve of the worst business panic the country had witnessed, the fact that a paper independent of party could be and was founded and maintained is significant. Here is, in part, what The Ledger said in its first issue:

> Our object is to render it a vehicle of general and useful intelligence, adapted to the wants and interests of the community generally. While its cheapness places it within reach of the poorest artisan or laborer, we shall endeavor to furnish to the merchant and manufacturer the earliest and most useful information relating to their respective interests. * * * We shall give no place to religious discussions; nor to political discussions involving questions of merely partisan character. The Ledger will worship no men and be devoted to no parties. On all political principles and questions involving the common good it will speak freely, yet temperately. * * * While this paper shall worship no men, it shall vituperate none. It will be fearless and independent, applauding virtue and reproving vice wherever found, unawed by station, uninfluenced by wealth.

There has not, so far as we are aware, been any time in its career when The Public Ledger has not lived fairly up to the principles here declared, and it continues so to do. The standard is not an unusual one in these days; it was very unusual indeed seventy years ago; time has abundantly justified its adoption.

WHY CRIPPLE SAVINGS BANKS?

There is an especial reason why the savings banks of New York should not be discriminated against by the taxing power. In other States they are money-making institutions, having almost the freedom of investment of other banks. About one-half the States have no savings bank law. In all other States except New York, according to a statement by Mr. WOOD, the President of the Bowery Savings Bank, a savings bank may make loans upon collateral, or even upon personal credit, or promissory notes. In thirteen States simple indorsement is acceptable security. There are cases where even indorsement is not required, but loans may be made upon the single names and general credit of borrowers. Decidedly this laxity is not an example for imitation, but where it exists a case for taxation is made out. Such institutions have money-making capacity and opportunity excusing inclusion in any general tax scheme, even though the tax falls for the most part upon those of small resources.

New York savings banks are part of the charitable apparatus of the State. It has been said that they are the ounce of prevention which prevents the State being put to larger expense in its poorhouses. Moreover, New York savings banks cannot make a cent of profit for anybody except depositors. Their salary lists are unusually moderate, the highest priced services—those exercising discretion regarding investments—being gratuitous, by volunteer Trustees. For this reason it was the policy of the State until 1901 to lay no restrictions upon savings banks except those designed for the security of the trust. Those restrictions are the most stringent in the United States. No other State limits investments so closely as New York, with the result that no other State's savings banks have so much difficulty in earning a good rate of income for their depositors. There is no reason why this return should not be as large as is consistent with safe investment, for the money goes to those who need it, and there is a reason why a full return should be encouraged. Whenever the dividend decreases the money is withdrawn and put to speculative uses, often with sad results. Four per cent. protects the depositors against their own folly.

Now, New York savings banks have never been able to maintain a steady 4 per cent. rate. There are few if any which can maintain it without help from the surplus which they have accumulated in fat years, or by good investments, or by economy. A savings bank has a greater need of a surplus than an insurance company, and has a greater difficulty in getting it, for there are no such opportunities in the savings bank business as in insurance. A few dormant accounts, an aggregate of undivided fractions of annual earnings, an occasional fortunate sale of shrewdly bought securities, are about the only source of surplus, which is so far from overgrown that it falls near the 10 per cent. allowed to insurance companies in these reforming days.

The tax upon savings bank surplus was not levied because it ought to be reduced, but in pursuance of the policy whereby the State sought to provide for its expenses without any direct tax. For this sole reason a tax of 1 per cent. upon the surplus was levied, aggregating $750,000 yearly, say, one-half the total cost of administration of the banks, and all taken from those who cannot afford it, for the banks have no wealth of their own. For some inscrutable reason the tax is called a franchise tax, although the banks enjoy no franchise whatever, except the right to live. They occupy no streets, have no right of eminent domain, and cause the State no specific expense, certainly none for which they do not render full equivalent as first aids in prevention of pauperism. The mistake made in executing the policy of taxing everything in sight was soon recognized, and efforts for repeal have been made every year. Both parties are committed to repeal, Gov. HIGGINS twice recommended it, Bank Supt. KILBURN recommends it. The bill last year passed the Senate, but failed in the Assembly. It has now been favorably reported to the Senate. It ought to pass both houses this year, in which case it is sure of the Governor's signature. If it fails again two and a half millions of depositors will want to know the reason why this tax upon thrift cannot be got rid of.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Arrived With Clothes On. In the Missouri Society, naturally, there are many members, perhaps a majority, who were not born in the State whose glories they assemble annually to celebrate, and all such members must have had a special appreciation for the picturesque phrase in which Attorney General HADLEY explained his own right to speak as a Missourian. "I would emphasize," he said, "the satisfaction of us who came to Missouri with our clothes on. We do not have to share our glory with our ancestors." That puts the case with extreme neatness, but the statement is of wide application and suggests thought about the claim to superiority over the immigrant made by the "native" everywhere. That this superiority is everywhere claimed, and always has been, is good enough proof that it is one not entirely empty. To be native-born presupposes an early start in the attainment of such qualities, mental and physical, as are peculiarly desirable or valuable in any given place, and the best of opportunities for adaptation to local conditions, social and governmental. Yet, as the Attorney General said, those who come to a city, State, or country "with their clothes on" can vaunt their citizenship as a result of more or less deliberate and intelligent choice, instead of something determined by the accident of birth. They do it sometimes, perhaps, when the choice has been rather less than more deliberate and intelligent, but there must usually be some pretty fair reason for selecting one place instead of another when moving from one home to another. What we really cannot understand, however, is why the members of societies like that which dined Mr. HADLEY always speak of the region they have abandoned as if it were the earthly paradise. If that is true, what are they here for? New York has its attractions, but it certainly is not an earthly paradise, and it cannot compare with hardly any State or county in the hinterland—if we are to believe all that is so eloquently said at these banquets. If the members were entirely sincere, we suspect that a very large majority of them would confess that what they praise and regret is the memory of youth and that they are quite content to remain where they are. If they weren't, they wouldn't do it. We do not insist that after-dinner oratory should be too logical or even meticulously veracious, but we do wish that somebody at just one of these dinners would admit that New York has certain elements of grandeur, even in comparison with the country village where he was born.

Problems of Retirement. In discussing retirements for age, whether from military or civil positions, American Medicine calls attention to the usually forgotten fact that age is not a matter of years, but of condition, and that a man of 70, so far as ability goes, may show fewer signs of actual wear than one of 30 or 40. Indeed, the doctors know of rare cases in which children die, if not exactly of old age, at least of the bodily deteriorations which are properly called senile. "The question of premature senility," says this high authority, "has not been mentioned, [in the discussions of Congress,] but it should be, for it is the real cause of much inefficiency. In civil life the victim is merely thrust aside by the course of events; in military life he blocks them. The German Emperor dealt with the matter in a rough way some years ago, but it was effective. The British Navy is ruthless in retiring men who do not gain promotion soon enough, and the Japanese are imitating them. We will be required to follow, too, for our army and navy are to have active work for all time, by present indications. The problem is very complicated, for if favoritism is to be the plan adopted, one kind is as bad as another—indeed, military influence is the worst, for it favors the sycophant at the expense of the independent thinkers who are an insufferable nuisance to the martinet and the senile." The problem is more than complicated, since its solution requires the ruthless application of tests that in many instances will seem to lack ordinary humanity. The waning powers of a long-faithful servant or employé provide what is felt to be a poor excuse for discharging him, and yet his retention is often a hardship or an injustice as well as a cause of loss. Unfortunately, the worst of all judges of the extent to which the waning has gone is the possessor of the powers, and almost always his departure from the scene has to be assisted in one way or another.

Car Fares at a Reduction. Again the suggestion has come up, this time in the shape of a bill in the Assembly, that the New York transportation companies should be compelled to sell six fare tickets for 25 cents. That reduction from the regular price is, or has been, tried in many cities, but we do not know that statistics are available to show how many people take advantage of the opportunity for economy thus provided. Here, however, the plan would have advantages for the public in addition to those that are financial. Its adoption would much decrease the crowds around the ticket windows of the elevated and Subway roads, and thus remove the cause of one class of our daily delays. Not a few people already buy their tickets in quantities larger or smaller, some investing as much as a dollar at a time, and they find that it adds greatly to their convenience and the preservation of their tempers. More would make such purchases if there were an actual saving in it, and that would make it better for us all—except, possibly, for the companies. It is not quite sure, however, that even their losses would be as large as a computation in percentage might indicate. They would get a lot of money "in advance," and then in the course of a year not a few tickets would be lost or destroyed, and that would all be clear gain. Why don't the roads try the experiment of selling eleven tickets for half a dollar? This, done of their own initiative, might head off the six-for-a-quarter movement.

SPARE THE SILENT LETTERS.

An Argument Against the Proposed Changes of the Spelling Reformers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

However fair the Judge it goes hard with the prosecuted if they have no attorney. The silent letters of our language stand to-day in this predicament. Hated by the populace they are cited before the stern but just tribunal of public opinion, and I cannot find it in my heart to let my pen rest before I have made some small attempt to obtain justice for them. The accusation on which they are cited before this august tribunal is twofold, firstly, that they have neglected the duties of their high office in that they have not fulfilled the functions of letters—that they exist as ornaments or as links with the past, or as the reminders of the origin of words, but not as written expressions of sounds, which is their true function. Secondly, that they are defrauders of the public, in that they falsely pretend a word is pronounced in one way when in reality it is pronounced in another.

As attorney for the defense I plead on behalf of my clients "Not guilty." Moreover, I file countercharges against the accusers.

I accuse the public of high treason in that they disobey the mandates of these high officers of state—these Honorable Letters. And I prove my charge by citing facts which cannot be controverted. The said public have unuttered sounds, which the letters order them to utter; for example, the r in ardent, the k in know, the b in lamb. In other words they too often utter sounds other than those they are ordered to utter. For instance, "Warren" pronounces the second vowel in language as if it had been i, whereas it is long a unaccented. He pronounces o soft f (of) like uv. Or to leave the false pronunciations of this kind, even the educated man of to-day pronounces great as if in place of ea had been written the long a. This last pronunciation is, of course, "correct," i. e., it is according to usage. But would it not be much more reasonable to conform the pronunciation of this word to the spelling and not the spelling to the pronunciation? The pronunciation great is historical, the modern pronunciation of very recent date.

From "Warren's" letter it appears he would "fire" the e met at the end of words like life. This e in a sense is unsounded. Still it is fulfilling the functions of its office in that it is a true indication of sound. Without the e the word would be lif, and its dismissal would therefore lead to confusion. It is a very convenient method, and proper to the English language to indicate quantity in this way.

There are a few instances in our language where spelling and pronunciation disagree through false orthography. In nine out of ten modern dictionaries the word which expresses what this august tribunal will have shortly to pronounce is spelled judgment—an unpronouncable jumble of letters. The editor of the new English Dictionary has boldly protested against this, which he calls an "unscholarly habit," and which he truly says is "against all analogy, etymology, and orthoepy."

On behalf of my clients I pleaded "Not guilty." With the permission of the court, however, I would amend my plea, for there are instances in which the letters are guilty. For example, I know no reason why shoe should be pronounced sho, and if the attorneys for the other side desire I will consent to a verdict in favor of shu. But I still maintain that in general my clients are innocent of the charges preferred against them, and their accusers guilty of attempting to perpetuate mispronunciation. W. E. BYLES.

"His Glassy Essence."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's TIMES a letter under the above caption by William C. Miller, in reply to Mr. L. P. Smith's query, speaks of the "real material question having entered the realm of idealism." Why it should I fail to perceive. In "Measure for Measure," Act II., Scene 2, Isabella is I wot plain and simple with Shakespeare's fine originality. Take the context and it needs no college student or cryptogramist to unravel the meaning, the right meaning, of "his glassy essence." What has a ghost to do with "his glassy essence—like an angry ape"? Are apes and ghosts allied? I am no scholar, but—acquainted with local idioms of the land giving to Shakespeare his marvelous treasury of them—permit me to say that the Justices Shallows and the Lowsie Lucys were before his imagination at the time he wrote Isabella's speech on "proud man drest in a little brief authority," and that "his glassy essence" meant nothing more or less than his fiery passion or anger, which the great immortal bard likens, and rightly likens, to a senseless, angry, jabbering ape. Charles Darwin's prototypes—Shakespeare, in his day, anticipated the genus, in Isabella's speech, showing his glassy, vitreous nature "playing such fantastic tricks." Keep to the text of the best old editions and let the know-it-alls be therewith content, is the ardent desire of the writer, who realizes that Shakespeare learned of the world and not in college. Germany's Foreign Obligations.

From The London Chronicle.

Germany's holding of foreign obligations totals about £800,000,000, or four times the amount of the French war indemnity—a striking instance of the enormous rate at which the wealth of the empire has accumulated in recent years. This figure has been cited as a reply to the contention that financial stress would restrain Germany from a great war owing to the difficulty of realizing all this money. It is forgotten that the empire has a war-chest fund of £6,000,000 which was set apart from the French milliards against the coming of another evil day. This enormous sum in gold has been lying for the last thirty-five years in the Julius Tower at Spandau.

QUESTIONS FOR JEROME.

By a Soldier of Two Campaigns, Who Now Is in Doubt.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you publish the following open letter to District Attorney Jerome?

Dear Mr. District Attorney:

I heard your appeals from party powers and party cliques and political caucuses and grafters' associations and "systems" and "bosses," to the people themselves. I caught the meanings of your promises for the uprooting of evil in our midst; for the destruction of those who had blasted our homes; for the punishment of those who had robbed us and proved unfaithful; for the purifying of our law and the dignifying of its servants; and for the upholding of your own faith to do all these with us, by us, and for us.

I felt you were of those noble soldiers who served a great King. I lifted up my hands to the heavens and thanked them that he whose coming we had awaited in hope had now arrived. And I enlisted in the army of your squires—the many thousands who believed and prayed with me.

We were with you in your two battles—very strenuously in the second—and with our help you won. The night was changed to rosy morning ere we left the field rejoicing, after that great day last November.

Four long months have passed since that fateful night, and already the air is filled with uneasy murmurings. In this our country, and these our days, events occur with startling rapidity. We are living in a period of transition, and each day we are making history. The law stands blindly waiting your ready guiding hand and above all your just direction—for it was that you pledged yourself to do, and for that we fought for you. How have you fulfilled your promise? And how have we been justified in our allegiance?

It is true that we ask these questions somewhat quickly on the heels of the fight; but the events that have happened are of unusual import, and the law must be swift to bind or free. Moreover, many of the events had been shadowed forth in your previous administration.

What have you done, Mr. District Attorney, to challenge the right of the great insurance companies to buy Legislatures with money placed in their trust?

What have you urged, Mr. District Attorney, to emphasize the justice that lies in the results of the insurance committee's inquiries?

What have you moved, Mr. District Attorney, to free the deeds and reputations of the captains of insurance industry, if they are innocent, from the shame and disgrace that have been cast on them?

Whom among these have you punished, Mr. District Attorney, if these are guilty?

How have you dealt, Mr. District Attorney, with the scandals that have arisen out of the Tillinghast confession?

What have you answered, Mr. District Attorney, to the just and reasonable requests made by those who helped you, for the sources of the moneys of your campaign?

What replies, Mr. District Attorney, do you make to each and to all of these questions?

None? Aye, there is one answer, and it comes but at this moment, in words that indignantly repudiate the law as interpreted by one of the city's leading Justices solemnly advising a Grand Jury of your fellow-citizens.

Can this be the same voice that rang in all the highways of this metropolis and re-echoed throughout the land, but a few months ago? Is this the man who appealed from the lawbreakers to the lawmakers, that derided "bossism," satirized "systems," and anathematized grafters and bribers?

And the faith pledged? What of that?

> Is this the noble nature
> Whom passion could not shake? Whose solid virtue
> The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
> Could neither graze nor pierce?

Aye, Iago's words follow: "He is much changed." Mr. District Attorney, you have surely fallen from grace. It must be that the gods are of a truth playing their ancient comedy with us as puppets and you as protagonist, so that we may sift some truth from your error and gather deep wisdom in the footsteps of your foolishness!

And yet I thought you rang true! Have we all of us been outwitted, or is it that success has shaken you for a space and puddled your clear spirit? For we are profoundly told that > in such cases

> Men's natures wrangle with inferior things
> Though great ones are their object.

I am in doubt. And because of this doubt I sign myself,

Yours faithfully still,
SPES.

HOMES OF THE ENGLISH.

Privacy They Have That American Flats Do Not Afford.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The latest article by "An Englishwoman in New York" brings back to me recollections of the old country and my parents' home in London. The only fault I have to find with New York is the living. As the author says, the lack of privacy is surprising to a newcomer, and, indeed, shocking, but, like all things, you soon get used to it.

Her remark about the husband's den is amusing but true. There was not a room in the old house which inspired us with so much awe as my father's "sanctum," and I vividly remember how, when children, we all used to creep past the door on tiptoe, so as not to attract the attention of its occupant. This room was always locked, whether its occupant was in or out, and if it was ever renovated is hard to say. I cannot remember very well all the things that were in it, but a spirit of comfort prevailed such as could not be found outside this one room in the house.

It also had the advantage of presenting a very stern aspect when desired, especially on occasions when we were asked in. I well recollect the only time I played truant from school and the consequences—which I received there.

When all is said and done, I think both countries are on a par, for both do their best for their families, and have so many good qualities which are not appreciated by a visitor till the novelty has worn off. If there were as many flats in London as in New York, life would be similar in each city, but surely one cannot be called inferior to the other because it adapts itself to the condition in the best possible way, and every one will agree each does.

People in New York must not think that articles written by Britishers try to belittle them, for they have only to go to London to find that they have no greater admirers than the English. The articles of the "Englishwoman" in THE TIMES are pleasant reading, and their comparisons are interesting and instructive. It is my hope that we shall continue to enjoy them in Sunday's issue for a long while to come. D. H.

MISUSE OF PUBLIC FUNDS.

The Delegation of Governmental Functions to Private Societies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great interest the daily reports of the trouble in the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It seems to me that those who are looking for reform overlook the most important point, which is the real cause of the whole trouble—that is, the vicious system of delegating governmental functions to private societies and intrusting them with the expenditure of public funds. The result has been both arbitrary action on the part of the officers of the societies and probably misuse of the funds raised by taxation.

The records of the courts of this county are full of instances where children were separated from their parents through the stubbornness or the arbitrary action of agents of the Gerry society. The only remedy is to repeal the laws intrusting to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the Society for the Suppression of Vice, and the Gerry society their present powers and taking away from them the public funds. The functions exercised by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Gerry society could be well intrusted to the Health Department under the care of a Superintendent in charge of a bureau created for the purpose in this city and proper officials elsewhere, while the suppression of vice could be delegated to some other city department. The intrusting of too much power to private individuals always leads to abuse, especially where it is uncontrolled, as it is in this city. L. A. MALKIEL.

Are Irishmen Socialists?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to a headline in to-day's TIMES the Irish are no Socialists, said Mayor McClellan. He has evidently seen fit to parrot the statement made a short time ago by Congressman Bourke Cockran in Carnegie Hall (if memory serves me right) that the philosophy of Socialism does not appeal to the Irish. While it is true that the Irish in this city have not as yet flocked to the standard of the working-class party in overwhelming numbers, it is hardly fair to the progressive element in the Irish laboring population of this city to say that they are not well represented in the Socialist movement.

In one Assembly district taken at random the number of enrolled Socialist voters in 1905 was 150 per cent. greater than in 1904, food for reflection to those who think that by a policy of misrepresentation the progress of the Socialist movement can be permanently and successfully impeded. In this Assembly district 25 per cent., or one-fifth, of the enrolled Socialist voters in 1905 were Irishmen. In 1901 the Irish represented 12½ per cent. of the whole number of enrolled Socialists in this district, showing a steady increase.

According to the last census the percentage of Irish in the foreign-born population of New York City is 21.7 per cent., which shows that the Irish element is nearly, if not quite, proportionately represented in the Socialist Party.

Need for More Fire Drills.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Fires which have occurred in factories and hotels in the city during the past week have been accompanied by occurrences which would seem to be absolutely inexcusable.

The clothing factory in the loft building in Bleecker Street seems not to have made any preparation for a fire, which could occur at any time. When it finally did come the men took to the firescapes, which had no connections between the lowest balcony and the ground, and then they jumped to the sidewalk and broke their legs and arms and otherwise maimed themselves. The factory fire in Pearl Street, the second within a year, was accompanied by the same experiences as happened at the previous fire.

Now that the advantages of fire-drills in factories and hotels are becoming so well known the best concerns and houses have adopted them, and there can be no excuse for such occurrences as those above mentioned. J. C.

An Answer for "C. L. L."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of to-day, under the heading of "Question of Business Etiquette," "C. L. L.," a knight of Brooklyn, asks enlightenment on an argument conceived evidently under the influence of "Budweisser Steam" at high pressure, for every office youngster knows that in the wholesale houses it is customary to express regret for any bereavement that may befall any of their clients or families if brought to the house's notice.

In large retail houses, however, this is not in vogue, (in the United States,) as their clientele is so extended that it would be necessary to maintain a large staff of regretters to express condolence for all those who have departed. Hence, in retail houses things are confined strictly to the business end.

Constant Danger from Naphtha.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As long as the city allows the use of naphtha in the manufacturing of illuminating gas must we expect just such explosions as occurred yesterday. The whole earth is saturated with the odor of it. Houses are filled at times by it. Sickness wholly attributable to it is caused—nausea and acute indigestion of one person at least has been caused by it. It only needs the spark and the pent-up fumes to blow up manholes and houses. To whom shall we go to have conditions changed unless to the press?

Warm Approval for Jerome.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It does one's heart good to hear District Attorney Jerome's brave, honest, even if homely talk. There is more genuine American spirit of fair play and justice in what he thinks and says than in all the combined bellowing of yellow press, hungry demagogues, and the ignorant rabble and mob.

THE POST CARD EVIL.

When Bessie's parlor car sped east,
Forlorn, I watched it out of sight;
My heart was sore; but I had hope—
Bess said that she "would write."

In just six days a post card came.
It bore, to my chagrin,
The message, "Having splendid time,"
O'er "City Hall at Lynn."

Twelve pages with love's protests sad
I spent the night to fill.
Soon came the tidings, "Yours rec'd,"
With "Shaft at Bunker Hill."

"Farewell!" I wrote. "You love me not!
That fact is plain, Miss Bly.
Unless some token I receive
I am resolved to die!"

To-day two cards the postman brought.
Now, what can they imply?
One pictures Salem's "Lover's Leap";
One is "The Bluff at Rye"!

DR. SHEARER HAS A PLAN FOR FLEXIBLE GRADING

Ready to Demonstrate It in Any School, He Says.

A PLIANT SYSTEM NEEDED

Superintendent of Schools of Elizabeth in His Third Paper Says the "Lock-Step" Can Be Abolished.

Consider the opinion of other Superintendents on this subject.

Several years ago, under the direction of the United States Commissioner of Education, a number of questions bearing on this subject were sent to the Superintendents of several hundred cities. To these questions, 565 answers were received. The result of this investigation is given briefly:

One question asked was whether the class interval should be long or as short as possible; less than 14 per cent. favored the long class interval.

Another question was whether, with the long interval, the result is not that "the bright pupils are held back and not given work enough to develop their capacity, while the teacher is obliged to expend the greater part of his time on the slow and less competent pupils?" Less than 7 per cent. answered "No" to this question. Not 7 per cent. of 565 dared defend the usual plan, though, at that time, most of them were using it. Not 7 per cent. could deny that with the long interval "the bright pupils are held back and not given work enough to do to develop their capacity"; yet this plan is still in use. It seems past belief, but it is only too true.

Hinders the Whole School.

Another question was whether or not, with the longer interval, "the progress of the whole school is kept down to the pace of the slowest and weakest pupils"? Less than 9 per cent. say that the usual plan does not compel all to walk in intellectual lock-step with the slowest pupils. Is it not time that every person responsible for the organization of schools not only favors a change to some more sensible method, but also works earnestly for the establishment of a more rational plan?

Still another question was, "Does not this system discourage the less mature and sluggish minds of a class, while it wastes the opportunities of the brighter ones?" Less than 9 per cent. were willing to deny that this plan does "discourage the less mature and waste the opportunities of the bright minds," and yet this method survives.

Superintendents, Principals, members of Boards of Education, teachers, and friends of the schools, in the name of the long-suffering children, consider the answers of these educators, and see to it that there is provided some plan which will not crush the intellectual life out of the children.

I am sure that Dr. Maxwell fully appreciates the great importance of this subject, for ten years ago, while Superintendent of Brooklyn, at his request, I sent him a copy of The Atlantic Monthly containing my discussion on this subject and the remedy. Statements made by him since, as well as remarks in his reports, show that his interest is still alive. Since the meeting spoken of below, and my series of articles on the subject in The Philadelphia Ledger, he stated at a banquet that he has a plan which will improve conditions. Let us hope that he has.

Dr. Edson for Flexible Grading.

Last December I had striking proof that Dr. Edson is also deeply interested in this most vital problem. At his invitation, I attended a meeting of Brooklyn teachers and Principals, for which meeting the subject of "Better Grading" had been assigned. Eight or ten had been appointed to investigate the Elizabeth and other plans of flexible grading. After hearing what others had to say, Dr. Edson asked those who were following the usual plan to raise their hands. Every hand was raised. He then said: "You are all wrong. You are as bad in Brooklyn as we are in New York. The time has come when we must provide some such plan as that which has been described."

This was a frank, fearless, noble acknowledgment, made by one who has few superiors among educational experts. It will be a happy day for the children when all those in similar positions speak thus bravely and wisely.

For fifteen years I have endeavored to awaken interest in the necessity of providing greater flexibility in the work of the public schools. This effort to provide greater flexibility in the work of the higher grades, and more elasticity in the method of classification in all the grades, was made because of the conviction that American children have a right to expect that, in the higher grades, the work should be suited to their tastes and their needs, and that in all the grades, from the lowest to the highest, they should be left free to go as far and as fast as individual ability and opportunity will permit.

If any of the defects mentioned can be traced to the course of study, the lack of school accommodations, the need of more time for essentials, or to any other similar causes, the proper remedies may be quickly and easily applied by those in authority.

Steps Must Be Provided.

Far more pressing and difficult than all these is that there be provided such a plan of organization as will make it possible to give each that instruction which is adapted to the ability, need, and advancement of each. This means that it must be easily possible for the Principal and teacher to reclassify at any time, that they may keep pupils working with those of about equal advancement. It is not enough to allow it to be done; a plan must be provided. It is one thing to be willing to allow a child to attempt the impossible feat of jumping from the street to the floor on which he lives; a much more sensible way is to place stairs, so that he may reach his home by carefully graded steps.

If space permitted, it would be instructive to consider five plans of organization which, by their results, have proved utterly useless in removing the grievous defects to be found in our public schools. These plans are valuable in that, from the experience of others, we learn what not to do.

Is it possible, then, to have a more flexible plan of organization which will combine the advantages of the individual and class system of instruction? Is it possible to give more attention to individual needs, without endangering the interests of the masses? Can the work be suited to the ability of the pupils, so that all may go just about as fast as it is best for them? Is it possible to have a system which will exist, not for itself, but for the proper development of the children in the schools?

Satisfactory Plan Is Possible.

Too many have been ready to accept as final negative answers to these questions. That such a plan cannot be secured by a single step, even though it be a long one in the right direction, is amply proved by the experiments made by many earnest educators. However, it may be asserted, without fear of successful contradiction, that it is possible to have a satisfactory plan if those whose duty it is to do so will study this problem with the care and persistency which its importance warrants.

What, then, are the primary requisites of a more pliant plan of organization, which will make it possible to suit the work to the pupils, in place of compelling the teachers to everlastingly strive to force the pupils to fit an arbitrary and senseless system? The important requisites are but three. Any plan which meets all of these three conditions will prove a satisfactory method of organization.

Any plan which fails to meet any one of the three cannot possibly be satisfactory. Not one of these conditions is met by the system of organization in use in this city at the present time, yet there is not a school in this or in any other city which cannot easily meet every one of these conditions. I stand ready to prove this statement by actual demonstration if called upon to do so.

Accurate Classification Needed.

Accurate classification of pupils is the first requisite of a proper plan of organization. To no teacher should be sent any pupils not fully competent to take up the work required of the class. I trust this will be accepted as self-evident. If it is questioned by any one, I shall be pleased to give it attention later.

After Feb. 1 every class contained a division of those just promoted to the advanced work and a division of those left behind, though these had been over all the work which the whole class is supposed to accomplish during the next half year. What an injustice to pupils to compel them to be thus so unequally yoked!

For years pupils have been tormented by being placed with those of unequal advancement, yet it was said they were classified. Now it is rightly demanded that they be placed with their peers, that their progress may be more certain. No more will it be acceptable to condemn pupils as dunces because they are not sufficiently advanced to keep up with their companions. They must be placed where their ability and their attainment make it possible for them to do good work.

Another all-important requisite is that such provision be made for reclassification that pupils of about equal advancement can be kept together. It is not sufficient to merely start with accurate classification. In the past many, in addition to those in this city, have made a mistake in supposing that this would answer. Such is not the case. No plan of organization can justly claim consideration unless it makes it possible to keep the pupils working with those of equal attainments. A hundred different determining factors influence the progress of the individuals of a class. Hence arises the need of providing for such a readjustment of pupils as to make it possible to place individuals where they can work to the best advantage and receive the greatest good from the instruction.

Must Conform to Changing Needs.

Reclassification is the only means of saving the pupils from the blighting effects of defective grading. For this reason the feasibility of reclassification is the most important test of any method of grading. This is the secret of any flexible plan of organization which is intended to suit the needs of the children instead of compelling them to fit Procrustean beds of grades. This truth should be kept constantly in mind by those who are studying this problem, for the greatest defect of the usual method is found in the fact that the reclassification of pupils between the times for regular promotion is almost impossible.

Indeed, the usual plan of grading seems built upon the supposition that pupils will go together month after month and year after year without diverging in attainments or in ability. That they cannot do so all intelligent observers must admit. That the schools fail utterly to provide for reclassification to meet the needs of the children, none will dare deny.

Another important feature of a rational plan of organization must be a provision that will enable each division of pupils to go just as fast as the teacher finds the pupils are able to accomplish the work as it should be done, and not faster. No fixed amount of work should be demanded of any class within a given time. The schools have the work so apportioned that a fixed amount of the course must be finished by the end of the term. This is a serious error. Without uniformity of conditions it demands uniformity of results, and makes the time limit the same for all, no matter how widely the pupils, classes, and teachers differ.

Is this not an unpardonable pedagogical sin? Is it not absolutely defenseless on any psychological grounds? In all frankness, does it not indicate the lack of the commonest kind of common sense? These seem to be harsh questions, but does not the occasion justify plain talk?

Who will give any good reason for "nailing the course of study to the calendar"? Why should advancement to suitable work be determined by the time of the year? Why should some pupils stop their work, though uncompleted, simply because others have finished it? If one starts on a journey, he should not leave the train when the schedule says the time has arrived for him to reach the end of his journey, but when he has reached his destination.

The Result of Marking Time.

In the schools at the present time, if pupils finish the work, they must risk mental and moral ruin by marking time until the overworked teacher, by extra attention before school, after school, and during school, has infused the necessary knowledge into the slowest.

Working beyond their depths, as many are, this can scarcely be accomplished without a surgical operation. If a whole class has satisfactorily covered the prescribed course, all must wait until the end of the term before being permitted to take up the work of the next grade. Since this is the case, is it any wonder that there is an enormous, unnecessary, criminal loss of time?

Is it any wonder that with 87,000 pupils in the first grade but 84,000 reach the second, 82,000 the third, 73,000 the fourth, 61,000 the fifth, 45,000 the sixth, 31,000 the seventh, and but 24,000 the eighth? What a fall from 87,000 in the first to 24,000 in the eighth!

In spite of the fact that many new pupils will enter each grade yearly, the number leaving will necessarily be much greater. Again, it must be remembered that these figures do not mean quite what they say, for the reason that each year the number of pupils entering the lowest grade is considerably increased.

In spite of this fact, it must be acknowledged that an average annual loss of 8,000 is far greater than it should be.

WILLIAM J. SHEARER.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

An arrangement was completed yesterday between James K. Hackett and Harry L. Hamlin, Manager of the Grand Opera House, Chicago, whereby Mr. Hackett will control that house for twenty-five consecutive weeks for his attractions next year.

The programme for the Sunday night concert at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre didn't contain the announcement last night that the concert was for the benefit of Mount Sinai Hospital or any other institution. It was a plain "sacred concert."

Papinta, the mirror dancer, who has been touring South Africa, arrived in New York on the American liner New York yesterday morning. She comes for another vaudeville tour.

SOME SOCIALISM NEEDED, ROBERT HUNTER SAYS

He Divides the Problem of Poverty Into Three.

BREAD-LINE NEAR HOPELESS

Robert Hunter, in his address on "The Heritage of the Hungry" before the West Side Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday afternoon at the Majestic Theatre, divided the poor into three classes. He discussed first the almost hopeless men of the "bread-lines," then those who are in hard straits and can yet help themselves, and, last, the unskilled laborers, always on the verge of want, as typified by the workers in the Chicago stockyards. Of this last grade the most appalling question is the toil of their children.

He illustrated the almost hopeless class by the crowd that collects at the junction of Broadway and Fifth Avenue and waits in the storms, huddled together for warmth, for the arrival of the wagon from which bread and coffee are doled out. "They," he declared, "are in the abyss of present-day civilization, and, either too lazy to work or crippled so that they cannot work, seem the almost irreclaimable of society.

"The same day I saw another line waiting for work shoveling snow. Some, no doubt, had fallen from better things to this, but they were self-reliant and determined, and asked for work. Some had eviction notices or children crying for bread at home, but they were trying to do what they could, and there was hope for them.

"There is another large class, the unskilled common laborers, who are out of employment for long periods at a time, and are almost constantly underfed and badly clothed and housed. Yet if it were not for them the world could not get its work done.

"The Chicago stockyards have thousands of them. I saw Mr. Roosevelt the other day for three hours. He was terribly stirred up about the Beef Trust. He is trying to indict it for breaking the law. He knows it is like any other criminal, yet it is not like, for, somehow, it is impossible to obtain a conviction against it.

"Nearly all the work of the Charity Organization Society in Chicago is with the wretched population that works in its stockyards. The men are crippled with rheumatism, the women die of consumption, and the girls who go to work at fourteen are utterly worn out at eighteen. These are honest, sober working people, who, with all their toil, are little better off than the paupers I have described. They earn $6 a week, and the slightest accident or ill-health makes paupers of them.

"It is the condition of the children that is the terrible part. Probably half of them die before they are 5 years old, and the rest are set to work at 11 or 12 in these awful factories. The most serious indictment against modern civilization is the sacrifice of children it demands.

"I have been asked if I think Socialism is the cure for these evils. As we do not know what state Socialism would bring about, we cannot say. But I am sure that certain Socialistic measures are necessary. We need municipal tenements as they have in Liverpool, Birmingham, and London, where the children will have healthful surroundings, plenty of places to play, and there are no landlords to exact profits.

"Other places have nationalized the coal fields, and the poor get coal at cost. At Rochester, in England, the death rate has been cut down one-half by the municipalization of the milk supply, and the children of the poor, instead of the pale-blue poison they used to have, get a fine, healthful food. These are Socialistic measures, and every advance we make is toward Socialism."

The Chairman of the meeting, Homer Pope, invited those present to sign petitions in favor of the amendment of the probation law so as to allow the pay of probation officers and to prohibit policemen from serving in that office. He explained that it was necessary to have men regularly employed as probation officers, because the work was heavy, and the general attitude of the police, that it is hopeless to expect the reform of any criminal, was the reverse of that needed in a probation officer.

WITH ELMENDORF IN SPAIN.

Last of Sunday Evening Travel-Talks at Carnegie Hall.

Dwight Elmendorf delivered the last of his series of Sunday evening travel talks last night in Carnegie Hall. He selected a picturesque subject—"Spain, Avila to Grenada"—and with the assistance of colored views and realistic motion pictures carried his audience with him through many beautiful Moorish cities of Old Spain. He showed Avila—the old stronghold of the Moors—Cordova, with its magnificent museum; the royal palace at Madrid and the ancient capital of Toledo, and finally Grenada, the home of that last monument of the once all-powerful Moors, "The Alhambra."

Notable among the pictures were some fine reproductions of the famous old masters in the gallery of the Prado.

At the close of the season Mr. Elmendorf will go to Panama, Old Mexico, and South America to collect material for a series of lectures to be delivered in Carnegie Hall next year.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The Controller of the Currency and Mrs. Ridgly, who recently returned from their honeymoon travels in the South, entertained at their first large dinner this evening. The occasion was in honor of Baron and Baroness Bussche of the German Embassy, who sail for Europe this week on an extensive leave of absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont also entertained at dinner this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Ripley of New York are the guests of Mrs. Ripley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Bell, who entertained a small dinner company in their honor this evening.

The Vice-President has issued invitations to a dinner on April 6 in honor of Levi P. Morton. Mrs. Morton is observing a day at home and welcoming many new as well as old friends to her Rhode Island Avenue home, but is not otherwise taking any part in society, and being in mourning declines all invitations.

The chief social interest of the week will centre at Benning, where the Spring meeting of the Washington Jockey Club opens to-morrow. Mrs. Longworth, who has been one of the most enthusiastic visitors to the pretty little club house every afternoon of the racing season, is expected to be there, while among the numerous other matrons and maids awaiting the coming of the horses with great interest are the Baroness and Mme. Moncheur des Portes, Mrs. Hugh Legare, Mrs. George Howard, Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., Mrs. E. A. Mitchell, Mrs. J. H. Merriam, Mrs. Maus, Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth, Miss Elkins, Miss Claggett, Miss Mattingly, Miss Mabel Merriam, the Misses Patten, Miss Wallace, Miss Alice Warder, Miss Wallace, and Miss Colton.

TOM JONES GOT IN.

And the Long-Named Spaniard Was Shut Out—He's "Aleck Punt" Now.

Two newspaper reporters, one representing a publication printed in Spanish and the other an agent of a sheet printed in English, sent their cards to a widely known and busy broker at the Waldorf-Astoria recently. The name of the Spanish reporter on his card was:

ALEJANDRO TOMAS SIMEON MARIANO DE LAS MERCEDES GONZALEZ DEL PUENTE.

The American's cards read something like this:

TOM JONES.

The busy broker scanned the two cards for a moment, and then said to the messenger:

"Tell Mr. Jones that I shall be glad to see him; but my time is brief and [indicating the Spanish name] I don't think I'll be able to see the other crowd of gentlemen."

The next day the Spaniard wrote his card in this fashion:

ALECK PUNT.

And when he presented it to the broker he was received promptly and obtained a two-column interview.

MIXED THE LETTERS ALL UP.

Visitor from Up State Sees Queer Things in Sixth Avenue.

A near-sighted old man, newly arrived in town from up State via the Grand Central Station, walked west in Forty-second Street Saturday afternoon, turned north into Sixth Avenue, and got to Forty-third Street just as the electricians at the Hippodrome were repairing the electric letters which announce the showhouse to be

THE NATIONAL THEATER

Regardless of the orthographical effect of their manoeuvres the electricians were removing and replacing the letters in spots. The old man looked up and then stepped off to view the sign. This is what it read:

THE NAT EATER

"What sort of a new-fangled performance is all this?" asked the venerable man of a stranger.

"Search me," responded the other. "Look at that; it's a brand new game they're putting up on us." The old man looked again and saw this:

HE ATE

"My, they must be trying out another of those durned moving picture signs; look at that." Then he pointed to the next development, which was:

THE N I ATE

The old man shook his head dubiously and waited for more. He got it in this fashion:

THE NATIONAL HEATER

"Umph!" ejaculated the visitor as he walked off, "that beats anything I ever saw. Wonder what this here 'National Heater' is, anyhow? "I reckon," he added sagaciously, "it must be the machine that produces all the hot air those fellows down in Congress are getting rid of."

THEY WORK THE TICKET MAN.

Some of the Fareless Ones Pay Up Again, but Not Many.

"Would you kindly let me pass through? I haven't got a penny with me," pleaded a would-be passenger last night at the uptown Subway station in Times Square.

The ticket seller glanced him over.

"You can't pass without a ticket," replied the agent. "If I let you do that I'd risk my job; if I give you a ticket I must trust to you to reimburse me."

The man took the ticket with profuse thanks and dropped it into the chopper.

"How often does it happen?" asked a TIMES reporter.

"Plenty of 'em every day," replied the agent, "and most of 'em are women."

"Do they come back with the money?"

"Sometimes, but not often," he replied. "But what can a fellow do when a pretty woman pokes her nose into his window and says she hasn't the price? I just look 'em over carefully and try to tell whether they are fakers or not. Still, some of the fakers are so pretty that I can't help running the chance. Why, plenty of 'em pass in $50 bills on me, and when I tell them I can't make the change they melt into tears. You would think that a woman with $50 wouldn't do you out of 5 cents, but they do, all the same.

"Strange to say, it is the nice, gentlemanly looking man or the handsomely dressed women that do me. They may forget to pay back, but whatever the reason may be, it is up to the ticket seller to pay."

ALL DAY'S DAYS GOOD DAYS.

And He's the Longest Day of All, Being 6 Feet 4.

One of the best-known and best-liked policemen in the Broadway Squad is Policeman Day, 6 feet 4 inches in his boots, who escorts crowds of women through the maze of traffic where Fifth Avenue, Broadway and Twenty-third Street meet. He has towered over the hurrying, dodging people for more than five years, and shoppers in that district know him by name and chat with him as they hurry by him in making the dangerous crossing.

"In your work through all this never ceasing rush," he was asked, "don't you find it a long day?"

"Well," replied the policeman of six feet four. "You see, I have quite a family and my life is made up of both long and short Days—but all of them are good Days."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The great area of high pressure that has occupied the lake region and northeastern districts for several days past has changed its position somewhat and now parallels the Atlantic Coast with its crest over New England. The storm of snow and rain in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, and the Carolinas has ceased, and fair, warmer weather now prevails in these districts as well as elsewhere east of the Mississippi. In Western districts the temperature has risen decidedly, and springlike conditions prevail from the Pacific Coast to the Mississippi River.

Scattered showers have fallen in Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, and generally throughout the Pacific Coast States and the Southwest. The weather for Monday will be fair and decidedly warmer in Atlantic Coast districts and the lower lake region, showery in the Mississippi Valley, and thence westward to the east slope of the Rocky Mountains. For Tuesday, rain is probable in the Atlantic Coast States, the Ohio Valley, and the lake region, with seasonal temperatures in all parts of the country.

The winds along the New England Coast will be light to fresh south; Middle Atlantic and South Atlantic Coast, light north, shifting to east and southeast; Gulf Coast, light to fresh south; Lake Michigan, fresh south.

Eastern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware—Partly cloudy and warmer Monday; Tuesday showers, light to fresh east to south winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1905.	1906.		1905.	1906.
3 A. M.	40	20	4 P. M.	50	39
6 A. M.	44	24	6 P. M.	52	36
9 A. M.	41	30	9 P. M.	50	34
12 M.	44	35	12 P. M.	46	33

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 31; for the corresponding date last year it was 47; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 39.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 27; at 8 P. M. it was 34; maximum temperature, 38 degrees at 3 P. M.; minimum, 24 degrees at 5:40 A. M.; humidity, 64 per cent. at 8 A. M., and 66 per cent. at 8 P. M.

RED CROSS EXTENDING; CREATES NEW BRANCHES

Plan to be Ready Hereafter for Any Great Calamity.

COUNTY AND CITY CENTRES

State Emergency Fund Will Receive Part of the Membership Fees That Are Now Solicited.

Officers of the New York State Branch of the Red Cross announced yesterday that they have begun to put into operation a plan to extend branches of that organization to every county and large city in this State. It is their intention to create a membership of persons who will contribute $1 a year or a life fee of $25, and of other members who will volunteer their services under Red Cross direction in great calamities. Of the fees so received one-half will go to the National Red Cross Endowment Fund and the other half to create a State reserve emergency fund and to pay the expenses of the local and State branches.

The plan has taken shape through the organization of a Central Executive Committee in New York State, consisting of William Cary Sanger of Utica, Secretary; Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper, Jacob H. Schiff, Cleveland H. Dodge, Howard Townsend, Douglas Robinson, John D. Crimmins, George C. Boldt, Oscar S. Straus, Alfred T. White, F. C. Gratwick of Buffalo, T. R. Proctor of Utica, and W. S. Andrews of Syracuse.

Branches have already been organized in New York, Kings, Westchester, and Oneida Counties, Albany, Rochester, Syracuse, and Islip Townships. It is announced that meetings of well-known men and women will be held shortly in other cities and counties to organize similar branches.

In explaining the plan of organization and its objects, William Chauncey Langdon, Secretary of the State Executive Committee, said:

"In the past the work of the Red Cross has been sorely hindered by the fact that in cases of sudden emergency, local or foreign, it had no large, permanent, and thoroughly organized body of members and no large reserve fund, through which it could bring relief instantly. Under the new plan of organization this essential machinery of a reserve fund, or trained workers, and of a body of interested supporters, will be a permanent feature and ready at one day's notice or less to bring instant relief and to set in motion a vast and effective agency to continue and extend the work."

Cleveland H. Dodge, Chairman of the State Executive Committee of the Red Cross, announces also that the new system of organization has already begun to prove its effectiveness in relief work for the famine-stricken residents of three provinces of Japan. Mr. Dodge says:

"The conditions in Japan are heartrending, but few are yet aware of the true situation under which thousands are starving, because the pride of the Japanese prevents them from complaining publicity. In three provinces alone 958,875 people were in dire want in January. Now the number is greater still. Even the little children are starving. Many checks are now reaching our Treasurer, Jacob H. Schiff, at our office, 500 Fifth Avenue."

GEN. BOLET-PERAZA DEAD.

Won Fame as a Fighter in Central America—Formerly a Minister.

Gen. Nicanor Bolet-Peraza died at 170 West Eighty-first Street yesterday. He was once the Venezuelan Minister at Washington. Half a century ago he was in the midst of the stormy scenes in South America, and he won his title of General in the Five Years' War in Venezuela. Since 1880 he had been living in New York, and only recently he served as Consul General for the Greater Republic of Central America. In South and Central America Gen. Bolet-Peraza was known as both statesman and fighter.

While he was representing his country at Washington the General worked with James G. Blaine on the Guiana difficulty between England and Venezuela. After that Gen. Bolet-Peraza and Mr. Blaine were close friends.

In 1859 Gen. Bolet-Peraza married the daughter of Gen. José Gregorio Monagas, famed as the man who freed the slaves in Venezuela and as President of that country from 1854 to 1858. After Gen. Monagas's death in prison and the fall of the Liberal Government a war broke out that lasted five years. This war was the cause of establishing in Venezuela a Federal Government similar to that of the United States, and in it Gen. Bolet-Peraza took an important part.

Later he became in turn Secretary of the Interior, Attorney General, and member of Congress at Caracas. In Congress he started a movement against President Guzman Blanco, and succeeded in having him driven from the country. In the revolution which broke out in the administration of Gen. Valera, Gen. Bolet-Peraza distinguished himself by his defense of the City of La Victoria, which, however, he was at last compelled to surrender to the enemies of the Government. Not long after this he came to New York.

Here his first work of importance was done while he was delegate to the Pan-American Conference. Then he was made Minister at Washington, but another revolution broke out in Venezuela, and he had to give up the portfolio because interests unfriendly to him came out on top in the fight. The Government of Salvador made him its Consul, and later, when Nicaragua, Salvador, and Honduras were united, he became representative in New York of the Greater Republic, and also its delegate to the Universal Postal Congress in Washington. He was a member of many scientific and literary societies. He was 68 years old.

FAMILY-LOVING HARLEMITES.

Sidewalk Merchants Know About It and Sell Them Many Things.

"That Englishwoman may know all she says she knows about 'husbands and sweethearts,'" said a Harlemite to a friend while waiting for an express at the Ninety-sixth Street Subway station yesterday, "but she don't look far enough for her facts.

"Any evening after the day's work, when all the male Harlemites are scurrying home, you may stop at a Harlem Subway exit and see for yourself their tender regard for their womenfolk.

"At the head of the exits you will find from one to five sidewalk merchants, their wares spread out to greet the eye of the homeward-bound people just as they poke their heads above earth. There are trays of daintily bound stalks of celery, baskets of strawberries and tomatoes, and bunches of violets.

"You will notice that the people who buy up the nice things and the pretty things are the fellows with little bald spots on their heads or with strands of gray over their weather-beaten eartops. And I'd be willing to wager with that clever Englishwoman that the majority of the purchases are not for the purchaser, but for one he calls, as did Tommy Traddles, 'the dearest girl in the world.'"

WHY ONLY 7,000?
Why is it that "6,000 to 7,000 citizens do the bulk of charitable giving in New York"? Because 6,000 to 7,000 receive the bulk of appeals. The already-givers are stormed with pleas, the not-yet-givers receive few or none. We want all to know that through A. I. C. P. they can promptly, effectually, sympathetically help those in distress because of accident, sickness, or death of bread-winner.

The little red schoolhouse stands as the symbol of education. On its initial-carved benches the present captains of industry got their first education—the only education a great many of them ever obtained.

To-day, advertising, as presented in the columns of THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, is educating millions of men and women, as well as growing children, in new and better ideas about the things which concern their every-day life. Sanitary appliances which make the home more healthy, sanitary clothing, food adulterations, silk dishonesty, mercerized cotton, facts that few men and women have learned in their schooldays or from books upon the subject, they learn involuntarily from the advertising in such a home publication as THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Dr. Albert Prescott Marble.

Dr. Albert Prescott Marble, Associate Superintendent of Public Schools of this city, died yesterday at his home, 48 West Ninety-fourth Street, after an illness of six weeks. His knee was injured by a fall and afterward a complication of diseases set in. He leaves a widow, a daughter, Katherine, and a brother, Dr. John O. Marble of Worcester, Mass.

Dr. Marble was one of the best-known secondary educators in this country. He was born sixty-eight years ago in Vassalborough, Me., and was graduated from Colby University. For twenty-five years he was Superintendent of Schools in Worcester, Mass. Thence he went to Omaha, Neb., where he took up similar work.

In 1896 he was called to this city and made Associate Superintendent of Schools, with charge of the high school work. He also served on the Board of Examiners and on the Committee on Appointments. He wrote extensively on educational subjects, two of his best known works being a treatise on the metric system and a brochure on the teaching of English. He was a frequent contributor to educational publications. He was elected to the Presidency of the National Educational Association at the Nashville convention in 1888.

Funeral services will be held at his late home to-night at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Robert S. MacArthur will officiate. The body will be taken to Worcester, where the funeral will be held on Wednesday morning at the home of his brother, 16 Murray Avenue.

Attorney General U. X. Gunter.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 25.—U. X. Gunter, Jr., Attorney General of South Carolina, died at 9 o'clock this morning at his father's home in Batesburg, this state, after an illness extending over nearly a year. About ten months ago Mr. Gunter was stricken with typhoid fever. He recovered his health sufficiently to leave his bed, but was soon stricken with a complication which confined him to his bed until the end. Mr. Gunter was private secretary to Gov. John Gary Evans in 1894, served a term as Assistant Attorney General, and was twice elected Attorney General. For years he was secretary of the Democratic State Executive Committee.

Mrs. Robert D. Wrenn.

BOSTON, March 25.—Mrs. Robert D. Wrenn, wife of the famous tennis player, died to-day at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Dabney.

Obituary Notes.

J. SCOTT of Spokane, Wash., died in Naples, Italy, yesterday of heart disease. Mr. Scott was 62 years old.

VICTOR BAUSENWEN, who is said to have been a Colonel in the service of the South during the civil war, was found dead in his room at Nosbacher's Hotel, Queens, yesterday. Heart trouble caused his death. He was about 75 years old.

MARCIA ROOSEVELT SCOVEL, the wife of E. Brooks Scovel, died at Menton, France, yesterday. She was the daughter of the late Judge James I. Roosevelt, who played a prominent part in the election of President Andrew Jackson, was a law partner of Peter Jay, a member of Congress, and a Judge of the Court of Appeals of New York.

HENRY A. NORRIS, one of the oldest residents of Orange, N. J., died Saturday after a long illness. Had he lived until Tuesday he would have been 84 years old. He was born in Orange, and, previous to his retirement several years ago, was a manufacturing hatter. He was the oldest Mason in the Oranges. He is survived by a daughter.

Mrs. ELVIRA A. CODDINGTON, wife of ex-Police Sergeant Theodore T. Coddington, died on Saturday at her home, 540 Hancock Street, Brooklyn. She was 64 years old, and was a daughter of the late William A. Cornell, an iron founder of Brooklyn. Before her marriage Mrs. Coddington was Assistant Principal of Public School No. 15. She is survived by her husband, two sons, and three daughters.

HORACE MOODIE, for many years manager for John Church & Co. at 141 Fifth Avenue, died on Saturday at his home, 3,600 Broadway, after a short illness. He was born in Pennsylvania forty-one years ago, and when quite a young man entered the piano trade. About ten years ago he came to this city and became connected with the firm of John Church & Co. His wife and two sons survive him. Funeral services will be held at his home this afternoon. The burial will be in Woodlawn.

JOHN WESLEY TAYNTOR, a former wholesale produce merchant and for many years President of the New York Milk Exchange, died on Saturday at his home, 242 West One Hundred and Thirty-second Street, after six weeks' illness, of a complication of diseases. He was born in Holliston, Mass., seventy-one years ago, came to New York when a young man, and entered the produce business. He was formerly President of the State Bank of Bainbridge, Georgia, where he had a Winter home. He leaves a widow, two sons, and two daughters. His funeral will be held this morning. The burial will be in Greenwood.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Price movements on the Stock Exchange last week were practically devoid of significance, for transactions were upon a greatly reduced scale and were largely due to the initiative of professional traders, who are ready to take quick profits on either side of the market, using rumors to as good a purpose as actual news. The fact that public purchases of securities, and even semi-professional interest in stocks, had dwindled to such an extent as to leave the stock market pliable in the hands of the traders does, however, reveal very clearly the widespread indisposition on the part of those who finally make and unmake markets to venture into commitments in either direction until the many vexing matters which are at present overhanging all financial markets are cleared up or at least take such shape that assumptions as to their ultimate outcome will not be, as might well be the case at present, based upon premises as shifting as the sands of the sea. The insecurity of deductions from the present knowledge of the situation in regard to certain of these factors is clearly revealed by the conflicting reports current during the week regarding the progress of the negotiations between the representatives of the nations in session at Algeciras, and of the discussion under way between the bituminous miners and operators at Indianapolis. In the first of these two matters, a speedy and amicable composition of which is expected to unloose money now hoarded by the great banking institutions of Europe at a moment when such a release would be of unquestioned benefit to our own heavily burdened money market, advices containing assurances of agreement were followed fast by further cables detailing complete disagreement, and under the influence of such vagrant information the markets of Europe swung back and forth most feverishly. In much the same fashion the reports reaching the Stock Exchange from Indianapolis served bulls and bears by turns as ammunition, a fate which did not fail to overtake the announcement of the New York Central's intention to ask its stockholders for $100,000,000 additional stock for the general purposes of the road. In the midst of these contrarieties it was not surprising that sober people were content to stand aside and to leave the making of temporary quotations to those within the four walls of the Stock Exchange, who, by reason of long practice and extreme agility, are able to turn to their purposes even a potpourri of news like that of last week.

Out of the general grist of information on the Moroccan situation and on the coal situation, however, there came certain pieces of news which are not without general interest in their bearing on the ultimate effect of these matters, irrrespective of the outcome itself. The isolation of Germany in her efforts to turn to her personal gain the delicate questions demanding settlement became even more clear, and while the progress of the conference toward settlement may be questioned, although it certainly seemed that such progress was made, it is apparent that the week's negotiations solidified still further the common understanding of the other conferrees than Germany to such an extent that in the event of the failure of the conference no conflict is apt to follow. The most important development in the bituminous situation was the division brought about at the end of the week between the operators in the Western Pennsylvania field and those in Indiana, Ohio, and Illinois. The conjunction of forces by the Pennsylvania operators and by the miners in an attempt to bring into effect the wage scale of 1903 was a matter of extreme importance to those industries, and they form a great percentage of the whole, which depend for fuel upon the mines of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. For the feeling was running so high at the close of the week that it was by no means extravagant to hope that if a disagreement came the bituminous mines of Pennsylvania would be unaffected. It was also reported that in the bituminous miners' treasury there is only some $300,000, a sum wholly insufficient for the purposes of an extended contest, especially so if there is to be such a curtailment of work in the anthracite regions as will cut off income from that source. The anthracite situation itself is changed only in that another conference is to be held between operators and miners.

Two interesting developments of the week attracted very little attention on the stock market, although this was by no means the case with banking houses. Chief in importance was the decision of Judge Humphrey of the United States District Court, practically to the effect that while corporations might be prosecuted, the individuals managing such corporations might avail themselves of that clause of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States which provides that no "person" in a criminal case shall be compelled to appear as a witness against himself. The second matter was the wholly salutary talk by President Roosevelt to the delegation of labor representatives which called upon him in Washington on Wednesday. Judge Humphrey's decision renders of doubtful service the minute investigations which the Bureau of Corporations has conducted into various industrials, including oil, steel, tobacco, and sugar companies, so far as the information gleaned was to have served as a basis for prosecution. It seems also to limit the Inter-State Commerce Commission's effectiveness in the same direction. On the other hand, the Supreme Court's decision in the tobacco case apparently points a way to achieve the desired results without the use of an inquisitorial bureau which has been only a little less disliked by ordinary citizens than by corporations themselves. President Roosevelt's plain words were reassuring in that they denoted an utter absence of the favoritism which, it is often urged, and at times with some show of justice, he has displayed in matters affecting labor and capital. It is perhaps not unfair to assume that Mr. Roosevelt took this occasion, when such important questions in the bituminous and anthracite fields are lying in the scales, to define his general attitude, which is one of the utmost fairness to all concerned.

Little change occurred in money market conditions, which form so large a part of financial consideration at present. The announcement of an engagement of a million and a quarter of gold in Berlin was received with little enthusiasm, since the belief that it would be compensated by shipments, of amounts equal to this and to any subsequent engagements, to Japan, was not discouraged. Demand sterling declined from the high point attained by it at the end of the previous week, following the engagement of gold made during that period, but at the close it was still well above the natural gold import point. Expectations of activity in money during the present week are based, of course, upon the approach of the April disbursements, which are always heavy, and are enlarged this year by the general prosperity, but it should be said that many of our most competent bankers are looking for easier money conditions following the completion of these April payments. It is, however, impossible to overlook the fact that the volume of business in the interior is probably without record, and therefore requires unusual supplies of money. In the year 1902, which was also a most active business year, our banks failed to add to surplus reserves during April, May, or June, and it is obvious that a similar demand must be met and exceeded at the present time if money is to grow easy. A favorable composition of the negotiations at Algeciras would, of course, work to such an end. In the meantime, as a result of the Sub-Treasury system, our banks are undergoing heavy and needless drains of money to the Government, the local Sub-Treasury alone having increased its holdings from $209,743,000 on July 1, 1905, to $220,547,000 at the close of last week. Such an intake of money is very largely in the nature of a penalty imposed upon active trade, since it represents the payment of duties upon heavy imports.

GOLD FROM GERMANY.

Last Week's Engagement in Berlin First Arranged in Several Years.

Last week's engagement of $1,250,000 gold in Berlin by the National City Bank is the largest amount of gold that has been imported from Germany in any year since 1898. This one engagement, in other words, exceeds the total imports of gold from that country in any one of the past eight years. In some of these years large exports of gold to Germany have occurred, but the return movement of the precious metal has been insignificant. Paris and London are the two sources from which comes most of the gold imported to the United States by way of the Atlantic, and only in exceptional years has Germany added much to our stock.

Just what the interchange of gold between Germany and the United States has been is shown in the following table, which covers the imports and the exports since 1895:

GOLD IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

	Imports from Germany.	Exports to Germany
*1906	†$1,250,000	$8,040
1905	190	2,628,962
1904	11,111	878,049
1903	....	6,136,146
1902	15	8,604,368
1901	756,332	8,408,166
1900	12,946	4,768,189
1899	190,096	3,018,000
1898	8,428,050	1,260,840
1897	3,554,697	18,478,082
1896	119,016	29,020,672
1895	1,376,762	15,147,637

†Engaged; not yet received.

In 1898, when we imported over $8,000,000 from Germany, the movements of exchange were markedly in favor of this country. During that year we imported from Europe $74,906,469 gold and exported only $5,721,484. This heavy movement in our favor may perhaps be regarded as a reaction following the heavy outflow of gold from this country which occurred in 1896 owing to the silver agitation of that year. During the twelve months in which occurred the memorable political struggle between free silver and the gold standard there was shipped from the United States to Europe gold to the amount of $97,880,171, while only $15,585,045 was imported. The following year we imported $60,304,316 from Europe and exported $34,124,150. This change in our favor, as already shown, was much more marked in 1898. Since that year our imports of gold from Germany have been negligible, though the exports to that country have on the average shown no reduction.

RUSSIA AFTER GRAIN TRADE.

Plans New German Route to Overcome Our Competition.

Russia is reaching out for closer connections with the German grain market, in which her favored geographical position has not sufficed to overcome American competition. To this end, it is proposed to build a new shipping route, by way of the Valley of the Danube, which will constitute an almost direct connection between the wheat-growing provinces of Southern Russia and the centre of German population. This route has the double advantage of saving haul, thereby adding to the profits of the Russian State railways, and at the same time landing the grain where it can be marketed to greater advantage than at the seaports or the northeastern frontier. The Russian railways, according to the plan, will transport the grain to Reni, on the Danube, where it is proposed to build immense elevators, docks, and all the improved shipping facilities that our lake-carrying trade has developed. The project has advanced as far as the opening of negotiations between the representatives of the Russian South-West Railway and the Danube Steamshipping Company. Another step toward forestalling American competition has been taken by the Government on the northern grain routes, with the idea of improving transportation facilities between Russian and German Baltic ports. Russian engineers are at work at Königsberg, where the Russian and German railways meet, devising means for the through transportation of Russian goods, which must now be transferred to German cars at the meeting point of the two systems, because of the difference in the railway gauges of the two countries.

The loss, or even a curtailment, of our grain trade with Germany would be a serious matter. Germany is our second best grain market in Europe. During 1900, our record corn export year, when 192,519,785 bushels went to Europe, Germany's quota was 46,256,978 bushels. Wheat exports reached their greatest total in 1902. In that year Germany took 19,785,674 bushels out of the 140,338,984 bushels sent to Europe.

INDUSTRIAL EARNINGS

Violent Fluctuations Both in Gross Business and Net Earnings

FEW EXCEPTIONS TO RULE

Ups and Downs of Car Building—Remarkable Recovery in Steel Corporation's Profits.

The recent annual report of the United States Steel Corporation brought into strong relief the fact, so often referred to in comments on the steel trade, that the fortunes of iron and steel companies are exposed to violent fluctuations. During this past year the prosperity of the steel trade was rising, and the United States Steel Corporation profited abundantly by the recovery from the depression which two years previously had handicapped the Steel Trust almost to the point of forcing a suspension of the dividends on its preferred stock.

An equally striking, though less important, example of the same uncertainty in a different but closely allied branch of trade was afforded by the publication a short time ago of the annual report of the Pressed Steel Car Company. From total sales of $4,498,268 in 1904 that company's business increased in 1905 to $19,357,862, and its profits, which in 1904 were less than nothing, amounted the following year to 5.71 per cent. of its total sales. These two examples illustrate very forcibly the uncertainty of industrial investment. Therein lies the strongest argument against them, as well as from another point of view, the strongest argument in their favor. Few of them show the stability in earnings so grateful to the careful investors, but, on the other hand, most of them show remarkable powers of recuperation from periods of depression.

The United States Steel Corporation formed in 1901 with its billion dollars and more of capital was the fitting culmination of a three years' period of industrial combinations of all kinds. It was practically the last of the great combinations and in its short existence it has passed from a period of great prosperity to one of severe depression only to experience within two years another period of prosperity in some respects greater than that which favored the company during the first two years.

The record of the United States Steel Corporation is all the more interesting when compared with that of other industrial companies. Wide variations in earnings are common to most of them but there are some exceptions to this rule which are noteworthy. It is very interesting to examine the earnings of the industrials from the point of view of the relation between their gross business and the net profit shown from year to year. The figures presented here show this relation between gross and net earnings for half a dozen industrial corporations covering widely different fields of manufacture. In the volume of its business the United States Steel Corporation dwarfs all the rest, but its showing, nevertheless, is scarcely more interesting than that of some of the smaller companies.

The record of the newer companies is given from the beginning of their first full fiscal year and in the case of the older companies the record is carried back to 1902 or further. The gross receipts or sales and the net earnings together with the percentage of net earnings to sales are shown in the following tables:

*Loss.

The forms of accounting used by the several companies differ considerably. Net earnings in some cases are computed after allowance has been made for certain fixed charges, as in the case of the Steel Corporation, while in others the net profit is in effect the net manufacturing profit. The differences in this respect, however, are not vital for the purposes of this article, which is intended not so much to illustrate the varying earning power of the several companies compared with each other as to show to what extent their individual profits fluctuate from year to year.

The two extremes supplied by this list are the Pressed Steel Car Company on one hand and the National Biscuit Company on the other. The most violent fluctuations were those experienced by the car building company, and the greatest stability of earnings is shown by the company which manufactures crackers. The figures given indicate very clearly the relative position of the two companies in the matter of earnings. A noteworthy feature of the National Biscuit's showing is the steady increase in sales in every year except last year. This decrease, moreover, was offset by a higher percentage of profit, so that the record of net earnings shows uninterrupted increases from one year to another.

The Pressed Steel Car, on the other hand, has experienced very wide fluctuations not only in the volume of its business, but also in the percentage of its profits. In 1899, the year it was established, the company did a gross business of a little over $14,000,000, and its net earnings for that year amounted to nearly 16 per cent. of its sales. The volume of business increased and the percentage of profit decreased for several years, and then both volume of business and percentage of profit declined together. The turning point was not reached until the company for a whole year had conducted its business at an actual loss, amounting to more than $700,000 on sales of less than $4,500,000. With the volume of business which it handled last year the company's earnings would have been comfortably large had the percentage of earnings realized in 1899 governed last year's business. This percentage, however, after declining from 15.85 to nothing, recovered in 1905 only to 5.71 per cent.

The profits of the American Woolen Company are relatively staple, while its sales have increased year after year. The United States Rubber Company, owing largely to advances in the price of its products, showed for 1905 net profits equal to 15.70 per cent. of its sales. In that year, however, its sales were smaller than in 1904, when the percentage of profit was only 8.47.

General Electric's showing is a peculiarly interesting one in some respects. It, too, has been subject to wide fluctuations in the percentage of profit, although the volume of its sales increased each year with the exception of 1905. Since 1903, however, when its profits amounted to 27.89 per cent. of its sales, the percentage has steadily declined. Last year the General Electric did less business than the year before, and at a smaller profit than in either of the preceding years. It is to be noted, however, that the annual reports in this case are made for the fiscal years ended Jan. 31, so that the period represented is nearly a full year behind that covered by the corporations which, like the Steel Corporation, report for the calendar year. The General Electric's report for the year ended Jan. 31, 1906, has not yet been published.

TOLD ROUND THE TICKER.

B. F. YOAKUM had so far regained his strength within three days after the operation for appendicitis, to which he submitted on Tuesday last, that he was able on Friday to receive some of his intimate friends as well as to resume his perusal of the newspapers. Mr. Yoakum is one of the men whose personal energy and activity make it very difficult for them to forego long the daily accounts of the activities of others.

FRANK A. VANDERLIP, as Vice Chairman of the special committee recently appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to investigate the country's currency system and to recommend a comprehensive plan for its improvement, is to be congratulated, his friends feel, upon the activity which the committee has displayed in taking up the questions which were referred to it by the Chamber of Commerce. Wall Street is inclined to the view that the activity of the present committee is all the more noteworthy because of the seemingly perfunctory manner in which the currency question has been handled in the past by some of those who undertook to suggest improvements in our monetary system.

THE NATIONAL CITY BANK had unwittingly something to do, perhaps, with the crop of rumor-made fatalities which inundated Wall Street last Monday. When the Street was fairly awash with stories of death or misfortune to one figure after another, with James Speyer dead, Schwab dead or dying, and Rockefeller crazy or at death's door, the flag on the City Bank flapping at half-mast in the storm was taken as confirmatory evidence. Those who took time and trouble to inquire learned that the flag was flying because of the death of S. O. Howe, Treasurer of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, which has offices in the bank's building.

Col. A. E. STEVENS, who was admitted to special partnership in the Stock Exchange house of Lewis & Vredenberg, is the head of the Stevens family of Castle Point, Hoboken. He is a lawyer, and has been a figure of considerable prominence in Hudson County politics. W. Lewis Stevens, who becomes a general partner in the firm at the same time, is the son of Col. Stevens and a cousin of Mr. Lewis, into whose family the Colonel married. The Lewis family are directly descended from Martha Washington, and excepting the descendants of Gen. Robert E. Lee, have the largest collection of the personal relics of Washington.

J. S. BACHE is about to swell the long list of Wall Street men who have chosen this early season to take a rest. He sails this week to join Mrs. Bache in London. W. J. Wollman, of J. S. Bache & Co., preceded the head of the firm out of town. He is now in old Mexico.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Metal Market Reported Bare of Copper —Amalgamated's Dividend.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES

BOSTON, March 24.—With the market pretty well cleaned up of copper and manufacturers hard put to secure needed supplies, mine owners see the day of 20 cents approaching. In some quarters it is thought that the unrefined metal is being hoarded; others have it that there are not refineries enough; at all events, manufacturers are unable to obtain enough for their needs, and must come into the market on the market's terms. It is even said that the brass turned out to-day contains less copper than was ever before known, so great is the scarcity.

Another reason for the strength of the copper-share market is the underlying confidence that the Amalgamated dividend will be raised to 2 per cent. Whether this will come next quarter is, of course, not predicted, but operators believe that it cannot be more than six months away. When this increase takes place it will operate as a lever to lift the entire group.

It is also pointed out that Utah and Arizona have come to the front since the last copper boom, and furthermore that Boston brokers, instead of a local and New York clientele, now receive orders daily from the Far West and South, in fact from the entire country, showing that for the first time in history copper as a metal and copper share speculation have taken their proper stand alongside of iron. The industry is recognized as never before as legitimate.

Lake stocks are pretty sure to experience an uplift because of the Michigan tax law. The quinquennial assessment takes place May 1. Five years ago Houghton County had something like $140,000,000 in copper shares to tax; this year the market values total much less, and the rate about to be fixed is to stand until 1911.

Tamarack's annual report shows more ore treated and an increase of 862,113 pounds of fine copper produced. The average cost is 13.37 cents, as against 12.98 cents in 1904, due to the lower grade of the deep copper.

Gossip has it that the Winona mine is to be taken over by the St. Mary's Mineral Land Company.

President Fay of Mayflower reports to the stockholders that further exploration is inadvisable, and operations have been stopped.

Very rich rock has been encountered in the Centennial mine.

Mr. Cole's entry into the Utah camp is, as hinted last week, likely to have widespread results. A Salt Lake letter writer hazards the guess that he and his friends are likely to combine the Silver King, Daly-West, Daly-Judge, Ontario, Daly, Keith-Kearns, Grand Central, Victoria, and Mammoth, and possibly also the Columbus Consolidated.

Boston Consolidated has been mentioned of late as a factor in some merger, but reports from the property itself are of the most sanguine nature. Its sulphide shipments alone are reckoned worth $3 a share.

News came from Butte on Thursday that John D. Ryan had bought the Alice group of mines, paying $1,000,000, and will add them to the Butte Coalition property.

North Butte has just received a new hoister that will work to a depth of 3,500 feet.

AN EXCELLENT WEEK FOR BRITISH TRADE

Reports as a Rule Very Favorable to Producers and Sellers.

GOOD DEMAND FOR COTTON

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, March 25.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"Reports from business and industrial centres for last week as a rule are very favorable to producers and sellers.

"Wheat and flour are firmer on a better demand, with stronger markets abroad. Maize and barley are dearer. Oats are easy. Oil and oil seeds are dearer.

"The cotton trade continues good. The raw material is higher, but spinners are able to sell at proportionate advances. In goods all branches have done well, business from China being a feature.

"For home grown wool prices are up to the record for some years past. The London sales of colonial wool closed with values on the average 10 per cent. better. Woolens are active, but manufacturers are hampered by the rise in wool.

"Pig iron makers report good business generally, although in some districts quotations have had to be reduced. The warrant market has declined on realizations, and the absence of speculative support. Finished products continue in good request. Copper and tin have been strong, the prices realized in each case being the highest for a number of years. Spelter is steady. Lead is easy."

PARIS MARKETS STRONG.

High Prices for Spanish Rails and for Government Bonds.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

PARIS, March 25.—Hesitation prevailed on the Bourse early last week in the absence of definite information in regard to the Algeciras Conference, but the undertone was strong except in the South American department. Later the market gradually became firmer, the optimistic tone being reflected in bank stocks, as it is believed that several banking institutions are only awaiting a favorable opportunity to issue new securities to the public with good profit to themselves.

Spanish rails are still advancing and have recorded the highest prices for many years.

Home and foreign Government bonds are strong, but have so far advanced that they seem to offer little attraction to investors at the present level.

The firmness of Russian industrials is attributed to bear covering, for disquieting rumors are afloat owing to the reported interference of the police with the elections at Moscow and other centres, where a renewal of rioting is feared.

Rio Tintos are heavy, notwithstanding the advance in copper, it being whispered that the impending dividend will be smaller than has been expected.

Gold mines are stagnant and weak. De Beers are exceptionally firm on the good prospects of the diamond industry.

APATHY ON BERLIN BOERSE.

Is Likely to Continue Until the Morocco Problem Is Settled.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, March 25.—The determining factor in the tone of the Boerse last week was the Morocco question. The continued uncertainty had a depressing influence both on regular operators and the general public, who showed little inclination to occupy themselves with Boerse transactions. The longer a settlement is delayed at Algeciras the greater will be the apathy of the Boerse and the more marked the absence of buoyancy.

At the last meeting of the Central Committee of the Imperial Bank the President referred to the unsettled political situation as accounting for the continuance of the present high official discount rate, and held out no prospect of any reduction in the immediate future. Foreign bills of exchange are still high, and at the end of the current month the payment of dividends and coupons will make great demands on the money market.

Owing to the strained political situation the amounts from foreign countries, especially France, which have been placed upon the German market have been inconsiderable, although consignments of gold from Russia, amounting at present to 15,000,000 marks, have been received for the strengthening of Russian credit and further and larger consignments from the same country are expected.

The expansion of German foreign commerce is illustrated by the fact that Germany now controls thirteen foreign banks, with sixty branches, representing a capital of upward of 100,000,000 marks. In 1903 there were in foreign countries only six German banks, with thirty-two branches.

ENGLISH DEMAND FOR COTTON.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, March 25.—The cotton market was strong all last week. The American product was in strong demand, and sales were interfered with somewhat by the difficulty of obtaining fine, serviceable spinning qualities at relatively reasonable figures. The market hardened steadily, quotations advancing every day, until yesterday middling was 0.21d. higher, at 6.05d., being the highest price since the end of January. The desire to buy increased as soon as the census report was issued and a bull campaign in futures was begun.

The Times in its financial supplement expresses the view that there is not much sense in this bull campaign. It says:

"All things considered, cotton at over 6d. at the end of March, with stock in and afloat for Liverpool of over 1,100,000 bales American, does not seem attractive for speculative purchase, especially when it is remembered that there are 1,280,000 bales lying in American ports and interior towns, against 1,200,000 last year and only 818,000 two years ago.

"It is true that the preparations for the next American crop have so far made small progress, owing to the severe weather, but normal weather from now on will easily make good this slight disadvantage, if such it be."

The week's import of cotton was 111,000 bales, including 74,000 American. Spinners' takings were 96,000 bales, and re-exports 9,300. The quantity afloat is 192,000 bales, including 162,000 American. The world's visible supply is 3,727,000, including 3,204,000 American. Last year it was 3,421,000, including 2,963,000 American. Two years ago it was 2,806,000, including 2,138,000 American.

In addition to the foregoing total there are 955,000 bales at Bombay, against 755,000 a year ago.

OUR TRADE WITH CANADA.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Trade of the United States with Canada in the fiscal year 1905 aggregated $202,999,213, against $89,429,096 in 1895, according to the bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor.

It shows that in the twenty years from 1875 to 1895 our trade with Canada increased $27,000,000, and from 1895 to 1905 it increased $114,000,000. The larger portion of this growth has been on the export side. The imports increased from $27,367,615 in 1875 to $62,459,632 in 1905, and exports advanced from $35,547,219 in 1875 to $140,529,581 in 1905.

"This rapid growth in trade relations with Canada," says the bulletin, "is especially interesting, in view of the varying conditions to which commerce with Canada has been subjected. During the period from 1855 to 1866 a reciprocity treaty was in force between Canada and the United States, but in the latter year it was terminated, so that commerce between the two countries was unaffected by special trade arrangements until April, 1897, when the United States was placed at a slight disadvantage as compared with the United Kingdom, products from that country entering the Dominion of Canada being admitted by special arrangement at a reduction of 12½ per cent. on the tariff levied on imports from other countries. On Aug. 1, 1898, the reduction in favor of British products was increased to 25 per cent., and on July 1, 1900, was still further increased to 33 1-3 per cent. Despite these advantages in favor of goods entering Canada from the United Kingdom, exports to Canada from that country grew from $29,743,712 in 1897 to $59,606,556 in 1904, while exports to Canada from the United States grew from $64,928,821 in 1897 to $140,529,581 in 1905.

The percentage of imports into Canada from the United States in 1905 was 60.6 per cent., and from the United Kingdom 24 per cent.

MANCHURIA RICH IN COAL.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The coal mines of Manchuria are described by the Belgian Consul at Tien-tsin. The Russians did not achieve success in the mines they opened at Yentai, and abandoned them in favor of mines at Fu-chung, situated east of Mukden, on the Hung-Ho, which Mr. Tanaka, Director of the Bureau of Mines at Tokio, states are very rich in coal. Their value has been estimated at $150,000,000 to $250,000,000.

From borings carried out by the Japanese, it appears that in one part of the Fu-chung district the layers of coal are 100 feet thick and of good quality. A sample of inferior Manchurian coal recently analyzed at Tokio was declared to be superior to the first quality Japanese coal.

Meetings and Elections.

METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Notice of Annual Election of Directors.

Notice is hereby given that the annual election of Directors of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for the year 1906 will be held at the home office of the Company, No. 1 Madison Av., New York City, at 12 o'clock noon, on the 10th day of April, 1906.

Notice is also given that the charter of the Company permits the Board of Directors to extend the right of voting at elections for members of the Board of Directors to any class or classes of its policy holders, under such regulations as the Board may prescribe, upon obtaining the approval of the Superintendent of Insurance thereto in writing, and that pursuant to this amendment the Board of Directors on April 22, 1902, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, Section 1, That every policy holder in this Company whose policy shall have been in force for the full term of one year before, and shall be in force at the time of any annual meeting for the election of Directors, shall have the right of voting for members of the Board of Directors, provided that such policy holder or proxy shall, not more than twenty nor less than ten days before the day of such election, file with the Secretary of this Company a written notice of intention to so vote at such annual election, and if by proxy a copy thereof."

This resolution has been approved in writing by the Superintendent of Insurance, and all policy holders of the Company who come within the class designated in said resolution will therefore be entitled to vote at said election upon complying with the conditions of said resolution.

JAMES S. ROBERTS, Secretary.

Dated March 21, 1906.
